

'Nixon use of Hughes funds' under probe

By JOHN M. CREWDSON
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The special Watergate prosecutor and the Internal Revenue Service are jointly conducting what sources describe as an intensive, "super-secret" investigation into the handling of a $100,000 cash payment from Howard Hughes that allegedly was used by members of President Nixon's family and White House staff.

According to several well-placed sources, the inquiry is focusing on possible campaign finance and income-tax violations involving several persons, including Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo, the President's long-time business associate and friend, who received the money from a Hughes employee in 1969 and 1970.

Agents of the IRS, working with aides to Leon A. Jaworski, the special prosecutor, have reportedly obtained evidence from the Senate Watergate Committee that $23,500 in $100 bills — the same denominations in which the Hughes money was delivered to Rebozo — was passed through Rebozo's bank in Key Biscayne, Fla., to pay for improvements to the President's home in Key Biscayne.

One source said that any violation of the federal campaign finance laws uncovered in the investigation would be prosecuted by Jaworski's office and that income tax violations would be referred to the Justice Department's tax division.

The senate Watergate committee's investigation determined that Rebozo filed no federal gift tax declaration between 1969 and 1972, the period in which he authorized the expenditure of more than $30,000 on Nixon's behalf.

The committee and the special prosecutor have also taken testimony alleging that Rebozo had conceded giving or lending part of the $100,000 received from Hughes to F. Donald and Edward Nixon, the President's brothers, and to Rose Mary Woods, his personal secretary.

All three have denied receiving any of the funds, and the President and Rebozo have insisted that the money was kept unused in a bank vault for three years before being returned to a Hughes representative in June, 1973.

documentation of its investigation to Jaworski and a group of about a half dozen revenue service agents working on the case.

Although the IRS began an administrative inquiry in 1971 into the circumstances surrounding the Hughes payment, which Rebozo has described as a campaign contribution, it was not until May 1973 that the banker was first interviewed about his role in the matter.

Five months later, John Bartlett, one of the IRS agents then working on the case, reportedly told Rebozo's lawyer that the agency had found no evidence contradicting Rebozo's contention that the Hughes money had remained untouched before being returned.

The sources emphasized that the ongoing investigation was a renewed effort by the agency, in conjunction with the prosecutors. One government official declined to say

Cyprus talks postponed; accord near Turkish fighting reported over

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Greece and Turkey adjourned their Cyprus peace talks Saturday after coming close to a compromise on solving the island's crisis. They planned to meet again this morning.

United Nations officials on the Mediterranean island said Turkish military activity there had stopped.

The foreign ministers of Greece and Turkey, along with British delegates and an American observer, had hoped to meet in a final plenary session Saturday night. But this was postponed until this morning.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger took calculated risks trying to end Cyprus crisis. Story on Page A-5.

ing "in order to give the experts time to continue their work," a British delegation spokesman said.

The spokesman said no crisis in the talks had developed, but the experts were plodding through the difficult task of putting together the final statement in English and translating it into French.

"Even if you are in basic agreement about a communique, picking and choosing the right words is extremely difficult," the spokesman said.

George Mavros, the Greek foreign minister, said the difficulties were not in Geneva but on Cyprus. He did not elaborate.

Diplomatic sources said the emerging accord dealt primarily with means for reinforcing Monday's cease-fire on the Mediterranean island and opens the way for wider talks on the political future of Cyprus.

In New York, the United Nations Security Council met Saturday to hear a complaint from Cyprus of "flagrant violation of the cease-fire by Turkey."

But on the advice of the United States and Britain, the council adjourned without acting to await developments in Geneva. The council did not set a date for its next session.

In Athens, Greek government spokesman Panagiotis Lambreas told a news briefing Saturday that United States intervention at Geneva was "favorable to Greece."

He said Washington's ambassador in Athens, Henry Tasca, handed Premier Constantine Karamanlis a note from President Nixon

Accord pounded out in carpenters' strike

A tentative agreement ending the 27-day strike by Southern California carpenters that crippled the Southland's $1-billion construction industry was hammered out early Saturday after an all-night negotiating session.

Details of the proposed three-year contract will not be released until both unions and management have voted on it, according to Dan Peterson, spokesman for the Associated General Contractors.

Members of the more than 50 carpenters' unions, represented by the Southern California Conference of Carpenters, will vote Tuesday. Management has not set a date for considering the contract, Peterson said.

More than 40,000 carpenters and 5,000 cement masons walked off their jobs July 1 in an attempt to win a 25 per cent pay boost. Carpenters now earn $9.46 an hour in wages and fringe benefits. The proposed contract covers both carpenters and cement masons.

The unions reportedly had earlier rejected a proposed three-year contract giving a $2.90-an-hour wage hike plus fringe benefits.

Peterson said Saturday's tentative settlement was agreed on shortly after midnight after 14 hours of bargaining at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Los Angeles.

Impeachment of Nixon voted by House panel

First article adopted, 27-11

By GIL BAILEY
Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — The House Judiciary Committee with six Republicans joining 21 Democrats Saturday approved the first of what may be several impeachment articles against President Nixon.

The vote insured a full House impeachment debate and vote, probably starting in mid-August, the first such debate and vote in more than 100 years and the second such debate and vote on the impeachment of a president in history.

The article charges, "in his conduct of the Office of President of the United States, Richard M. Nixon, in violation of his constitutional oath faithfully to execute the Office of President of the United States and, to the best of his ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States, and in violation of his constitutional duty to take care that the laws be faithfully executed, has prevented, obstructed and impeded the administration of justice ..."

President Nixon confident House will reject impeachment. Other related stories, Pages A-6,7.

IT CONCLUDES: "Wherefore Richard M. Nixon, by such conduct, warrants impeachment and trial, and removal from office."

In between the charge and the conclusion are nine paragraphs, or subsections, charging the President with such acts as "making or causing to be made false or misleading statements to lawfully authorized investigative officials ... 'To 'making false or misleading' public statements ..."

But basically this article charges the President with obstruction of justice arising out of the Watergate burglary of the Democratic National Committee headquarters on June 17, 1972.

The 27 to 11 vote of the House committee came after four days of nationally televised debate, seven weeks of evidentiary hearings and a $1.5 million-plus investigation.

The House committee was assigned the job of conducting an impeachment investigation soon after the Oct. 20, 1973 firing of Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox and the resignations of Atty. Gen. Elliott Richardson

REINECKE BUYS PAPER BEFORE ENTERING COURT

Reinecke convicted of perjury, will appeal

By DONALD SANDERS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke was convicted of perjury Saturday for his testimony about a financial commitment by ITT to the 1972 Republican National Convention.

Reinecke, 50, described his trial as a gross miscarriage of justice and said he would appeal.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker directed him to appear at a local probation office Monday morning for a presentencing interview. No date was set for sentencing.

The maximum penalty on the single count of the indictment is five years in prison and a fine of $2,000.

Reinecke showed no emotion when foreman Clayton D. Roth announced the jury's verdict, but Mrs. Reinecke cried out, "Oh, my God! No! No, he's not guilty!"

She and the three Reinecke children, who had been present throughout the 12 days of the trial, wept over the verdict.

Several sections of the California Government Code exclude from office people convicted of certain offenses, but an opinion on Reinecke would probably be required from the state attorney general. Reinecke's term expires at the end of the year.

was a heavy favorite to win the Republican nomination for governor, but he was defeated by Houston I. Flournoy last June 4.

The jury of six men and six women began its deliberations Friday afternoon and spent nearly eight hours at the task before coming back with a verdict shortly after noon. Twice previously the jurors had returned to the courtroom to ask for additional instruc-

Arsenal theft reward

Sometime between 4 and 9 p.m. last July 4, a team of "super-professional" criminals broke into the National Guard Armory across from the Compton City Hall and committed a burglary of chilling implications.

Seven M79 machine guns,

The loss of the hardware was estimated at almost $23,000, but police and FBI agents who quickly entered the case considered this of secondary importance. Foremost in their minds was the possibility of the armament winding up in the hands of a paramilitary terrorist group.

Despite an exhaustive investigation, police and FBI men assigned to the case have been unable to uncover any leads.

Secret Witness will pay $500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the burglars.

(Selected summaries of other Secret Witness cases in which rewards of specified amounts are offered will be found on Page A-14.)

96 M16 rifles, eight grenade launchers, 156 gas and smoke grenades, 75 gas masks, and more than 4,000 rounds of ammunition were taken—enough weaponry, as National Guard officials noted bleakly, "to completely equip an Army combat unit."

Reagan: Tragic event for Ed

By EVANS WITT

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Reagan said Saturday that the perjury conviction of Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke was a "tragic event."

State Controller Houston Flournoy, who defeated Reinecke in the June primary for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, said he was saddened by the verdict of the federal jury in Washington, D.C.

"This is a tragic event for Ed Reinecke," Reagan said. "I personally have always had confidence in his integrity and feel that he did not intentionally do wrong."

Reagan said he would have no comment on Reinecke's tenure in office until he has had a chance to talk to Reinecke and his attorneys.

Reinecke was found guilty Saturday of lying to a U.S. Senate committee about his discussions with former U.S. Atty. Gen. John Mitchell concerning an ITT financial commitment to the 1972 GOP convention planned for San Diego.

Flournoy said, "Ed Reinecke is a friend, and so I am saddened by all that he and his family have had to face in the past few months."

"I sincerely hope that what we have witnessed here is not a reflection of other events in these trying times, a reflection which might cause one man to be treated differently because of what others may have done or have been accused of doing," he said. "That would be a warping of American justice that would only add to the tragedy."

"However, I'm sure the jury followed the dictates of its conscience based on the material presented."

A spokesman for Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr., the Democratic candidate for governor, said Brown would have no comment on the conviction.

Former White House aide and former Reinecke campaign manager Lyn Nofziger said he did not believe that Reinecke deliberately lied.

"I'm very sorry about it. I still don't think it was deliberate," he said.

Nofziger, who quit the Reinecke campaign before the election, disagreed with a defense contention that the perjury charge was a plot but said that Reinecke's testimony in 1971 was badly handled.

"I think it was badly handled by the White House — asking him to appear on such short notice, and I think it was badly handled by the Reinecke staff, agreeing to such short notice," he said.

Judy Lowry swapped her electric sewing machine for a treadle model when she and her husband moved to a 25-acre plot near Cambridge, N.Y., three years ago.

Their handmade, one-room home is without electricity or indoor plumbing. But both say they're "committed to this life forever."

"When we first moved here, we lived in a shack," said Judy, 28, whose husband Charles graduated from Harvard and earned a Ph.D. in molecular biology from the University of Wisconsin. "Well, it was more of a lean-to... It had a dirt floor and we cooked over a camp stove while we were building the big house."

Now Judy's cooking is done on a cast iron, wood-burning stove, although she resorts to gas in the summer.

The couple moved to the country from St. Louis, Mo., because Charles wanted to carry on his research in a secluded setting. But they found, after living there a while, Lowry said, that "it seems like really living."

Pioneer

President Nixon Saturday presented the Medal of Freedom to Dr. Charles Le Roy Lowman, 94-year-old Los Angeles physician who was described as a "pioneer in medicine" and a great humanitarian.

The presentation was made at the Western White House in San Clemente and Lowman became the sixth recipient of the medal in the field of medicine.

The medal was established by President Kennedy in 1963 to honor those who have contributed to the security or national interest of the United States, world peace or cultural endeavors.

Dr. Lowman was named "Doctor of the Century" by the Los Angeles County Medical Association in 1971. He was a pioneer in developing orthopedic techniques, including those for treating polio victims, and in 1927 he helped enact state legislation to provide teachers for crippled children confined to home or hospitals.

He founded the Orthopedic Hospital of Los Angeles in 1919, treating crippled children "regardless of race, religion or ability to pay."

Frightened

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said Saturday in Los Angeles that federal legislation is needed to protect the privacy of the individual from computer data banks and guard against "future and worse Watergates."

"Watergate was possible in part because of the technological developments of the last two decades," Cranston said during a hearing on individual privacy. "The potential for invasion of individual privacy, and for control over the individual is still there. We have no guarantee that future governments will not abuse that potential."

Cranston said federal legislation is needed "now to control these monstrous information machines which are taking us to the edge of George Orwell's frightening '1984' and Big Brother government."

Prospecting

Leo Mark Anthony has no trouble getting his students to listen. But then his topic is how to find gold.

"There is tremendous interest in prospecting now," he says in Anchorage.

Why? Gold was selling at $149.30 an ounce in New York on Friday, and Anthony says it's likely to climb to about $200 an ounce within a year. For years the price had been held by law at $35 an ounce.

He says prospectors "invest vast amounts of hard work and energy. Most get nothing, or maybe a few flakes of gold. But occasionally there is an important find. Hope, that is the big thing."

A few weeks ago his teaching won him the National Association of Geology Teachers outstanding earth-science teaching award for his 22 years in classrooms from Ketchikan to Barrow.

Bitter

Frank Isaac, a Navajo who watched when the U.S. flag was raised on Iowa Jima in 1945, says his pride has turned into disappointment and bitterness.

"We Navajos fought for our country, we helped win the war against Japan. Now our sons have also fought for our country. And how are we treated? On my reservation, 70 per cent of the veterans are unemployed," he said.

Isaac, 51, was one of several dozen Navajo veterans of four U.S. wars who gathered at the Marine Memorial in Washington on Friday to pray in their native tongue and protest what they say is discriminatory treatment of Vietnam-era Indian veterans.

Nominee

Rufus L. Edmisten, who served as deputy counsel of the Senate Watergate Committee, Saturday won the Democratic nomination for attorney general of North Carolina.

A Boone, N.C., native and long-time aide to Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., Edmisten was chosen over seven others by the Democratic state executive committee in Raleigh. His expected Republican opponent in the Nov. 5 general election is James H. Carson Jr., a former Court of Appeals judge.

Generalismo

Generalissimo Francisco Franco, hospitalized for a circulatory ailment more than two weeks ago, is recovering normally, his doctors said Saturday in Madrid. Doctors and family had said earlier that Franco, 81, would be able to leave the hospital sometime this weekend.

Franco was originally hospitalized for phlebitis, an inflammation of the veins, in his right thigh. A relapse forced him temporarily to turn over his powers as chief of state to his designated successor, Prince Juan Carlos, 36.

Bucher

Lloyd Bucher, commander of USS Pueblo when it was seized by North Korean gunboats in 1968, said Saturday in Arkadelphia, Ark., that he still would welcome a court-martial hearing to determine all the factors leading to the capture.

Bucher, who retired from the Navy in 1973 after 27 years, spoke to the first annual Ouachita Baptist University Festival Showcase.

"I would still like the opportunity for a court-martial to arise to enable this country to see the actual ramifications of the Pueblo and just who made all the wrong decisions," he said during a question-answer session. But he added: "I don't believe it will ever happen, however, since the federal government is not anxious to expose our ills or the rest of the world to see."

Bucher said he was on a lecture tour to discuss what occurred before, during and after the 11-month imprisonment of the Pueblo's crew.

Time running out, officials warned

4 holed up cons now hostages

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Four of the seven convicts barricaded in a prison library since Wednesday are now considered hostages of the other three, a prison official said Saturday.

That made a total of 15 persons considered hostage, including a priest, a guard and nine civilians, authorities said.

They are held in a revolt initiated by Fred Gomez Carrasco, 34, an underworld narcotics boss and three-time loser serving a life sentence for assault to murder, and by Ignacio Cuevas, 42, a convicted murderer, and Rudy Dominguez, 27, convicted of attempted murder.

Prison spokesman Ron Taylor said the status of prisoners Steven Robertson, Henry S. Escamilloa, Florencio Vera and Martin Cuero has been changed to hostage.

Carrasco and six other prisoners stayed behind Wednesday when Carrasco brandished a pistol, shot a guard and took over the library. Until Saturday, the status of four of the prisoners was unclear.

Earlier Saturday, two of the civilian hostages made fresh appeals to authorities to come to their aid.

Carrasco said he couldn't give officials "too much more time."

He told a newsman over the telephone: "The hour is growing near." He said the hostages "are starting to break down. The hostages are starting to give up."

Authorities, who continued trying to bargain with the convicts on Saturday, have offered the inmates their freedom and pleaded with them to surrender. The inmates' demands have varied and the authorities' offers have been rejected. Three of the convicts reportedly have weapons.

One of the hostages, Ronald Robinson, 35, told newsmen by telephone Saturday that he had called two state representatives to enlist their aid in pressuring Gov. Dolph Briscoe and prison system officials to obtain the hostages' release.

Linda Woodman, another hostage, telephoned KNRO radio station on Saturday, appealing to the public to pressure the governor for relief, and Bobby Heard, a guard held captive, appealed to newsmen Friday to call on Briscoe.

But Briscoe has made it clear he does not want the responsibility and has placed it squarely on W.J. Estelle Jr., director of the Texas department of corrections.

Robinson accused Briscoe and Estelle of a "mammoth exercise in buck-passing. If I were in Mr. Estelle's shoes I would have given in to their (convicts) demands the next day. If I was fired it would be with a clear conscience."

A prison official said there were no plans to raid the library stronghold, but Carrasco, who complained that he was being treated like a child, fired several shots during a 15-minute period on Friday.

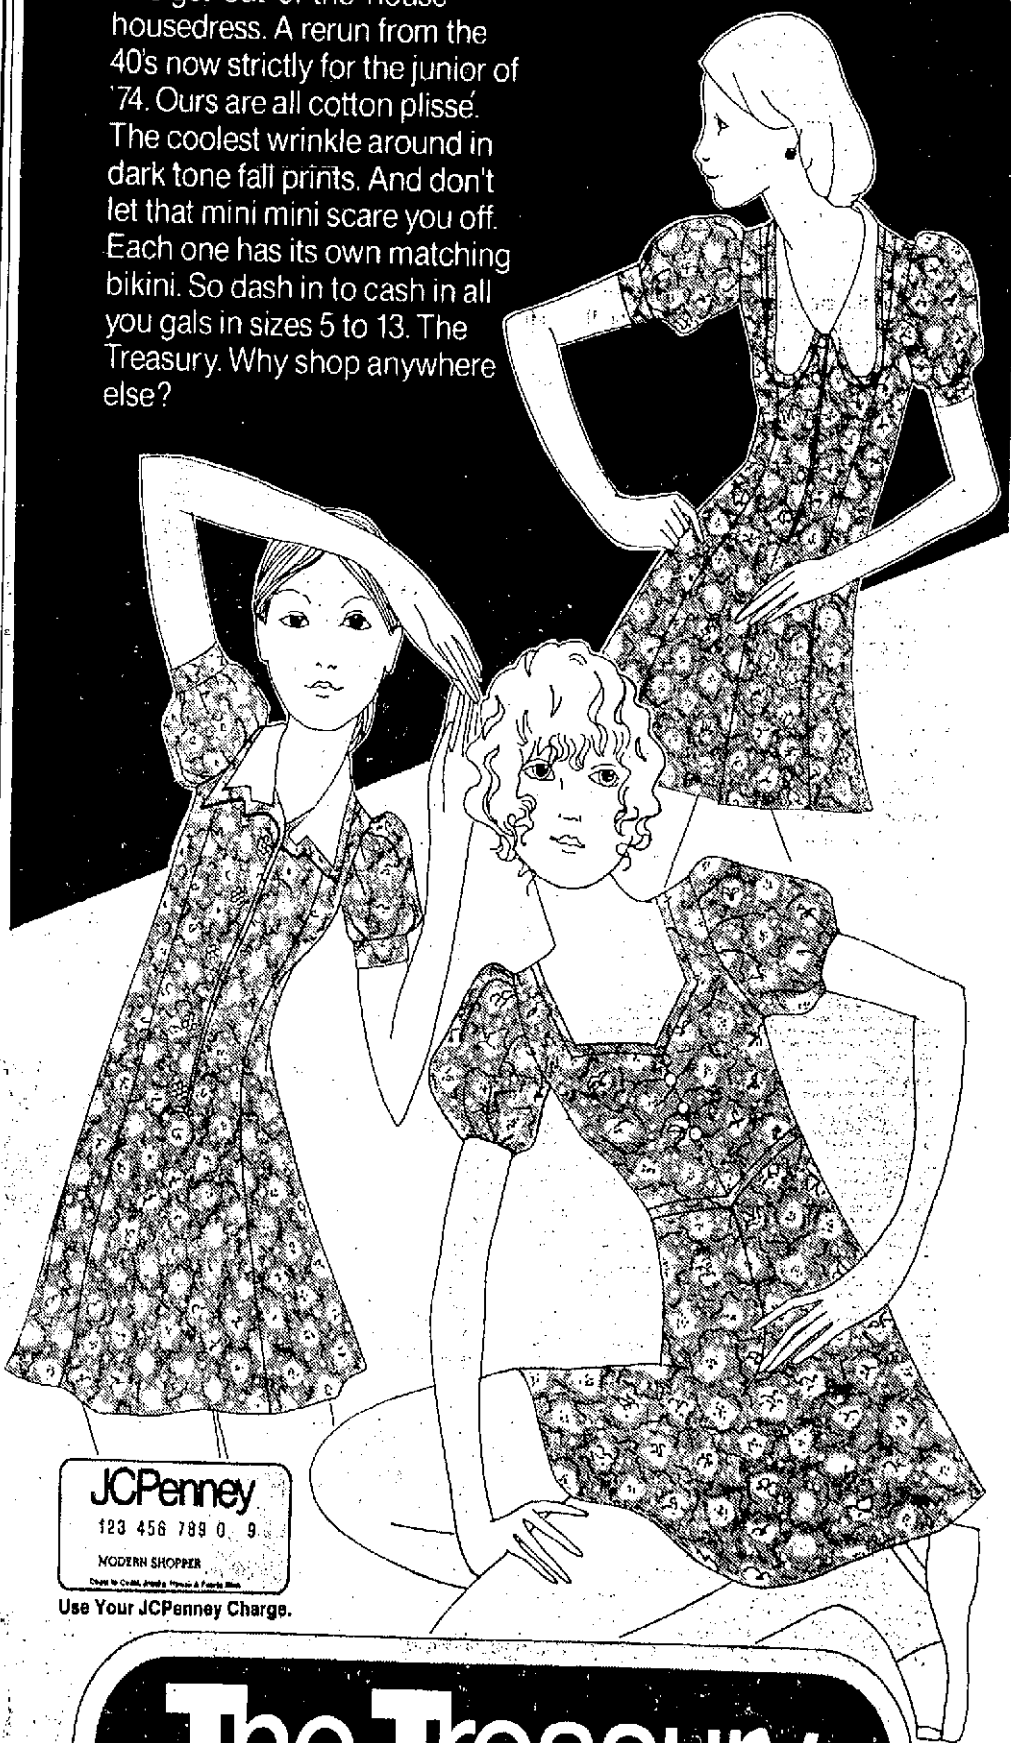

Joe Sweeney, a TV newsman, said Carrasco told him that he had fired the shots as a warning.

Sweeney said Carrasco said he did not want to harm the hostages, then, a few moments later, threatened: "... we mean to finish them off and kill as many people as possible if our demands are not met. If I go down, we all go down."

Tearful Adell reacts to kidnaping

'If my son doesn't come back, I'll be dead anyway'

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

"I had always hoped that if anything tragic had to happen to my family, I would be the one that goes...the one that dies before my children. So if my son doesn't come back, you can bury me with him...I'll be dead anyway."

Chain smoking and constantly fighting back tears, 49-year-old Robert Adell speaks of his kidnaped 16-year-old son with pride, of his own plight with sorrow and of his son's abductors with anger.

"Kidnaping is such an inhuman crime. The biggest thing a person can suffer is when a child is kidnaped, or parents see their child lost—the mother or father see their child die. That's the epitome of sorrow."

"The normal way of life is for the children to bury their parents, but when a parent has to bury a child, it's a terrible thing."

Ever since his son disappeared from a Palm Springs cafe more than two months ago, the burly white-haired Detroit industrialist has worried about whether the thing he most feared—having to bury his own child—would happen to him.

"But I'm hangin' in there," he says with a smile. "I just can't go home to Palm Springs...if I walk into that house it will tear the hell out of me. So I'm living out of a suitcase here."

Adell, who is making his temporary home in the Westwood hotel where he received the first words of his son's kidnaping, is banking on massive efforts by FBI agents and a $50,000 reward he posted earlier this week.

He's also pinning some hope on a young woman who called his home as the last contact by kidnapers to tell him: "It looks like the gig is up."

"I feel this girl was used by the kidnapers," Adell claims, "and her coming forward now can help us, and we can help her."

The woman, who Adell said sounded as though she was young—"between 18 and 20"—apparently called long distance to say her few words and then hung up. The two suspected kidnapers now in custody—Long Beach abortionist Hugh M. Pheaster and Detroit union racketeer Angelo Inciso—were in the Palm Springs area at the time of the call.

His son, he admits, may be cooperating with his kidnapers in order to survive and radio broadcasts —aimed at the desert areas—are asking the boy to return.

"The FBI tells me that after a person has been kidnaped he becomes addicted for survival and if the kidnapers want to run, you run with them," the father says.

Raising children, the distraught dad says, is like building a business—and building a business is something he knows.

"You want a family...you plan and build it...nourish it...protect and guide the child and you hope he turns out right. It's the same in business."

Adell, who took over "guidance" of his two younger brothers after his contractor-father died of cancer at the age of 40, opened an auto agency in Detroit in 1944—after he returned from service in the Marine Corps during World War II.

"I didn't spend much time in college," he admits frankly, "because I wanted to make money—I wanted to be successful."

He did and he is.

Adell, now retired because of a heart attack three years ago, holds a series of patents for "attachments" on automobiles—the first the chrome stripping around most car doors.

"All I did was find a solution when there was a problem. I noticed that there were problems with the doors of automobiles—they were getting all chipped up being opened and closed. What was needed was a molding to protect them."

He designed one and the design is still in use on most cars coming out of Detroit. It was the basis of his successful business—and he built on it.

From there he—and his two younger brothers, Frank and Marvin—patented the windshield washer solvent reservoir. It was another success.

Head Start door open

The Head Start program funded by the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities is now accepting applications for children between the ages of 3 years, 9 months, and 5 years of age whose families meet the Department of Health, Education and Welfare income criteria.

The program provides a broad range of services, including medical, dental, nutritional, social and educational.

Anyone interested in enrolling a child in the program, which is scheduled to begin Sept. 11, should contact Elaine Jackson at the commission office.

"All I did was find a solution when there was a problem—my whole life as well as my brothers' lives are centered around finding solutions. We work as a team," he admits.

And, as a team, they expanded into other fields—plastics, chemicals, furniture.

"I've hustled all my life," he says, "but in business you have to have determination, foresight and guts..."

And the "guts" he had in business is the only thing he's going on now.

He runs, over and over again, the last day he saw his son.

"I talked to Larry about 5:30 the evening he was kidnaped. He said he was going to pick up his girlfriend, meet a friend called Angelo, get a bite to eat and go to a movie."

"I asked when he would be home and he said about 12. I said OK."

The next telephone call he received was from the kidnapers demanding $400,000.

His son, Adell said, had told him he "met some real nice Italian people" some weeks before, but he did not know who "Angelo" was at the time. He subsequently learned, he said, that he was Angelo Inciso, a Detroit union organizer who had misappropriated union funds, and had served time in prison with Pheaster.

The 16-year-old honor student and his father were to leave in mid-June to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the boy's maternal grandparents in Detroit; the youth was then to work for a Michigan summer camp to work as a counselor in training.

"He was a good kid...he wanted to be an attorney...he loved to sit and talk with people...but whatever he did he wanted to do the best."

"And he joked a lot," the father recalls. "He played in both the Sinatra and Milton Berle Golf tournaments and had a handicap of 10—he was a good golfer."

"When I took him to register, the girl said, 'Larry, what's your handicap?' and he turned and said, 'It's my father.'"

"He was...he is a good kid."

Apartment fire

Firemen battle a $10,000 blaze of undetermined origin which broke out at 5:03 p.m. Saturday in a garage owned by Jack W. Schultz, 45, 2726 E. Second St., and spread to unoccupied apartments. No injuries were reported in the fire, which was extinguished in 15 minutes. Firemen said most of the damage was confined to an upper apartment which was "almost totally destroyed."

Rise and fall of Reinecke

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The lieutenant governor of California once had a campaign flyer printed which said, "Ed Reinecke, the man on the right in 1970, the right man in 1974."

The campaign literature read in part, "Ed Reinecke—loyalist. A forthright party leader who has never equivocated his support of Governor Reagan, his party or its candidates."

He was loyal to Reagan. The governor once called him "young, energetic, a vote-getter in the party with a future in public life."

But those were the good days. The days when he was skyrocketing to popularity and becoming a household word in California. And above all else, he was thought by many political observers as a sure bet to succeed Reagan as governor of the most populous state in the nation.

Things have happened since then. There was Watergate and the alleged ITT offer to underwrite the Republican National Convention, then to be held in San Diego.

Reinecke was called to testify before a Senate hearing in 1972 to talk about the ITT affair. The Watergate grand jury April 3 handed down an indictment against Reinecke charging that he lied to the committee.

Saturday he was convicted of one count of perjury.

Back in 1969, Reinecke, a father of three children, was virtually unknown outside his Los Angeles Congressional District when Reagan named him lieutenant governor. He replaced Robert Finch, who joined the Nixon administration.

Reinecke was elected to the post in 1970.

Reinecke in jeopardy of job

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The conviction of Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke for perjury could cost him his job, with an attorney general's opinion the key to a complex legal situation.

Food giveaway reports debt of $350,000

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The massive food giveaway set up to help secure the release of kidnapped heiress Patricia Hearst may be as much as $350,000 in debt, a Hearst family attorney says.

Claims filed against the People in Need program for "services rendered or goods delivered" would bring the cost of the giveaway to at least $2,350,000—probably the largest private food hand-out in the nation's history, William Coblentz said Friday.

Newspaper executive Randolph A. Hearst set up People in Need at the demand of the Symbionese Liberation Army, which claimed responsibility for kidnapping his 20-year-old daughter Feb. 4.

Hearst put up $500,000 of his own money and the Hearst Foundation added another $1.5 million to feed the needy as a precondition to negotiating Miss Hearst's release. However, Miss Hearst denounced the People in Need program in a taped communique and later said she had joined the SLA.

Berkeley names new police chief

BERKELEY (AP)—Wesley A. Pomeroy, former undersheriff of San Mateo County, has been named chief of the Berkeley Police Department.

He will replace former police Chief Bruce Baker who left last December to become chief of police in Portland, Ore. Pomeroy will assume his new job Sept. 3.

The state Constitution specifies that laws be adopted "to exclude from office...persons convicted of bribery, perjury, forgery, malfeasance in office or other high crimes."

The California Government Code, section 1021, disqualifies anyone convicted of the specified offenses from office, and Section 3000 requires that a state officer forfeit his post on conviction for the designated crimes.

Section 1770 declares a post vacant if the officeholder is convicted of a felony.

Reinecke was convicted in Washington, D.C., Saturday of lying to a U.S. Senate committee.

The first step toward Reinecke's losing the post could be a request from Gov. Reagan to the state attorney general asking if the lieutenant governor's office is vacant. If a vacancy occurs, Reagan has the power under a 1966

It was during these years that his opponents referred to him as "ultra-conservative," and Reagan insisted that he "philosophically" agreed with the administration.

Beside communicating between the Reagan administration and college campuses in California, Reinecke headed up the state's effort to deal with the energy crisis.

Then there was talk about a possible indictment against Reinecke, and his campaign funds began drying up last year. The Republican backers of Reagan began defecting to Reinecke's GOP opponent, State Controller Houston I. Flournoy.

Flournoy defeated Reinecke at the polls in the June 4 primary election, and Reinecke's long-time hopes of becoming the GOP nominee and eventually the governor were dead.

In a recent interview, Reinecke said he must liquidate some "if not all" of his financial assets to help pay legal fees for his defense against the federal perjury charges.

Reinecke, who asserts he is a victim of a "political prosecution" at the hands of Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, said the indictment and the publicity had ruined him "financially and politically."

The lieutenant governor, a mechanical engineer before entering politics, said his wife and children, Mark, 16, Mimi, 15 and Tom, 14, have been subjected to harassment during the long ordeal with the special prosecutor's office. But he said they have supported him fully.

"They have bowed their backs along with me and are standing tough," he said.

constitutional amendment to appoint a successor to serve the last 5½ months of Reinecke's term.

Reagan refused to comment Saturday on Reinecke's tenure in office, saying he had to confer with Reinecke and his attorneys.

The question of how the law applies to Reinecke is not clear, says a lawyer in the attorney general's office who asked not to be identified.

A 1966 state Supreme Court decision in a voting rights case held that a conviction in another jurisdiction does not necessarily carry the same weight as a felony conviction in California. Although not directly relevant to Reinecke, the lawyer said, the decision could apply.

State law also defines a felony as a crime punishable by imprisonment in a state prison — a penalty Reinecke does not face. He does face up to five years in federal prison and a $2,000 fine.

The attorney said one part of the situation is clear: If the office is determined to be legally vacant, Reinecke must quit the post as soon as "judgment is entered" — usually when sentence is imposed.

Reinecke said Saturday he would appeal the conviction. The effect of such possibly lengthy proceedings on his tenure is not certain.

The entire legal tangle could be ended by Reinecke's resignation, which would clear the way for Reagan to appoint a successor.

Reinecke was originally appointed by Reagan to the second spot in the state government vacated in 1969 when Robert Finch left to join the Nixon administration. He won the office on his own in 1970 with a lopsided victory over state Sen. Alfred Alquist, D-San Jose.

State court bans illegal alien law

United Press International

The California Court of Appeals says a state law prohibiting the hiring of illegal aliens is unconstitutional because the federal government is the only body that can enact laws concerning aliens.

The ruling Friday dealt only with the jurisdictional issue and stemmed from a 1972 suit by a group of growers against a state law that provides punishment for growers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

The growers argued that the federal government had pre-empted the subject of illegal aliens and the state could not act. They obtained an injunction from a Los Angeles Superior Court judge.

The Court of Appeals struck down the California law on the ground the federal government has exclusive right to make laws dealing with aliens.

Joseph Sureck, U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service regional director in Los Angeles, said the main reason illegal aliens come to this country in record numbers is to get jobs that pay more than those in their own country.

Because of this, he said, legislation is needed to force employers "to try and hire only legal workers, and that is the only way we will ever even start to get this thing under control."

Sheldon Greene, an attorney who advocated the state law, said, "Employers filed the suit to kill the legislation because employers want to continue exploiting cheap labor from Mexico. I believe the case should be appealed to the Supreme Court of California."

California is the only state to enact a law aimed at cracking down on employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

According to recent federal estimates, between two million and four million illegal aliens are entering this country each year.

IBM, AMPEX reach $13-million agreement

REDWOOD CITY (AP) — AMPEX and IBM jointly announced a $13-million agreement Saturday resolving allegations between the two companies over patent infringement and antitrust violations.

The settlement was reached after more than a year of negotiations. It calls for the two companies to exchange existing and future patent licenses covering their respective business interests in the data processing field and for IBM to pay AMPEX $13 million.

The joint statement said AMPEX agreed to drop allegations denied by IBM that the larger company had infringed upon AMPEX tape and disk patents and had violated antitrust laws in the marketing of peripheral equipment and memory products.

The settlement removed the possibility of another costly suit being brought against IBM, which already is involved in litigation with the data processing companies Memorex and Telex.

Kissinger took calculated risks in efforts to end Cyprus crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger used tough talk, calculated public actions and constant transatlantic telephone calls and risked a falling-out with U.S. allies in his efforts to defuse the Cyprus crisis.

State Department records showed Saturday that Kissinger failed in his first objective — to prevent armed conflict in Cyprus — and achieved a cease-fire between Turkey and the Greek Cypriot forces only after a complicated and often improvised effort. There was considerable confusion in the State Department about the Cyprus situation from the time President Makarios was toppled by a coup July 15 until the invasion by Turkish forces July 20.

Makarios' ouster took U.S. intelligence by surprise and for nearly 48 hours Kissinger and his top aides did not know whether the Cypriot archbishop was alive or dead.

When it turned out that Makarios had escaped, Great Britain, NATO and the United Nations continued to regard him as the constitutional president of Cyprus.

The U.S. has tended to be critical of Makarios, regarding him as an unstable leader with a tendency to lean toward the Soviet Union.

But the secretary of state, seeking flexibility in any future negotiations, adopted a purposely ambiguous attitude. His stance put the U.S. and its allies at odds over Makarios although they agreed on the desirability of ousting Nicos Sampson, who had taken over as president.

Early in the tense week, Kissinger convinced President Nixon to send Undersecretary of State Joseph J. Sisco to London, Athens and Ankara as a presidential emissary to warn Greece and Turkey in no uncertain language against going to war. At the time, administration officials insisted that Sisco's purpose was to merely demonstrate U.S. concern over "the potential for calamity."

But according to information now available, Sisco's mission was to find a peaceful solution to the Cyprus crisis and to forestall a Turkish invasion. Ultimately, he was charged with keeping Greece from attacking Turkey.

Sisco conferred with the Greek government leaders first in London July 18, then in Athens. He shuttled to Ankara and pleaded for 48 hours to work out a solution. But 15 minutes after his meeting with Turkish Premier Bulent Evcit, Sisco was informed that the Turkish invasion of Cyprus had begun.

In San Clemente, where Kissinger was conferring with President Nixon, the secretary of state called a background briefing. Without making a direct threat, Kissinger warned that no U.S. military supplies would be forthcoming if Greece and Turkey came to blows.

Meantime, Sisco was dispatched by Kissinger from Ankara to Athens, where he learned that the Greek military leaders were threatening to counter-attack Turkey. Sisco then repeated a blunt warning to the Greek military men: They would be completely isolated and would receive no support from the United States.

Apparently, Sisco's warnings to the Greek military men encouraged their internal dissensions and the political upheaval that resulted in return to civilian government.

'Breath of freedom' exhilarates Greeks

By PHILIP DOPOULOS

ATHENS, Greece (AP)—A breath of freedom was sweeping through Greece Saturday. After seven years of silence, Greeks were arguing politics again in the birthplace of democracy.

They gathered in bars, sidewalk cafes and the streets to discuss, openly and with animation, the events of the past turbulent week that brought an end to military rule.

"It's a breath of freedom. I've dreamt about, and it came so unexpectedly," said a beer drinker at a sidewalk cafe on Athens's main Panepistimiou Avenue.

BUT in a national radio and television address Thursday night, new Premier Constantine Caramanlis told the 9 million Greeks that the restoration of full democracy would have to wait until the Cyprus crisis is resolved.

Caramanlis, a former premier, returned Wednesday after 11 years of self-exile in Paris to a triumphant welcome and was sworn in immediately as premier of a government to replace the military rulers. To many Greeks, they were in disgrace because of the Cyprus crisis that had brought near-war with Turkey.

He moved quickly to establish himself, forming a civilian cabinet of leading technocrats and former politicians from right and center parties. He included even a Socialist, Haralambos Protopappas, something unheard of in postwar Greek governments.

His cabinet's first acts were to declare an amnesty for all persons in jail for political offenses, close down the dreaded Yiaros Island concentration camp, invite all exiles to return home, and restore citizenship to Greeks deprived of it for opposing the military.

PROMINENT exiles returned almost immediately.

Actress Melina Mercouri, who had waged a virulent campaign against the military regime from France and the United States, returned and declared: "I have returned and hope never to leave again."

Composer Mikis Theodorakis also flew back to several thousand young people at the airport singing his songs, which were banned under the military. A deputy in the Communist front "United Democratic Left" party before the military took over in 1967 and suspended democracy, Theodorakis claimed: "Victory is ours. There is no doubt about it. The left made the greatest sacrifices during the dictatorship."

As tripartite talks in Geneva between Greece, Turkey and Britain over Cyprus entered a difficult stage Friday, pressure mounted on Caramanlis to take military action both from hawkish army officers and from crowds in the streets.

BUT THE Geneva talks took a swing for the better Saturday afternoon when U.N. officials on Cyprus confirmed that Turkey had stopped troop movements on the island.

In the event the Geneva talks were unsuccessful, observers feared Greece might have no recourse but war.

During the difficult period, the cry for war also was sounded in Athens streets. Hundreds of Greek-Cypriot students demonstrated on the capital's main avenues, demanding that they be sent "... to fight at the side of our brothers."

Athenians joined them as the students lit candles in mourning for Cyprus, while others staged a sit-down protest at Greece's tomb of the unknown soldiers overlooking Constitution Square. Strong police units cordoned off the area and dispersed demonstrators peacefully.

Many Greeks wondered why Greece hadn't entered the fray on Cyprus and had left the Greek Cypriots to defend themselves against overwhelming Turkish forces. There were demands for revenge against the deposed junta for allegedly sparking the crisis by ousting Cyprus President Archbishop Makarios.

GREEKS were openly criticizing their former military rulers. Members of the Caramanlis cabinet joined the chorus of criticism.

The one name most often mentioned by ministers at swearing-in rites on Friday was Brig. Dimitrios Ioannides, head of the military police and often accused by dissidents of permitting torture.

Ioannides "should either be severely punished or purged," one politician said minutes before being sworn into the new cabinet.

Apparently seeking to pacify the military, Caramanlis made clear in his address Thursday that the Cyprus problem must be dealt with before anything else.

Defense Minister Evangelos Averoff-Tositsas said every Greek officer was at his post and that "the army on its own initiative opened the road to democracy. It is not the moment now for stupidities."

For the first time in seven years, Greeks are getting uncensored news via newspapers and the state-controlled radio and television. All news concerning Cyprus was reported in detail over the radio.

DAILY PAPERS, heavily censored over the years, suddenly came alive. Newspapers banned by the military regime started publishing, and even dailies closed by economic problems came out.

As Greeks enjoyed their new-born freedom, however, a sense of economic restlessness began to creep in.

The general mobilization, still in effect on Saturday, was pressing hard on the nation's economy because most of the young males in the labor force were on military duty.

Factories and shipyards operated at less than full capacity and relied heavily on female labor. The Esso petroleum refinery in Salonica, northern Greece, was reported operating at 52 per cent capacity. Many of its young workers had left for front-line units massed on the Turkish frontier in northeastern Greece.

AN ESSO official said the refinery's tank trucks had been taken over by the military to transport fuel for military vehicles.

Greek passenger ships also were mobilized, stranding thousands of tourists on Aegean islands.

Southern impact strong

House debate seen by Aug. 12

By GIL BAILEY
Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON—Full House debate on impeachment articles may begin as early as Aug. 12 with the chances of full House approval of impeachment charges greatly increased because of bipartisan and southern support of impeachment.

If the House does approve impeachment articles by a majority vote, then the Senate should start trial within about three weeks after that, according to Senate spokesman, possibly by mid-September with the trial concluding just before the November election.

A two-thirds majority is required in the Senate to Comm. Republicans choose candidate

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Rep. Robert H. Steele, R-Conn., 35, was chosen to run for governor by Connecticut's Republicans Saturday over three other contenders.

The two-term congressman, the youngest member of Congress when elected in 1970, would be the youngest Connecticut chief executive ever if elected.

convict and remove President Nixon from office.

However, setting any timetable is tricky in impeachment proceedings. The House Judiciary Committee had hoped to wind up its work almost two months ago, and it has not yet completed its job.

The committee will begin debate on additional impeachment articles at 7:30 a.m. PDT Monday. The debates will be carried on national television.

One or more articles are almost certain to be approved by the committee. The committee has in its pocket a draft of an article on "abuse of powers," which has drawn considerable support.

The votes of the three southern Democrats on the committee and four out of five of the total number of southerners on the committee increases the chances of heavy support from the southern block in the House. In addition, the southern voices, including that of Rep. H. Cladwell Butler, R-Va., speaking against the President, may have an impact on the country as a whole where some believe impeachment is an eastern, liberal and media plot.

The defection from the President of more than a third of the Republicans on the committee will also impress wavering Republican members of the House.

That defection was started by Rep. Lawrence Hogan, R-Md., who is running for governor in that state. Critics blamed Hogan's action on "politics," but the same can't be said for the other five Republicans, who are merely running for reelection.

In addition, one or two other Republicans, including senior Republican Robert McClory, R-Ill., may also vote for other articles of impeachment.

As of Saturday night it appeared almost certain that the house would approve articles of impeachment and that the country would see a Senate trial of Richard M. Nixon.

Impeach balloting 'difficult'

Rep. George Danielson, D-La., one of 27 members of the House Judiciary Committee to recommend Saturday the impeachment of President Nixon, said it was the most difficult decision he has ever made in his political life.

Danielson, reached by phone at his Capitol Hill office, said he was "emotionally and physically exhausted" by the experience.

The Judiciary panel approved by a 27 to 11 margin an impeachment article charging the President with obstruction of justice in the Watergate cover-up. The article was approved after several hours of debate on proposed amendments.

Danielson, one of four Californians on the panel, said he was convinced he was right when he voted for the article, but said:

"When the chairman (Peter Rodino) called for the roll, there was no way to measure the weight of the responsibility that you feel... I just hope and pray that no President ever again will get himself involved in conduct that will compel the Congress to meet its responsibility for impeachment."

"Every member of that committee worked so hard and so long... There were thousands of pages of evidence that we went through — backwards and forwards, even sideways — to get the full meaning," Danielson said.

He said the second article to be considered when the committee reconvenes Monday, would probably pass without too much delay.

That article deals with alleged abuse of powers by the President in using government agencies such as the Internal Revenue Service, the FBI and the White House plumbers, to carry on domestic intelligence against the White House enemies.

Danielson said a third possible article may be considered alleging major tax violations on the part of the President as well as federal financing of home improvements at Nixon's San Clemente and Key Biscayne properties.

Article 1 alleges nine ways Nixon covered up Watergate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Article 1, on which the House Judiciary Committee has recommended President Nixon be impeached, accuses him of using his powers of office to cover up the Watergate scandal.

It charges him with engaging directly and through his close subordinates in a course of conduct designed to obstruct the investigation of the Watergate break-in, conceal and protect those responsible, and cover up other unlawful activities.

At the heart of the committee's case in support of the article is a belief that Nixon not only acted illegally himself but had knowledge of unlawful acts by his subordinates.

The article lists nine means, couched in general terms, by which it says the cover-up was carried out. Here are the general statements and some examples of supporting evidence, from a memorandum prepared by Special Counsel John Doar:

1. "Making or causing to be made false or misleading statements to lawfully authorized investigative officers and employees of the United States."

Doar's memorandum cites a number of examples in support of this allegation, including a statement that on March 27, 1973, Nixon instructed John D. Ehrlichman to tell Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst that no one on the White House staff was implicated in Watergate.

It also states that on June 16, 1973, White House lawyer J. Fred Buzhardt, at the direction of Nixon, failed to tell Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox about the White House taping system.

2. "Withholding relevant and material evidence or information from lawfully authorized investigative officers and employees of the United States."

Among the actions cited is the destruction by Acting FBI Director Patrick Gray of the contents of Howard Hunt's safe.

The committee also lists numerous occasions on which it says Nixon was informed of the involvement of his aides in the cover-up and failed to inform the attorney general.

3. "Approving, condoning, acquiescing in, and counseling witnesses with respect to the giving of false or misleading statements to lawfully authorized investigative officers and employees of the United States and false or misleading testimony in duly instituted judicial and congressional proceedings."

As example, the committee cites the alleged preparation of false grand-jury testimony by Jeb S. Magruder with the help of John Mitchell and John Dean.

It also states that Nixon helped H. R. Haldeman work out his testimony before the Senate Watergate committee about Nixon's March 21, 1973, conversation with John Dean. A supporting document says, "After Haldeman gave false testimony before the Select Senate Committee concerning the substance of that conversation, the President publicly stated that Haldeman had stated the facts accurately."

4. "Interfering or endeavoring to interfere with the conduct of investigations by the Department of Justice, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Office of the Watergate Special Prosecution Force, and congressional committees."

The committee says during the summer of 1972 John Dean obtained raw data on the FBI's Watergate investigation and used it to impede the investigation.

As another example, it says Nixon asked Ehrlichman to arrange for Maurice Stans, Nixon's chief fund raiser in the 1972 elections, to give a deposition rather than appear before the grand jury.

5. "Approving, condoning and acquiescing in the surreptitious payment of substantial sums of money for the purpose of obtaining the silence or influencing the testimony of witnesses, potential witnesses or individuals who participated in such illegal entry and other illegal activities."

The chief example cited here is the March 21, 1973, conversation between Nixon and Dean in which the committee says Nixon authorized the payment of hush money to Hunt.

The committee also cites the approval by Haldeman of the transfer of White House funds to Frederick LaRue, a reelection campaign aide, to continue payments to the Watergate defendants.

6. "Endeavoring to misuse the Central Intelligence Agency, an agency of the United States."

The committee cites the efforts in the days following the Watergate break-in on June 17, 1972, by various White House aides, to get the CIA to ask the FBI to curtail its investigation of cash found on the Watergate burglars, which had been traced to Mexico.

7. "Disseminating information received from officers of the Department of Justice of the United States to subjects of investigations conducted by lawfully authorized investigative officers and employees of the United States, for the purpose of aiding and assisting such subjects in their attempts to avoid criminal liability."

This allegation is based on several conversations Nixon had with acting Atty. Gen. Henry Petersen, around April 16, 1973, when Petersen was in charge of the Watergate investigation. The committee says Nixon sought information about the investigation from Petersen, with assurances he would not disclose it, then passed it on to Ehrlichman and Haldeman.

8. "Making false or misleading public statements for the purpose of deceiving the people of the United States into believing that a thorough and complete investigation had been conducted with respect to allegations of misconduct on the part of personnel of the executive branch of the United States and personnel of the Committee for the Re-election of the President, and that there was no involvement of such personnel in such misconduct."

The committee cites Nixon's statements to the effect that first Dean and then Ehrlichman had conducted investigations and reported no involvement of White House or CRP personnel. "Dean conducted no such investigation and made no such report," states a committee supporting document. And Ehrlichman's investigation, it says, "consisted principally of strategy discussions with potential subjects of investigation and an effort to learn what potential witnesses had already told to the prosecutors."

9. "Endeavoring to cause prospective defendants, and individuals tried and convicted, to expect favored treatment and consideration in return for their silence or false testimony, or rewarding individuals for their silence or false testimony."

The committee says Nixon discussed clemency for the Watergate burglars with Ehrlichman two months before they were indicted and six months before they went on trial.

It also cites an April 14, 1973, conversation between Nixon and Ehrlichman, in which it says Nixon said executive clemency should be handled by giving assurances of presidential affection and gratitude to Mitchell and Magruder.

The article's concluding section states that Nixon, in all these matters, "has acted in a manner contrary to his trust as President and subversive of constitutional government, to the great prejudice of the cause of law and justice and to the manifest injury of the people of the United States."

"Wherefore, Richard M. Nixon, by such conduct, warrants impeachment and trial, and removal from office."

REP. BARBARA JORDAN, D-Tex., reflects seriousness of historic impeachment vote taken by Judiciary Committee Saturday. Rep. Jordan supported first impeachment article.

No smiles after historic vote for impeachment

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — Members of the House Judiciary Committee were solemn and unsmiling. One spoke of seeing tears in the eyes of her colleagues. None was elated, despite the historic aspects of the action just taken.

They had voted to recommend impeachment, conviction and removal from office of the President of the United States.

Albert D. Jenner, who was removed by the Republicans in the final week of the inquiry as Republican counsel because he became an advocate of impeachment, said, "It is a sad day in the history of the country... (but) the constitutional process worked and the country is strengthened and so is the Presidency."

"When you get right down to casting that vote, you realize what a grave and serious thing it is," said Rep. Paul S. Sarbanes, D-Md., chief sponsor of the Watergate cover-up impeachment article approved, 27-11.

Texas Democrat Barbara Jordan, who voted with Sarbanes, said, "There were tears among the men and women of the committee behind the doors and off the cameras after the vote was announced."

Sarbanes said after weeks of weighing the evidence on Watergate, abuse of power and "how the public trust has been violated," he had no choice but to carry the impeachment article. "But there is no joy in it," he said.

One of Nixon's chief backers, Rep. Delbert L. Latta, R-Ohio, said chances are good the full House will not approve impeachment articles from the Judiciary Committee.

JOHN DOAR, Judiciary Committee chief counsel, rests eyes as Saturday's impeachment debate moves toward final vote.

"If you want my candid opinion, I never thought they (Nixon and his aides) had a chance in this committee," Latta said.

Rep. Charles W. Sandman Jr., R-N.J., one of the President's most ardent defenders in the committee, said there is no way to know what will happen between now and Aug. 22, when the House is tentatively scheduled to vote on impeachment.

"As badly as a lot of people dislike Nixon, there are a lot of people who don't want their President moved out of office," Sandman said. "And no one knows how that is going to develop."

Sarbanes would not attempt to predict the outcome in the House, but remarked that 70 per cent of the committee voted for the article of impeachment.

"I think the committee will be able to document its charges," he said. "We will have no problem meeting the requirement that the President and his counsel know what he is charged with.... The substance of the article is strong and the supporting material is strong."

The article will be accompanied by a detailed report to the House, he said.

Rep. Harold V. Froehlich, R-Wis., who had said earlier his vote would depend on the wording of the articles of impeachment, said he didn't decide until Saturday to vote for the article.

"I have been arguing for more substantiation," he said, and indicated that he still was not completely satisfied.

Two other Republicans who voted for impeachment appeared deeply moved and had little to say.

"It is a sad occasion," said Rep. William S. Cohen, R-Maine.

"I'd rather not talk about it," said Rep. M. Caldwell Butler, R-Va.

Rep. John F. Seiberling, D-Ohio, saw the vote as another move in Congress' resuming a more important role in the government.

Seiberling said he does not fear that the action against the President will adversely affect U.S. foreign affairs.

"I think foreign relations are grounded on more fundamental considerations than who occupies a particular office," he said.

Rep. Charles D. Rangel, D-N.Y., had said in his opening statement that the occasion was not sad because it showed there was a mechanism for curbing the excesses of a president.

But after voting for the impeachment resolution Rangel said, "It is sad because it affects the life of a human being and his family. It is a terrible thing to happen to anybody. You have to have compassion for his wife and his friends."

Nixon 'not surprised' by panel vote

By RICHARD LERNER

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — President Nixon was not surprised by a House Judiciary Committee vote to impeach him and intends to personally command his defense in the full House, where he expects to be vindicated, his aides said Saturday night.

Aides said Nixon was walking on the beach when he learned of the House Judiciary Committee's 27 to 11 vote to recommend his impeachment for obstruction of justice in the Watergate cover-up.

"The President remains confident that the full House will recognize that there simply is not the evidence to support this or any other article of impeachment and will not vote to impeach. He is confident because he knows he has committed no impeachable offense."

Nixon planned to return to Washington today to take command of the fight against impeachment by the full House, aides said. Haig said the President intends to be in Washington for that vote.

Aides said Nixon also will personally review the Watergate evidence proceedings with Nixon.

Nixon does not plan to mount a lobbying effort against impeachment in the House, Ziegler said, adding that "We do have a firm belief that the President has supporters in Congress."

which must be surrendered Tuesday under a Supreme Court order.

preme Court order.

Earlier in the day, Ziegler expressed a similar attitude, saying he had discussed the committee

Earlier an air of expectancy and uncertainty prevailed at the Western White House, although aides indicated Nixon was resigned to the prospects that the committee would recommend impeachment with of an impeachment vote in the Democratic-controlled committee.

Ziegler insisted that Nixon did not watch any of the Judiciary Committee proceedings on television. But he said the President "of course is totally aware of the debate and is following it closely" through conversations with his aides, wire service reports and the newspapers.

Ziegler was reticent to talk about the enormous listening task Nixon has ahead of him to screen 20 taped Watergate conversations before 1 p.m. PDT Tuesday—the court-ordered deadline to turn them over to U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica.

Judiciary panel vote

NIXON'S press secretary informed him of the vote over a special telephone connection on the beach about a half-hour after the vote was cast in Washington.

"The President was not surprised; he had expected this outcome as you know," Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren told reporters.

Learning of the vote, Nixon returned directly to his home and conferred with his chief of staff, Gen. Alexander M. Haig, and Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, who then issued a brief two-sentence statement that said:

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is the 27 to 11 roll call vote by which the House Judiciary Committee adopted an article recommending the impeachment of President Nixon on grounds of obstructing justice.

Profit is popping here

CHICAGO (AP) — Of all the operations of the First National Bank of Chicago, an old-fashioned popcorn machine run by teen-age bank trainees is showing the biggest gross profit margin, 62 per cent.

Surprised executives of the nation's ninth largest bank, whose investments, loans and deposits are counted in the billions of dollars, chuckled when they heard about it Saturday.

"That's probably the widest gross margin of any of the bank's many investments," said Stan Golder, vice president of the bank's First Chicago Investment Corp.

Rudolph Palluck, a senior vice president, exclaimed: "Sixty-two per cent? Why, that's wonderful. That's roughly 40 times our margin on nearly $12 billion in loans."

THE BANK paid $8,000 for a large replica of a four-wheel, ornate glass-and-wood cart — the kind that whistled gaily on the streets of yesteryear while a cascade of popped corn came from its steam-operated griddle.

The bank, in midtown Chicago, had it wheeled onto the sidewalk near its plaza, which is festooned like a county fair. Three young summer trainees were put in charge of the popper.

One of them, Wayne Heise, 19, of Arlington Heights, a sophomore majoring in accounting at the University of Illinois, said Operation Popcorn was an instant success.

"We sell it in 32-ounce cartons for 25 cents," he said. "We have it all figured out that our gross profit margin on each carton is 62 per cent."

This was verified by Bob Short, vice president in charge of the building and plaza.

"WE ARE selling an average of 1,000 cartons a day, and once we hit 1,253," Heise beamed. "We can't pop it fast enough. We have lines to the curb sometimes. Big executives from the banking district come by every lunch hour and buy some, and even take an extra carton back to their office."

Heise said at least 50 customers stop by regularly every day.

"They say our popcorn — which we buy already buttered and salted and just measure out into the popper — is better than the smaller cartons that sell for about 50 cents in most theaters," said Heise.

"Many of the customers are men and women in their 60s and 70s. The popcorn wagon brings back memories. They talk to us about the old days."

"This may sound corny, but, honestly, I think there are a few tears sometimes when we hand them their popcorn."

Drop in profits for oil firms seen

By JOSH FITZHUGH
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — The nation's oil companies, emerging from their most profitable six months in history, will find it hard to continue the financial growth during the last half of the year, analysts predict.

The reasons for the earnings gains in the first half are wearing off, they say, and signs indicate greater price competition in the industry.

A substantial slowing in the growth of the petroleum market, plus the sizable earnings gains in the last half of 1973 should cut into the rate of gain in profits during the last half of this year, argues Charles Maxwell, a stock analyst for C.J. Lawrence.

DURING 1975 some companies should continue to register gains and others declines from their 1974 net income levels, other analysts say.

For just over a week the oil companies have been reporting sharply higher earnings for the second quarter and first half, a continuation of the increased profits that started in the third quarter of last year and have continued to build since.

Exxon Corp., for example, the world's leading oil company and the nation's second largest industrial firm behind General Motors, posted first-half earnings after taxes of $1.56 billion, up 53 per cent from the year-earlier period.

Exxon's earnings, like those of some of the other firms, exceeded any full-year earnings for any year prior to 1973.

Also reporting strong gains were Texaco Inc., whose first half net rose 98 per cent over the 1973 level; Mobil Oil Corp., up 84 per cent; Gulf, ahead 50 per cent; Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, up 106 per cent, and Atlantic Richfield Co., up 97 per cent from the 1973 period.

The large percentage gains over 1973 in some cases do not reflect historical performance. Arco's 1973 first-half net, for example, was only 14 per cent above that reported in the like period of 1971.

DESPITE domestic price controls, which limited gains from refining and marketing operations, the oil companies were able to earn sizably more from higher crude oil price, both here and abroad.

In the past year foreign crude prices have quadrupled as a result of shortages and action by the producing countries, while average domestic prices more than doubled.

In addition, strong chemical sales and so-called inventory profits helped boost many companies' net. Inventory profits measure the higher value of goods still in storage in a time of rising prices.

Now there is some evidence that higher prices have prompted increased production and less demand, the classic signpost of a lower prices and lower profits.

Petroleum demand in the United States is down 3½ per cent from last year, says the chief economist for the Continental Oil Co., Sam Schwartz. In Europe it's off 8 per cent, he says.

Though Schwartz expects demand to pick up the rest of the year, it still will lag behind 1973. But domestic gasoline consumption may only increase 2 per cent a year through 1980, he adds.

Schwartz' boss, Conoco chairman Howard Blauvett, sees this dampening in demand, plus production increases, causing a drop in world crude oil prices "not exceeding one or two dollars a barrel."

Any weakening in profits during the second half is bound to help the industry shrug off its biggest worry, congressional tax reform.

Already there is feeling among some security analysts and oil executives that the representatives' concerns with impeachment will delay if not kill passage of "punitive" tax measures introduced during the heat and passion of the energy crisis.

These measures would trim the foreign tax credit and oil depletion allowance, and impose an excess profits tax.

"The high profits came into the news last winter almost violently, and there was quite naturally a reaction to them," says John Winger, an oil economist with New York's Chase Manhattan Bank. "But now people have had a chance to cool off. They've become conditioned to these earnings."

At a recent hearing in Washington, Winger said only one congressman queried him — politely — about his statement that the companies could not generate capital funds from earnings.

"Three months ago we might have had a debate," Winger said.

Unions join NFL player pickets

United Press International

Hundreds of blue collar union members demonstrated at Canton, Ohio, in support of striking National Football League players.

Picketing by striking football players at the site of the Hall of Fame game, the game that traditionally opens the NFL exhibition season, was limited by court order to six players and two members of sympathetic unions.

About 250 workers who have been on strike 14 weeks against the Whirlpool Corp. plant at La Porte, Ind., were considering a new contract on which their negotiators reached tentative accord Friday.

DETAILS were not revealed pending a ratification vote.

Grand Rapids, Mich., city employees voted Saturday to accept a settlement providing immediate 50-cent an hour raises and end a three-week walkout that had halted trash collections, burials at city cemeteries and other city services.

The cost of living clause demanded by Local 1061 of the American Federation of State, Municipal and County Employees was not included in the contract.

LEADERS of three labor unions in the Canton area urged members to boycott the NFL Hall of Fame game, in which the St. Louis Cardinals took on the Buffalo Bills.

One of the blue collar workers demonstrating on behalf of the NFL Players Association was president of United Auto Workers District Two, which has 85,000 members.

Bill Curry, Houston Oilers center and president of the players association, told demonstrating union members, "I can never tell you what it means to the players for you to come out and show your support."

TALKS between striking football players and the league owners broke off last weekend.

In other labor disputes, two private bus lines that operate express service between the Bronx and Manhattan in New York were in the 27th day of a

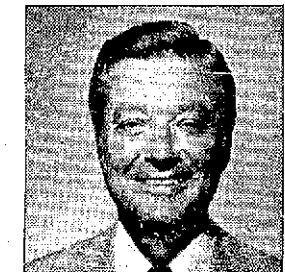

4 men killed in Texas oil tank blast and fire

INGLESIDE, Tex. (UPI) — Firemen Saturday extinguished a raging oil tank fire and later recovered the bodies of two of the four workmen killed by an explosion or the flames.

Firemen earlier had thought they would have to let the fire burn itself out because of the intense heat and smoke, but then were able to pump some of the burning oil out.

The men killed worked for the Langford Painting Co. of Corpus Christi, and were sandblasting the tank when the explosion occurred. They were all from Corpus Christi, and identified as Robert Lazos, Ramon Rodriguez, Norbet Williams and Calvin Jackson.

Most of the western portion of the nation had sunny skies Saturday. Showers and thunderstorms dumped rain on the southeastern part of the country.

Expanded food aid disputed

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — A bureaucratic dispute is under way in the Nixon administration over whether to nearly double the amount of food aid the United States sends to foreign countries, according to administration officials.

On the one hand the State Department says it views with deep concern the plight of millions in tropical Africa, South Asia and the Central American-Caribbean area and wants food aid to those areas increased as part of a $1.6 billion program.

On the other hand the Treasury Department, the Office of Management and Budget and the Council of Economic Advisers oppose the move, taking the position that any such increase in federal spending would only intensify inflation at home.

A NUMBER of State Department officials say that the world situation is nearing crisis proportions as a result of several combining factors: increase in food and fuel prices, fertilizers, shortages, unending population growth, poor harvests in underdeveloped countries and virtually no American reserve stocks of grain.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger pledged to the United Nations in April that a major effort would be made on food aid. But officials of other departments have expressed some skepticism about his concern, noting that nearly half the current program is devoted to South Vietnam and Cambodia.

If the government decides to provide more food aid, it would have to enter the grain market. Ordinarily, the effect would be to raise prices or at least halt a downward trend.

Over the last few months bumper crops have been predicted for wheat, corn and rice, with a surplus that could be funneled into aid without having much effect on domestic prices. But only the rice crop seems to have come up to expectations. Official predictions for the wheat and corn harvests have been adjusted downward, and prices have begun to rise in the last few weeks.

Supreme Court takes a shortened vacation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — All nine Supreme Court justices are expected to leave town for at least part of the summer recess, but Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, his historic decision on executive privilege behind him, wonders if he will be called to preside at an impeachment trial of President Nixon.

The usual three-month recess until October was shortened by five weeks because of a delayed decision on cross-district school desegregation in Detroit and the executive privilege decision ordering Nixon to surrender more Watergate tapes.

The recess began Thursday after the Detroit case was decided. For a brief time, the recess itself was at issue when Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., said the court should stay in session all summer because of the impeachment proceedings and associated trials. Mansfield implied the recess was a vacation.

Burger hotly disputed that as a "myth" and said all the justices would be studying petitions for review that flow onto the court docket daily.

The chief justice is trying to plan a short holiday during the next few days, his office said, but has not scheduled anything definite. He will be going to Honolulu early in August to deliver his "State of the Judiciary" message to the annual convention of the American Bar Association.

September could see Burger presiding over a Senate trial of President Nixon if the House votes to impeach Nixon. The court reconvenes on Oct. 7 and, if an impeachment trial is under way at that time, the most senior justice, William O. Douglas, could preside over the court.

Douglas was the first one to leave the court. He flew off to his summer retreat in Goose Prairie, Wash., the day before the court's last public meeting, leaving his dissenting opinion on cross-district school integration to be read by Justice William J. Brennan Jr.

Three members of the court will be vacationing in New England — Justice Potter Stewart in New Hampshire's White Mountains, Justice William H.

Rehnquist about two hours' drive away in northern Vermont and Brennan on the Massachusetts island of Nantucket.

Rehnquist will be moving into a new summer home. "We're closing the deal now and hope to move in this month or next," he said Saturday.

Justice Byron R. White will spend several weeks in his native Colorado.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. will go back to his home city of Richmond, Va., where he has an office in the federal building, to work on whatever his court office forwards to him.

Justice Thurgood Marshall's office said his vacation plans were not known and Justice Harry A. Blackmun's office said: "He didn't want them known to the press."

Computer vs. high court

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—Harold Spaeth, the Michigan State University professor who has used a computer to predict correctly 97 per cent of the Supreme Court's decisions in the last two years, says he is opposed to suggestions the computers replace the justices.

Spaeth accurately forecast both the high court decisions on President Nixon's Watergate tapes Wednesday and Detroit's cross-district busing plan Thursday — with not a single vote out of place.

out of 34 Supreme Court decisions. The only one he was wrong on was the court's decision against class action suits this year.

Spaeth's latest round of successful predictions may give his consulting business a boost. For a standard fee of $300, lawyers with cases pending before the high court or considering taking cases there can acquire the benefit of Spaeth's advice.

The fact that he can foretell the votes of the court should not cause alarm, he said.

"The predictability of the court's decisions should give the people comfort. It means consistency," he said. "It means that who wins or not is not dependent on who they are."

Adoption

My husband and I would like to find out how to go about adopting a Vietnamese orphan. We have a 4-year-old daughter of our own and would like very much to save one of these poor unfortunate children. P.M., Paramount.

The Intercountry Adoption Program of the Adoption Services Section of the State Department of Health in Los Angeles, phone 620-4365, helps arrange adoptions of foreign children. Phone them for a brochure and a preliminary application. A month or two after you call, you will be invited to an information meeting with other prospective adoptive parents. Marcia Gedanken, district supervisor of the Adoption Services Section, told ACTION LINE it takes about 1½ to 2 years to get a Vietnamese child and the average total cost for an intercountry adoption is about $1,500 plus the lawyer's fee for the final adoption procedures. The program works with six or seven private agencies that are licensed to operate overseas and have children available. These agencies provide escorts for the children to the United States. Mrs. Gedanken said it is easier to get children from Korea than from Vietnam and easier to get older children than infants.

Late exemption

My application for the homeowners' property tax exemption for 1973 was lost in transit and, as a result, my house payments were raised so the tax impound account could take care of this increase. I filed an affidavit with the county assessor's office March 10 stating I had mailed the application before the deadline and asking that the exemption be reinstated. Can you find out if it was reinstated and if I'll get a refund? The increased payments have worked a hardship on me. S.M., Lakewood.

The exemption was authorized May 8 and is now in the hands of the county auditor, who will see that a reimbursement is made, according to Steve Stewart of the county assessor's office.

ESP

I have been interested in psychic phenomena for several years and I'm particularly intrigued with the idea of life after death. So far, all I have done in this area is read books on the subject, but I'd like to become more involved in some research and perhaps participate in a seance. Can ACTION LINE get me started in the right direction? M.J., Long Beach.

You can join the American Society for Psychical Research, which holds weekly study sessions in Long Beach and other Southland communities. This nonprofit organization, which is open to both professional psychiatrists and laymen, investigates all aspects of extrasensory perception, but the group is particularly interested in life-after-death studies, according to a spokesman for the society. The members conduct experiments in such areas as telepathic communication with the dead, spirit photography and mediumship. The group also investigates reports of haunted houses. The annual dues are $20. For more information, contact the society at 170 S. Beverly Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, 276-4523 or attend one of the Long Beach study sessions, held Mondays at 8 p.m. at the Universal Center, 3212 E. Eighth St. Nonmembers must pay a $3 fee to attend one of the study sessions.

Order

In March I purchased $24.49 worth of merchandise from Spencer Gift Co. of Atlantic City, N.J. I waited weeks for the shipment to arrive and when it did, it was not properly packaged and some parts were missing or broken. I repacked the order and sent it back asking for replacement of part of the order and a refund for the part I no longer wanted. I still do not have my order or refund despite three letters of inquiry which never have been answered. Could ACTION LINE please help? Mrs. M.V., Downey.

ACTION LINE contacted the company and by now you have received your refund and new order. The delay was because the company was closed for inventory for two weeks, according to a spokesman in the customer service department.

Panel vote for impeachment of President Nixon and Assistant Atty. Gen. William Ruckelshaus.

AS THE HOUSE debate closed and the time for voting came there were few surprises.

The ayes, as the vote went down the Democratic line were soft. When the Republicans were reached, senior Republican Edward Hutchinson of Michigan boomed out his nay but the Republican ayes were also soft as Reps. Thomas Railsback of Illinois, Hamilton Fish of New York, J. Caldwell Butler of Virginia, Lawrence Hogan of Maryland, William Cohen of Maine and Harold Froelich of Wisconsin voted to impeach a Republican president.

On the first of two key votes, Froelich's aye drew an audible gasp.

His vote alone was uncertain on the basis of previous votes and statements.

The line-up of six Republicans and all three Southern Democrats on the committee in opposition to the President greatly increase chances of House passage of articles of impeachment with possibility that vote might reach 300 in the 435 member body.

IF THE HOUSE approves articles of impeachment, the charges will go to the Senate for trial where a two-thirds majority is required to remove the President.

The Judiciary Committee, which had conducted most of its investigations behind closed doors, started public debate on the charges Wednesday with each member being given 15 minutes of general debate to outline his or her general feelings.

The actual debate on specific articles started Friday morning and continued until almost midnight with the committee approving but one subsection by adjournment as Republicans demanded "specificity" in the charges and threatened a full debate on each paragraph.

By Saturday morning the Democrats and their Republican supporters of impeachment had regrouped with a new technique to attack Republican complaints. Each proimpeachment congressman was assigned a specific subject and then given backup material.

HARWICH, Mass. (UPI) — House Democratic leader Thomas P. O'Neill predicted Saturday night that President Nixon will be impeached by a margin of about 70 votes in the House of Representatives and that "only a miracle can prevent it."

The Republicans, however, headed by Reps. Charles Sandman of New Jersey and Charles Wiggins of California had decided to give up their procedural battle. They were caught unprepared by the onslaught "of specifically the President did..."

When Sandman dropped his motion to "strike" each paragraph of the article, Rep. Walter Flowers D-Ala., picked up the ball.

Flowers, under heavy criticism in his pro-Nixon home district, wanted the reasons of each charge debated in front of the committee.

The switch in tactics brought Republican complaints from the same members who on Friday had demanded "specificity."

Sandman commented, "I'm not carrying water on both shoulders," when he objected to the anti-Nixon members' outlines of the facts as they saw them in support of paragraphs.

"PLEASE, let's not bore the American people with what you (members of the committee) have heard (in evidentiary hearings)," said Sandman.

Later Rep. Carlos Moorhead said, "I think the people should understand what is going on here... They should realize the members have a paper in front of them prepared by the staff... Prepared by someone with a lot of imagination."

Hogan, a fellow Republican, twitted Sandman about his previous demands for specificity as the Democrats as much as possible allowed their Republican allies to carry the impeachment ball.

The defense of the President fell squarely on the shoulders of Wiggins, who tried to refute the relays of congressmen attacking the President. He was joined by Rep. David Dennis, R-Ind., but time after time Republican defenders gave up their five minutes of debate to Wiggins.

EVEN SO the committee moved relatively swiftly through the paragraphs of the article, approving them by a slightly changing consistent margin.

That margin dipped as low as 24 to 12 on one paragraph, the one charging the President with making false and misleading statements to the American people.

On that paragraph Flowers too voted nay as did Fish and Railsback.

As the debates continued, the American people for the first time saw the fate of a president measured by the evidence, pro and con, and by his defenders and attackers.

Finally, the last paragraph was approved and the time for the vote came.

OFFICIALLY, the first vote was on a substitute article offered by Rep. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., replacing an original article proposed by Rep. Harold Donohue, D-Mass. The Sarbanes substitute was a carefully drafted article which included points approved by the Republicans and Southern Democrats who favored impeachment. Railsback had offered significant amendment to the substitute which changed a charge that the President had "made it his policy to obstruct justice or had engaged" in a course of conduct or plan to obstruct justice.

The Sabranes article was now "perfected" and each motion to strike had been defeated.

Flowers asked to speak and then, briefly, tried to explain to the voters back home and to the supporters of the President why he was voting against the President.

Then Fish said, "my vote is not cast lightly, my decision not made in haste."

AND THEY, too, voted to impeach.

Monday the committee returns to consider additional articles including a certain one on "abuse of powers." it may pick up some additional support.

Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., also has indicated he will introduce his own article of impeachment concerning the President's refusal to obey House subpoenas.

The committee should complete its work Monday or Tuesday, a report must then be written and the articles must go through the House Rules Committee with House debate starting possibly as early as Aug. 12.

Reinecke convicted

Reinecke was accused by the Watergate special prosecutor of lying to the Senate Judiciary Committee about when he first told Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell of a financial commitment from the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. An ITT subsidiary, Sheraton Corp., had promised to underwrite the expenses of the 1972 Republican National Convention if it were held in San Diego.

Reinecke was charged with lying after he told the committee under oath that he had not discussed the offer with Mitchell until after the July 1971 settlement of a federal antitrust case against ITT. Mitchell later resigned as attorney general to become director of President Nixon's re-election campaign.

Initially there were three counts in the indictment returned April 3. One was dropped at the prosecution's request before the trial began and another was dismissed by Judge Parker after the prosecution closed its case.

Cyprus talks near accord

early Saturday "giving him full support" for Greece's position at Geneva.

But there was no immediate confirmation of the note's contents. State Department officials said only that various U.S. officials, including Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, had been in touch with Greek and Turkish officials throughout the day.

Lambreas also said the United States "advised Turkey not to violate the cease-fire and to proceed to an accord."

Movement at the Geneva talks, which were reported near failure Friday night, was spurred by the U.N. reports from Cyprus and word from Ankara that Turkey was winding down its operation on the island.

A middle-of-the-night telephone call from Kissinger to Karamanlis led to talks among Mavros, his Turkish counterpart Turan Gunes and British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan.

The Ankara reports said troop reinforcement had stopped and only resupply and maintenance shipments would continue. Turkish troop strength on the island was reliably estimated at 25,000.

Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit met with the Greek ambassador in Ankara and said the meeting had been "friendly."

Under the anticipated Geneva agreement:

—Turkish forces, which advanced from positions they held when the U.N.-sponsored truce was ordered, would stay in place, but their new positions will be labeled clearly as temporary. Later, they would be expected to pull back to the earlier positions.

—U.N. troops, which would need substantial reinforcement, would be deployed in a network of buffer zones separating Turkish-Cypriot enclaves and villages from Greek Cypriots, who surround them throughout the island.

—Political questions relating to a new constitution for Cyprus would be examined in greater depth at a new meeting of the foreign ministers within a week or so.

A key issue to be settled is the role of Cyprus in the talks. Greece, Turkey and Britain, guarantors of Cyprus' independence under a 1960 treaty, began talks here Thursday night. Cyprus is not yet represented. The agreement stemmed from a British summary of Turkish peace terms that was passed on to the Greeks for comment and counter-proposals, diplomatic sources said.

settle the four-week-old strike grew Friday after the Operating Engineers Union, Local 12, announced it was asking its 25,000 members to honor picket lines thrown up by the carpenters. Teamster Union locals had also asked their members not to cross the lines.

Carpenters in San Diego, who negotiated separately from the Los Angeles unions, will vote again on a proposed contract calling for a $3.75-an-hour pay boost. They have been on strike since June 15.

Carpenters in Northern California voted, earlier this month, to ratify a package providing for a $2.25-an-hour raise in wages and benefits in one year.

As one Southland labor dispute was settled, negotiations were to begin in another.

Contract talks between the United Aerospace Workers and McDonnell Douglas Corp., covering about 13,000 workers in the local area, will begin Thursday in Long Beach, according to Ken Bannon, UAW vice-president.

He said the current, three-year contract expires at midnight, Sept. 15.

Biggest battle since truce rips Vietnam

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist troops fired heavy artillery and rocket barrages Saturday near Da Nang and battled 3,000 government reinforcements for control of South Vietnam's second largest city, field officers said.

Lt. Gen. Ngo Quang Truong, commander of South Vietnam's northern zone, flew to the battlefield by helicopter to take personal charge of the government troops in the heaviest fighting since the still-born cease-fire of 18 months ago.

Government commanders clamped a news blackout on the casualty toll. It was believed to be heavy.

Truong, considered Saigon's best commander, ordered more infantrymen into the fight. But they were stopped cold by an entrenched Communist force.

Politics Survey criticizes politicos

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Respondents to Assemblyman Bill Bond's July mail questionnaire in his East Long Beach-Signal Hill 39th District voted a 58 per cent "fed up" verdict against elected officials and their political parties.

Bond said a 6 per cent return on total district registration of 101,875 showed 41 per cent fed up with elected officials and 17 per cent fed up with their parties. Responses on this question were solicited only from those who did not vote in last June's primary.

The Assemblyman said there was a great deal of support for legislation that would curb private pension plan abuses. The bill was stymied in the Senate's Finance Committee on a 6-6 vote with one senator absent.

"There was substantial agreement," Bond said, "indicated with my support of legislation to overhaul rape trial procedures. Current methods allow total examination of the sexual history of the rape victim and, in effect, result in the victim being tried for a crime that was committed against her. This measure, SB 1678, would make inadmissible any questioning of the victim as to sexual contacts with any person other than the accused."

Bond said there was much criticism leveled at the Legislature about forthcoming salary increases and the legislative retirement program. General concern was expressed about inflation and sharing prices.

Response to specific poll questions:

1. SPEED LIMIT—Should the maximum statewide speed limit be returned to 65 miles per hour? Yes, 18 per cent; No, 82.

Should the speed limit be returned to 65 miles per hour outside of metropolitan areas? Yes, 39; No, 61.

2. TAX LOOPHOLES—As a possible method to close tax loopholes would you favor eliminating all deductions and simply basing taxes on a flat percentage of gross income? Yes, 51; No, 49.

3. CRIME—Should the current effort to police the so-called victimless crimes (such as drug use, prostitution, homosexual acts, etc.) be reduced and more emphasis be given to the prevention and detection of crime in the streets? Yes, 72; No, 28.

4. SENIOR CITIZENS—Should state-supported institutions of higher learning provide free tuition to qualified senior citizens? Yes, 58; No, 42.

5. PRISON SENTENCE—Should a prison sentence be mandatory for anyone using a firearm in the commission of a crime? Yes, 92; No, 8.

6. EDUCATION—Should expenses of a college education be tax-deductible? Yes, 60; No, 40.

7. HOUSING—In light of federal cutbacks in housing programs should the state enter the field of financing rehabilitation and construction of housing for low to moderate income families? Yes, 31; No, 69.

Senior tax aid

Aug. 31 is the deadline for filing for senior citizens' property tax assistance, Assemblyman Joe A. Gonsalves has reminded.

The Senior Citizens' Act of 1971, authored by Gonsalves, State Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, and State Sen. Nicholas C. Petris, D-Oakland, applies to occupant homeowners who reached age 62 on or before last Jan. 1 and whose total household income for 1973 did not exceed $10,000.

Such persons are eligible for assistance on a percentage of taxes paid on the first $7,500 of assessed valuation of their homes.

China keeping just ahead in struggle to eat

By JOSEPH LELYVELD
New York Times Service

HONG KONG—China is maintaining a narrow margin of safety in her unending struggle to feed a fifth of the world's population on less than a tenth of the world's cultivated land.

Statistics on both Chinese population and food output are extremely patchy and open to dispute, but it is evident that the margin is measurable in tenths of a percentage point. The population of more than 800 million is believed to be growing at a rate of 1.7 to 2 per cent a year, which means at least 250,000 new mouths to feed each week. In a good year, the increase in production of food grains appears to be on the order of 2.5 percent.

While most experts seem to feel that China is in a position to sustain and even increase her present level of agricultural progress, the prospect of a major production breakthrough remains remote.

Indeed, Chinese economic planning is no longer pointed to the achievement of such a breakthrough as it was at the time of the Great Leap Forward in 1958 when, for a brief period of euphoria, the Chinese leadership seemed convinced that an extraordinary effort by a mobilized population could double food production in a year. Now, when China finally appears to have achieved the levels of production claimed then, the emphasis is on regional and even local self-sufficiency in food grains.

IN RETROSPECT, it can be seen that the great Chinese success has not been in the realm of increased production, but rather in the achievement of an equitable distribution system. By some estimates, per capita production of rice and wheat is actually higher in India. But serious malnutrition, which afflicts roughly a third of the Indian population, appears to have been banished from China.

If the Chinese experience has meaning for other developing countries, the lesson may be that hunger is as much a function of the social structure as it is of agricultural progress.

China regularly makes the claim that national food self-sufficiency has been achieved, but Peking continues to make major wheat purchases abroad and probably will continue to do so for a number of years. Last year, despite the best crops in the country's history, three-year agreements on wheat imports were signed with Canada, Australia and Argentina.

In addition, China spent $700 million in 1973 to purchase 20 million metric tons of wheat in the United States and 1.4 million metric tons of corn. So far this year, China has signed contracts worth $22 million for American food grains.

ANALYSTS here who try to keep track of the trade say that all of the contracts signed so far with the various exporting nations should insure the delivery of at least eight million metric tons of food grains in 1974. The final total on the year, they estimate, could prove to be on the order of nine million metric tons. In 1973, China's total food-grain imports amounted to an estimated 7.5 million metric tons.

Despite the heavy import, most analysts tend to question the Chinese claim that self-sufficiency has been achieved. The imports of wheat, it is asserted, enable China to export quantities of rice to other countries in Southeast Asia in exchange for hard currency or essential commodities. The international market price of rice is much higher than that of wheat.

The speed with which China will be able to promote new agricultural techniques may also be related to political factors. It is an axiom in China that concentration on revolutionary ideology tends to promote production, that the peasants will produce most when they are exhorted most. But production figures appear to indicate the opposite, that production tends to lag when major ideological campaigns are carried into the countryside.

IN THE current ideological campaign to criticize Lin Biao and Confucius, there have been sporadic attacks on "capitalist tendencies" in rural areas—that is, on excessive concentration on private "sideline" production by the peasants to the neglect of the collective effort on the commune's fields. Wall posters have talked also about black marketing and speculation in grain by "class enemies."

There is also evidence that officials in rural areas hesitate to exert their authority when a major campaign is under way, for fear that they will then become targets of "struggle."

"The revolution should command production, not take the place of production," a provincial newspaper declared recently. But demands that officials not be "lax in leadership" can be interpreted as a sign that many of them may be less preoccupied these days with higher production than the need to stay out of political trouble.

Brazil bans death notices of meningitis

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Brazilian authorities have clamped down on domestic publication of news about an outbreak of meningitis though a public health official said the situation has reached "epidemic" proportions.

State and federal authorities refused to give the number killed by meningitis. Friday night they ordered all the country's newspapers to refrain from publishing death figures.

Before the censorship, a Sao Paulo newspaper reported meningitis has killed 210 people so far this month in that city alone.

Emilio Ribas, a spokesman for Sao Paulo's largest hospital, said 187 persons have died in the past 15 days.

African nations hail 'peace at last'

Portugal announces decolonization

By ERIK VAN EES

LISBON (UPI) — In a potentially historic initiative, President Antonio de Spínola said Saturday that Portugal immediately will begin handing over power to the people in its African territories.

"We are ready to initiate the process of the transfer of power to the populations of Guinea (Bissau), Angola and Mozambique," Spínola said in a nationwide television address.

"We are open to all initiatives to start the process of decolonization in Africa with the immediate acceptance of the right to political independence, to be proclaimed in terms and dates to be agreed upon."

"This is the historic moment the overseas territories and the world have been waiting for, peace in Portuguese Africa, finally achieved with justice and freedom," Spínola said. "The forces of both sides can now shake hands as comrades in arms and brothers of the Portuguese-speaking world."

Portugal's 13 years of bush wars against African liberation movements, which cost the country at least 3,000 lives and half its annual $4 billion budget, led to the April 25 coup by Spínola's Armed Forces Movement against 50 years of dictatorship.

Guerrilla operations in Guinea, on the African west coast, were halted in mid-May when the new junta began peace talks. Fighting continued in Mozambique despite negotiations. Guerrilla activity has been less dramatic in Angola where three groups of freedom fighters squabble among themselves.

Spínola sent Adm. Antonio Rosa Coutinho to Angola last week to prepare the country for self-government. Overseas Minister Antonio de Almeida Santos said Mozambique would get similar local rule.

In his television speech, Spínola sought to allay white settlers' fears of a black takeover which led to race riots in Luanda, the Angolan capital, last week. Blacks outnumber whites 10 to one among Angola's 6 million population.

A white taxi driver in Lourenço Marques, capital of Mozambique, said, "This is the end," when he heard a broadcast of Spínola's speech. "We are like a bunch of sheep, herded to the market, this is a sell-out."

But a black waiter at a sidewalk cafe danced, raised his arms and sang, "It's peace at last." Blacks outnumber whites

8 million to 200,000 in Mozambique.

Spínola said Portugal would not "reject its responsibilities to the young nations and will remain a second homeland to their peoples." He said Portugal would also give financial and cultural aid.

United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim is due in Lisbon later this week to discuss the decolonization process.

Secret Witness

Summary of rewards

As part of the Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program, 10 selected summaries of cases in which rewards are offered are printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, or the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

Rewards in all cases, including those previously published, will remain in effect until the cases are closed or until notification is made in this column that the reward has been withdrawn.

To ensure eligibility for rewards, informants are required to channel all information directly through Secret Witness, either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing in care of the special Secret Witness post office box.

The summaries follow:

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Mrs. Maria Jean Hires, 23-year-old Stanton housewife whose strangled body, rolled up in drapes and a carpet, was found lying adjacent to the Yorba Linda golf course about 20 miles from her home on Oct. 29, 1972. Her car, in which she left home to go to her office on the previous day, was found parked by a bank at 2951 W. Ball Road in Anaheim, not far from her Stanton home.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of James A. Hunt III, 23-year-old night clerk shot to death during a holdup of an all-night market at 2215 W. Artesia Blvd. in Torrance in the early hours of Jan. 29, 1974.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of 28-year-old Richard Lauren Anderson of Riverside, whose slashed and beaten body was found lying in the parking lot of an apartment house at 246 S. Colin St. in Compton on Sept. 12, 1973.

—Rewards totaling $2,811—including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $811 pledged by the Fleet Reserve Association of Long Beach—will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Robert and Florence Buckley, elderly and ailing couple who were shot to death in their West Long Beach home July 10, 1973, by an intruder who ransacked the house and took the contents of a piggy bank.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Michiko Zerneno, 41, beaten to death in the living room of her Long Beach home at 321 Maine Ave. on May 11, 1973, in the presence of her 5-year-old daughter.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of 11-year-old Linda O'Keefe of Newport Beach, kidnapped and strangled on July 6, 1973, after she left Lincoln Intermediate School in the Corona Del Mar area of Newport Beach to walk to her home about a mile away.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of five young men in the Southland area since Dec. 26, 1973. The bodies, most of them sexually mutilated and one decapitated, were found in Long Beach, Seal Beach, Huntington Beach and the Los Angeles Harbor area.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Deborah Ann Baker, 18, of Fullerton, whose strangled body was found in a vacant field adjacent to Los Coyotes Country Club in Fullerton on Mar. 21, 1973.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderers of Long Beach pharmacist Patrick Horgan, 59, shot to death during a holdup of the Horgan Pharmacy at 1403 Cherry Ave. on Mar. 9, 1973.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Mrs. Helga Dorothea Brown, 64, of Long Beach, whose nude and strangled body was found on a duck pond island in Scherer Park on Sept. 23, 1973.

Health Council outlines budget

The Orange County Health Planning Council is proposing a 16-month budget of almost $350,000, is planning public hearings for this fall, and expects to broaden its work.

Dr. George Sheets, council president, said that the agency is eager to get financial support from the county, as it once had, but noted that supervisors had tabled a council request for participating funds.

He said that "county support is important to us, because our program is a partnership of health interests, and the county supervisors spend over $20 million annually on health services."

"BECAUSE of this," Dr. Sheets explained, "the supervisors ought to be interested in sound planning for the best use of that money. If they withdraw their support, we will have to cut back on certain projects. This will be a disservice to the taxpayers. But that is their responsibility and their decision."

He added that if the county scuttles its support, "our work will suffer but it will not be discontinued."

Sheets disclosed that the State Health Advisory Council has approved a plan for the council to change its four service and planning areas into seven, for better conformity to boundaries and better balance among health care institutions to each area.

"However," Dr. Sheets explained, "we are still overbedded (in acute hospital beds) in every one of the seven areas."

The groupings, called health service areas, include: Laguna Beach, San Clemente, San Juan Capistrano, Costa Mesa; portions of Irvine, Newport Beach, Fountain Valley, Huntington Beach, Seal Beach, Westminster, Buena Park, Cypress, La Palma, Los Alamitos, Anaheim, Garden Grove, Stanton, Brea, Fullerton, La Habra, Placentia, Yorba Linda, Orange, Santa Ana, Tustin and Villa Park.

How to become Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals. For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to Secret Witness at: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

This is how the last page of your "Secret Witness" letter should look after you have typed or printed your information about a crime.

DO NOT SIGN YOUR NAME. Instead, select a code name for yourself... any name, as long as it's not your own... and place it and a code number at the bottom of your letter. The code number should combine three letters and three numbers in any combination.

Tear off and keep a corner of the last page, with the same code name and number on it. Mail your letter to "Secret Witness," P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, 90801.

AIR CONDITIONED TOWNHOMES ... at water-oriented Lakes community in Long Beach

Luxury found at Cypress Monterey

A large measure of credit for the success of Cypress Monterey, a new townhome community by Showcase Homes, is due to the master craftsmanship evident throughout the development.

Cypress Monterey has been built under strict quality control measures consistent with the policies originally instituted by William J. Krueger, president of the firm and pioneer Orange County

Opened in March of this year, 114 of the luxurious one and two-story townhomes have already been sold, including 11 in the first week of July, a record for the firm.

The $5.5 million development at Valley View Avenue and Ball Road will contain 187 one, two and three bedroom, 1, 2 or 2½ bath, air-conditioned townhomes.

"ATTENTION to detailing and personal follow-through on each phase of construction by each project superintendent contributes substantially to the continuing success of Krueger's housing products," notes Randy Anable, vice president of Kurth & Associates, sales agent for Cypress Monterey.

"One of his policies is to hire the same sub-contractors for each project because familiarity with Showcase Homes' systems and requirements leads to greater efficiency and consistency of standards."

Anable noted that "excellence is contagious. Mutual respect for fine craftsmanship stimulates each sub-contractor to accomplish his best work and, at Cypress Monterey, the results are self-evident."

"Quality materials used throughout also encourage good work and quality workmanship becomes the natural goal."

PRICED from $25,995, the town homes are complete with built-in kitchen appliances, private patios and two or three-car garages. Shag carpeting, draperies, top-quality hardware and lighting fixtures are price-included.

With a reputation for innovative residential design, William J. Krueger has created Cypress Monterey with no overlap of living areas. No one lives above or beneath another family.

To see the outstanding residential community, exit the Artesia Freeway at Valley View Street and drive south to the development.

An alternate route is to exit the Garden Grove Freeway or the San Diego Freeway at Valley View and drive north. Furnished models and the sales information center, under the direction of Kurth & Associates, sales agents, are open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk.

A new departure from conventional townhome developments is grand opening in Long Beach today at The Lakes, residential community overlooking man-created lakes, rippling streams and tumbling waterfalls.

Since pre-opening sales at the $7½ million water-oriented community began, approximately half of the 260 one and two-story air-conditioned residences have been sold. To show the remaining townhomes, Lintz, Langslet and Caldwell, the builder, has refurbished the models to present them in a new manner.

The development, at the intersection of the San Gabriel River Freeway (605) and Spring Street, has been constructed on three lakes in a park-like setting. The fresh waters are stocked with fish. A natural atmosphere has been maintained by the addition of full-grown pine, spruce and olive trees; flowers, rocks, and boulders.

Lintz, Langslet and Caldwell, builders of communities in Southern California for 25 years, cites The Lakes as one of its outstanding projects and predicts it will serve as an ecologically-balanced model of well-planned land use for years to come.

FIVE distinctive floorplans are offered. Model X is a two-story residence with a single spacious bedloft overlooking the lower living area.

A central kitchen, conveniently adjacent to the formal dining area is an outstanding feature of the one-bedroom, one-story Model Y. A two-story adaptation of this residence is Model Y+ which, additionally, features a fireplace on the lower level and a bedloft-den overlooking the cathedral ceiling living room. Access to an outdoor deck from the bedloft is through a sliding glass door.

Model Z is a spacious one-story residence with two bedrooms and two baths. The living room features a fireplace and sliding glass door access to an outdoor deck, shared with one of the bedrooms. Model Z+ converts one of the bedrooms to a den and offers an additional bedroom and double attached garage.

STANDARD with each townhome at The Lakes is plush wall-to-wall carpeting. Heavy-gauge insulation virtually sound-proofs each home for privacy and climate control.

The Lakes enjoys a location that is freeway close to recreational opportunities including beaches, marinas, parks, golf courses, plus places of employment and fine shopping.

Recreation-oriented, the community includes a clubhouse complete with lounges and equipped kitchen, reservable for residents' private parties.

For further enjoyment, the development has its own lighted tennis courts, heated swimming pools, hydrotherapy pools, sauna baths, billiards and gymnasium.

Residences start from $23,500. Sales office is open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk.

SPACIOUS PLANS

Shadow Run in La Palma open

Shadow Run, new luxury home community opening today in La Palma, has been planned for the buyer who would really like to design and build his own home, but doesn't have the limitless time or resources to do so.

Four spacious floor plans and 12 different elevations—including three two-story and one single-story—provide a wide range of alternatives at this new $6.4 million community by Warmington Development, Inc., long established Southern California homebuilder.

Shadow Run is convenient to buyers from the greater Los Angeles metropolitan area. The La Palma area provides ready accessibility to downtown Los Angeles, Long Beach and the coastal communities of Orange County as well as the periphery of suburban areas.

Open floor planning, expansive glass areas, two-story living rooms, free standing stairways and floor-to-ceiling wood-burning fireplaces are some of the more striking interior features.

PRACTICAL traffic patterns on the first floors work from the entries to the family room and kitchen complex, by-passing formal living and dining areas. Upstairs, the master suites—some with balconies, all with private baths and dressing areas—are located at one end of a central hall (in most plans) with the other bedrooms grouped at the opposite end. In all floorplans, the bedroom-bath sector is secluded and insulated from the normal sounds of activity elsewhere in the house.

Family rooms, designed to serve as a combination of sitting rooms, casual dining areas and entertainment centers, open onto large back yard and patio areas (minimum size for lots is 6,000 sq. ft.).

Each home also includes a garden view kitchen with breakfast bars or patio serving bars. Some models also have formal dining rooms.

Tiled kitchen counters, continuous-cleaning double ovens, dishwashers, built-in pantries and first-floor powder rooms are further evidence of the custom feeling at Shadow Run.

THE HOUSES are flexible enough to allow buyers to determine the function for a given room, or tailor a room for any use.

Extra bedrooms are spaced and placed for easy conversion into den areas that can double as guest rooms. Secondary bedrooms are sufficiently spacious—averaging 180 square feet—to provide ample room to "grow" with the children.

Plan Four is the largest of the homes at 2264 square feet with four bedrooms and a bonus room which can be divided into a fifth bedroom and guest room-retreat or retained as a game room.

One feature is the free-standing staircase leading to an upstairs hallway that looks out over the two story living room.

Plan Three is a large house designed around a "grand entry" staircase that leads to the upper level. The plan has four bedrooms, and enormous family room with built-in wet bar, and a large formal dining room.

Plan Two features the same second story balcony design found in plan Four.

Plan One is the only single-story home at Shadow Run and features a floor-to-ceiling fireplace in the living room. This home has three bedrooms, one of which is easily converted into a den or guest room.

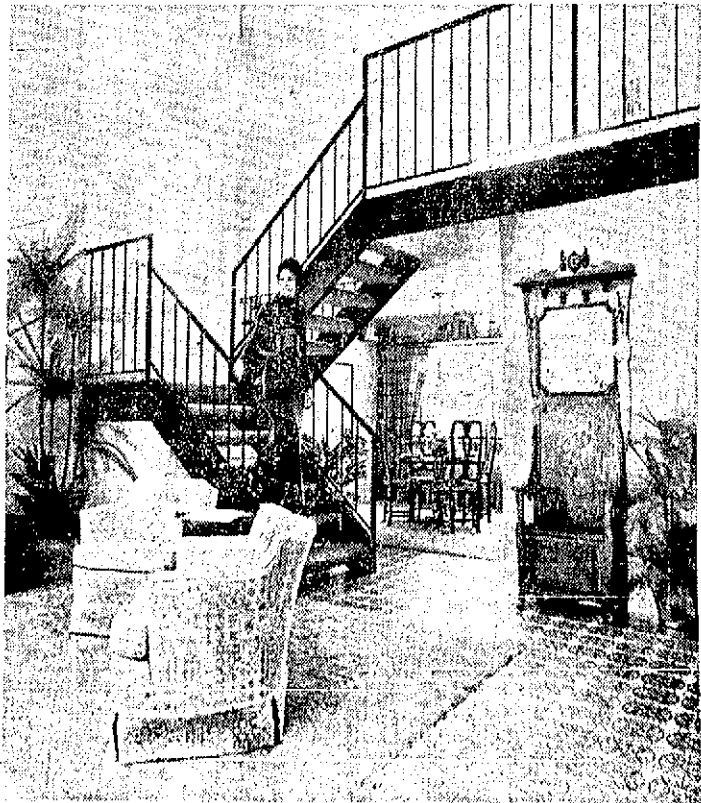

COMPRISING a prestigious community for 62 families, the homes are priced from $45,990 to $55,990 with each of the floorplans available in three individualized exterior styles.

Also included as part of the package are wall-to-wall carpeting, gas forced air heating and oversized two-car garages with plenty of room for workshops or laundry facilities.

Initial move-ins for the first phase of 31 dwellings are expected by late December.

Four furnished and decorated models are open daily from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. at 7012 Summerset Circle.

QUIET LUXURY EVIDENT ... at Cypress Monterey by Showcase Homes

Westport Cerritos Villas sell quickly at 1-a-day

The two and three-bedroom townhomes of Westport Cerritos Villas are being purchased at a rate of nearly one a day. For the two-week period ending July 21, a dozen homes in the park-like development were sold.

Built and presented by Westport Home Builders, Inc., of Anaheim, the close-in townhomes in the city of Cerritos can be financed through FHLA, VA, Cal-Vet and conventional loans, according to Merrill Pugnire, Westport's director of marketing.

The roomy townhomes with updated, innovative design features are priced from $25,650. There is no down payment on VA loans.

Available for immediate occupancy, the family townhome villas in one and two-story elevations are done in rough woods and finely textured stucco exteriors.

Lawns and lush landscaping surround the dwelling clusters and the recreation center where residents have exclusive use of a large heated swimming pool, children's playground, furnished clubhouse and sauna.

SUCH price-included features within the homes as wall-to-wall carpeting in all primary areas, a complete line of quality built-in appliances in kitchens with luminous ceilings and bonus storage space, and attached two-car garages with easy access to the homes are standard throughout the development.

Now in its final phase of construction, 175 of the 228 townhomes in Westport Cerritos have been purchased. Centrally located for easy shopping and family services, the villas are just off the Artesia Freeway (91) and handy to employment centers of Long Beach, Lakewood, Los Angeles and northern Orange County.

The well known Los Cerritos shopping mall with major department stores and 64 satellite shops is just minutes away by car.

ALL exterior maintenance including the recreation areas, are done by professionals through a homeowner's association elected by the owners of Westport Cerritos Villas.

To reach the villa townhomes, take the Artesia Freeway and exit at Bloomfield Avenue or Norwalk offramps, then turn north to 166th Street. Models are open daily from 10 a.m. and are located on 166th between Bloomfield and Norwalk.

ONE OF EIGHT ELEVATIONS . . . at Elegante Del Amo project

Elegante Del Amo sells before opening

Preview sales have begun with nearly one third of a limited edition of 29 Elegante Del Amo homes already sold, according to W. Scott Biddle, president of Biddle Development, Inc., builders of the single-family-home project in Cerritos.

A formal grand opening is scheduled for Sept. 1, with home prices ranging from $46,900 to $54,990 for the three and four-bedroom models. Four elevations are available for each of the two floor plans offered.

Biddle stated that each home includes custom fireplace, complete deluxe built-in appliances with trash compactor, central air conditioning, pool-sized lots and a choice of elevations with wood shake or tile roofs.

Construction completion is set for October. Elegante Del Amo is located at Del Amo Boulevard, between Norwalk and Pioneer Boulevards.

Tiffany Realty, Inc. is sales agent for the project.

Mission Viejo Co. moves headquarters

Negotiations have been completed for Mission Viejo Co., the planned community builder, an operating subsidiary of Philip Morris Inc., to move its corporate headquarters into a new building being developed in Mission Viejo by Mape Industries, Newport Beach development firm.

Making the announcement, Vance Mape III, vice president and head of Mape Industries' Southern California operations, noted his firm originally had bought the land to build offices for leasing to small business firms.

Mission Viejo Co. then decided to lease the entire structure from Mape Industries for a 10-year period. General contractor on the project is Johnson & Mape Construction Co., a Mape Industries subsidiary.

The new building is on the site of the former La Paz Homes model complex, a 2.5-acre parcel at 24800 Chrisanta Drive. The 30,000-square-foot, two-story building is between the Security Pacific National Bank and the Mount of Olives Lutheran Church. Work was started on the $1¼-million project in April.

Mission Viejo Co. is expected to occupy it in October.

Sales at Spyglass

The sale of nine homes valued at over $1.65 million was recorded over the recent four-day 4th of July weekend at Spyglass Hill in Corona del Mar.

The second phase of Spyglass, consisting of 53 homes in this John D. Lusk & Son development, is now 80 per cent sold with 11 units remaining.

One and two-story homes with from three to six bedrooms are available, priced from $118,000 to $218,000. Nine additional new homes are now being offered for sale within the first phase of the Spyglass community. These homes are being built in the area of the decorated model complex for that phase.

The model complex of six furnished homes may be seen daily at 15 Bodega Bay Drive, Corona del Mar.

$235⁰⁰* a month for a 3 bedroom 2 bath townhome.

And for the first year, your payments can be only $135.64 a month. That's right, $135.64. $135.64 for your brand new Larwin home. A payment so low you may be able to buy new furniture. Or pay off other bills. And start building equity immediately. Larwin has developed the "Great Take-Off" program that takes away the burden of high monthly house payments.

This is how it works: For example, on a $37,490 home, you would normally have to make a monthly house payment of $235.64. However, under our "GTO" program, Larwin sends you a check for $100 every month for 12 full months. So your monthly payment is only $135.64. Of course, there are comparable savings on homes in other price ranges. But in order to qualify for Larwin's "Great Take-Off" program, you must take title to your new home by August 23, 1974.

So if you're buried under high monthly payments, this can mean a new financial life. Visit a Larwin community today and talk to our sales representatives. Take off $100 a month from your house payment. And take off into a brand new life.

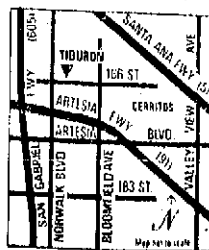

Now, VA and FHA buyers who purchase homes under this program will receive special benefits in the form of a 7-3/4% interest rate (8-1/4% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE). Loan maximums are $33,000 on 3 bedroom homes and cannot exceed $36,750 on homes of 4 bedrooms or more.

Typical Veteran Loan Comparison: (1) Regular VA loan. For a typical $37,490 home, $4,490 down payment. First trust deed of $33,000 paid in 354 equal monthly payments of $266.53 principal and interest at 9% simple interest, 9-3/4% APR. (2) Special VA loans. For a $37,490 home, $4,490 down payment. First trust deed of $33,000 paid in 354 equal monthly payments of $237.42 principal and interest at 7-3/4% simple annual rate, 8-1/4% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE.

The savings to buyer amounts to $29.11/month or $10,304.94 over the 354 month life of the loan.

*Typical Financing: Cash sales price $37,490. Down payment $7,590. First Trust Deed $29,900. Paid in 354 equal payments of $235.64 P+I at 8-1/4% simple annual rate, 8-3/4% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE No 2nd Trust Deed. From $37,490.

Many Long Beach area beach houses boast windows covered with a new solar control film manufactured by the 3M Company. Portion of window at right is "filmed" while portion at left is not. Sun damage to drapes and furniture is reduced. From outside, film has silver reflective look for added privacy. Spokesmen also said film reduces energy required to cool structures.

Q — The paint on the outside of our wooden house is chalking in spots. Is it all right to apply latex paint over it?

A — Generally, latex paint does not always bond well to chalking surfaces. When repainting with exterior latex, remove the chalk by scrubbing, sanding or steel wooling. However, latex paint formulations have been improved so much recently, it is as well to read the label to see what it says about chalking. Or, if you wish, you can apply an oil-base paint over the old paint.

Q — WIIY is heavy building paper put over a subfloor before the finish floor is installed?

A — It prevents dust from working up through the finish floor, reduces air filtration from crawl spaces in basementless houses, retards moisture from rising through the floor from damp basements or from the soil in basementless houses. Sound engineers say it also has some value as a sound deadener.

Q — I'd like to apply a water stain to wood floor to darken the color, but have been told that nothing with water in it should be put on a wood floor. Is that correct?

A — Generally, yes. What you should use is an oil stain or a nongrain-raising stain.

Q — I recently replaced the washer in the cold water faucet in our bathroom sink. It stopped the leak from the mouth of the faucet all right but now, every time the faucet is turned on, a few drops of water come out from under the big nut on the stem under the handle. How can I stop this leak?

A — Shut off the water at the valve under the sink or, if there isn't one, at the main shutoff valve. Remove the faucet handle. Loosen the nut by turning it counterclockwise. If you put adhesive tape on the jaws of the wrench, there is less chance of damaging the fixture's finish. After the nut is loose, slide it up the stem and remove it. Inside it you will find packing (a stringlike material), which should be removed with an awl or other pointed tool. Put in new packing, then replace the nut and faucet handle. Turn on the water.

Q — ASIDE from the fact that ball pein hammers have no claws on them to withdraw nails, how do they differ from ordinary hammers?

A — A ball pein hammer is used principally for hitting cold chisels and for shaping metal. It has a slightly curved face with bevelled edges to facilitate its uses.

THE PRODUCT — A patching material that can be applied like a piece of tape.

Named
Donald Bachrach (above), 25, has been named an assistant to Joseph Eichenbaum, developer of Lakewood Shopping Center and other regional facilities in Southland.

Manufacturer's claim — That the material is a piece of fiber-glass cloth impregnated with polyester resin that hardens into a waterproof, rigid, reinforced repair when exposed to sunlight or a sunlamp ... that the damaged surface is first cleaned, after which a green liner is peeled from the 4 by 6-inch repair material ... that the patch is then pressed against the wood, metal or fiber-glass surface, adhering on contact ... that, once the patch has hardened, a clear top liner is peeled away, after which the patch can be sanded and painted to match the color and finish of the repaired surface ... and that the patch may be used on many types of damage, including cracked fiber-glass shower stalls, gutters, downspouts and screens or any metal, wood or fiber-glass surface.

THE PRODUCT — An extra-long prefinished plank for rooms with high ceilings.

Manufacturer's claim — That the 16-inch by 10-foot plank is one-quarter-inch thick so that it can be installed over old walls or new framing ... that, although it is two feet longer than most paneling, it is only one-third the width, making it possible for a home handyman to handle it without a helper ... that tongue-and-groove edges simplify fitting ... that concealed metal clips and wallboard adhesive assure a strong bond ... and that the only maintenance required is an occasional damp wiping.

THE PRODUCT — A multi-purpose tool.

Manufacturer's claim — That the unit, with attachments, is designed to cultivate and pulverize soil, edge along sidewalks and gardens, rough sand metal and wood, scrape paint and rust, and wire-brush especially difficult projects ... that the tool weighs only 4½ pounds, has a 2.4 amp motor and reciprocates attachments at 1,750 strokes per minute ... that it is double insulated, has a plastic housing with forward and rear handles for easy and safe control and features a new detachable cord concept which provides direct secure connection of the extension cord to the unit.

THE PRODUCT — A ground fault circuit interrupter.

Manufacturer's claim — That the unit is for installation in standard, residential circuit breaker panels ... that it is designed to provide protection against overload and short circuits ... that it conforms to the recent updating on Jan. 1 of the National Electrical Code which says that all new 15-amp and 20-amp outdoor residential receptacles must have circuit interrupters, as well as those located near swimming pools and equipment used with storable pools.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," invaluable around the house. It can be obtained by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

(The multipurpose tool is manufactured by Black & Decker, Towson, Md. 21204; the paneling by Marlite, Dover, Ohio 44622; the patching material by 3-M Co., St. Paul, Minn. 55133; the circuit interrupter by Cutler-Hammer, 4201 N. 27th St., Milwaukee, Wis. 53216.)

Conservation

CANBERRA, Australia (UPI) — Since assuming office a year ago the Labor government has taken steps to outlaw the export of crocodile and kangaroo skins in an effort to protect them from possible extinction. Import of whale meat has been stopped as well as trade in other endangered species of mammals, birds and reptiles.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Closings remain complicated

By DON G. CAMPBELL

One of the more baffling rituals in modern society is the curious mumbo-jumbo that goes on around the table when a piece of real estate changes hands.

The "closing," as it is called, looks like some peculiar and highly complex poker game with buyer, seller, lender and various lawyers furiously shuffling papers back and forth.

Periodically, a plaintive call for reform — some way of streamlining the procedure — is heard, but it may not come in our own lifetime.

MR. CAMPBELL:

This being my first experience in selling a home, I would greatly appreciate it if you would please give me an answer to the following questions. I would like to know something about what I have to go through before contacting a real estate salesman. What are the procedures — such as:

(1) What expenses does the seller have to pay, and to whom? (2) Also, who pays for the search, lawyers' fees, sales taxes and any other expenses after the deal has been made? Would greatly appreciate and be very thankful to you for this information. — D. A. K. (Buffalo, N.Y.)

ANSWER: Despite the confusion of the normal "closing" ceremony in a real estate sale you may be able to take some comfort in the fact that most of the nagging little "extras" that pop up are the responsibility of the buyer, rather than the seller.

Don't take too much comfort in it, though, because you pick up the tab on a few of them including the single, largest, expense involved: The sales commission on the transaction.

In addition to the commission you'll find yourself paying a series of minor charges such as the acknowledgment on the deed, state stamps on the deed, Federal stamps, abstract continuation and the legal expense for drawing the deed — none of them very horrendous.

The buyer, on the other hand, pays no commission, of course, but gets stuck with a few hundred dollars for such items as the prorated cost of the insurance on the property, prepayment on the mortgage interest for a portion of the year, the mortgage service charge, the appraisal, tax and stamps for the mortgage, the credit report, title insurance, acknowledgment of the mortgage, the recording of the deed, the recording of the mortgage and the attorney's fee.

For you — the seller — however, there's another big joker in this deck. I order for the buyer to get the mortgage he will have to buy your house, that is, you may be forced to give up "points."

What are "points"? This is a nice-nice term for "discount" — a concession to the lender to compensate him for the difference between the interest he will get on the mortgage and the interest that he would otherwise get by investing his money in a different type of market.

Let's say that you're selling your house for $30,000 and your buyer has a down payment of $10,000. That leaves a $20,000 mortgage to be financed and the going rate in your area is 8½ per cent.

But, the lender argues, he can get 9 per cent, or better, or a good corporate bond or even more than that on short-term commercial paper.

So it's up to the seller to give him a "sweetener" in the form of points, and the going rate for points in your area is 5 — 5 per cent off the top.

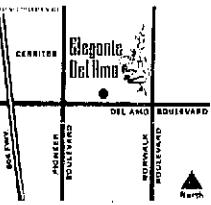

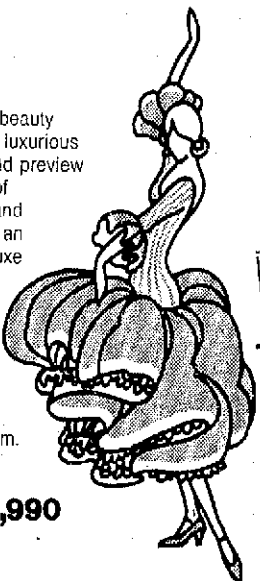

This means that the mortgage will be written for $20,000, all right, but 5 per cent of this goes into the lender's pocket and you, as the seller, get $19,000 instead of $20,000.

Unfair? Practically everyone agrees that it is, but it is also a harsh fact of life. And the seller is "it."

Church has mortgage idea

BEL AIR, Md. (AP) — A priest here is asking his parishioners to "lend $1,000 to God," in a mortgage paying idea that may provide hope for churches across the country facing a financial threat from high interest rates on loans.

The Rev. Alphonse Rose, pastor of the St. Margaret Catholic Church here has already raised $360,000.

Through the drive to get 850 parishioners to give the church $1,000 each in interest-free loans, Father Rose hopes to pay off, in full, what remains of the church's $830,000 mortgage on its five-year-old building.

The church office has been deluged with mail from churches across the country about the plan that might offer them a way of beating rising interest rates which threaten many churches with financial ruin, according to the church secretary.

FATHER Rose offers two ways of paying back the loans. The method most parishioners have chosen pays one-tenth of the loan back each year over 10 years, with the order of payment being determined at random.

The other method establishes a schedule for repayment. The church also maintains a fund in escrow to provide immediate repayment to families that find themselves in financial trouble.

Since all the loans are interest free, the church is saved from paying interest on the mortgage.

Father Rose says the interest rate on the mortgage soared from 5 per cent to 11 per cent in the past five years. The church was paying over $200 daily in interest, the priest said.

"We had to do something because our money was consumed on the interest rather than the principal," he said.

St. Margaret's parishioners have come up with different ways to find the $1,000 to loan, the priest said.

ONE teenager gave the money he had saved from cutting lawns with the understanding that he could call his loan when he started college.

Other parishioners borrowed the $1,000 from banks and intend to write off the interest on their income taxes, Father Rose said. Churches, of course, don't pay taxes.

The pastor said the campaign to secure interest-free loans, which began in March, has not cut into the weekly offerings which sustain the church's $300,000 annual budget.

Closings complicated

couple and my husband wants to retire at about 72. The only thing we own is a house that we bought a year ago for $30,000 and on which we've spent about $2,000.

Now we can sell the house for $43,000, and the only thing we can buy and invest about $6,000 in is another brand new home for $30,000 (a smaller place) by taking over some payments at 7 per cent in the hopes that, in seven years, we can sell it for $40,000.

Or we could stay put in the hopes that this home might go higher, but we don't know if the present home will stay the same seven years from now. We don't know much about real estate and we've never had a chance like this before — Mrs. C. N. (San Diego).

ANSWER: Yes, it's very true that there's no way of knowing whether your present home will — 7 years from now — be handing in there at the $43,000 level, or whether it will have gone up even further in value, or whether it will have receded in value.

But wouldn't the same series of questions be hanging over you the minute you sold your present home and bought the $30,000 one? What makes you think this second home will have appreciated from $30,000 to $40,000 by 1981?

Now, it's true that the residential real estate market has appreciated impressively, year by year, over the past couple of decades, and it's rare to hear of a home seller taking a loss on a house that he's held for five or 10 years.

What realty boards are doing

LONG BEACH
Speaker for Tuesday's 7:30 a.m. meeting of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors will be Kenneth Davis, certified public accountant.

Program chairman Pauline Singer said his topic will be "Taxes in '74 and You."

Jack Saxon, president of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors, has announced that in Chicago Joseph B. Doherty, president of the 500,000-member National Association of Realtors, urged President Nixon to take "immediate action" to delay Citicorp and other bank holding companies from offering high-yield securities in competition with savings accounts.

If banks are allowed to offer securities to the public through their holding companies, Doherty said, "the action has the potential to draw many billions of dollars out of the housing market."

Savings deposits are the nation's primary source of housing funds. Interest rates on deposits in commercial banks, savings and loan associations and savings banks are limited by the federal government so that rates will not force interest costs of housing beyond the reach of the American homebuyer.

While the limits apply to banks, they do not apply to bank holding companies. Thus commercial banks could circumvent savings rate ceilings by offering high-yield securities — which are not bank deposits but uninsured debt obligations — through their holding companies.

Doherty urged that President Nixon delay the securities offerings until Congress has reviewed their relationship to savings rate interest regulations and their impact on housing. He asked the President to "encourage Congressional efforts to examine this problem in its full context and to enact legislation to protect the soundness of the housing market."

Doherty today also commended Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, for the Fed's efforts to postpone for two weeks Citicorp's issuance of securities.

Citicorp, the $44 billion holding company of the First National City Bank of New York, had announced its plan to offer $850 million in 15-year, $5,000 minimum notes available in $1,000 increments, redeemable at six-month intervals and carrying an interest rate 1 per cent above the average three-month Treasury bill.

Warren G. Ringer, president of the Rancho Los Cerritos Board of Realtors, announced Ray T. Smith, member of the Rancho Los Cerritos Board of Realtors, California Real Estate Association 22nd District Regional Vice President and past mayor of the City of Bellflower, has been appointed to the Los Angeles County district attorney's advisory committee.

"If you want to sell your house in the worst way, sell it yourself — that's the worst way," said realtor Warren G. Ringer, president of the Rancho Los Cerritos Board of Realtors.

President Ringer explained that too often homeowners seek advice and opinions from unqualified "experts" in selling their homes.

Look who's come downtown to shop

IT WAS 10 in the morning and I was elbow deep in expensive upholstery, waiting outside the corporate inner sanctum where a meeting was about to adjourn, or so the secretary told me between calls which sounded like they might be coming from Vancouver (as in Canada) or Malaga (as in Spain).

A nearby table groaned with issues of all the latest magazines I hadn't read—or seen before. Titles like Building Design and Construction, Forbes, Shopping Center World, Concrete Construction, Professional Builder and Bob Hope Desert Classic. I wondered how Bob Hope got in there.

Soon, young company executives filed by with plans, maps and memo pads. Ernest W. Hahn, the picture of sartorial splendor, emerged to greet me. He apologized for having to bother with things such as staff meetings.

His office was handsomely furnished with rare mementoes from faraway places, paintings and one of those big desks that would drive me up the pecky cypress walls (no drawers). One new painting had not made it to the wall yet.

"THAT'S OUR proposed development in Billings, Mont.," Hahn explained. I commented it was a far cry from Los Cerritos Shopping Center—or any of his other developments I had seen. He concurred.

"This innovative concept was presented Wednesday at an announcement luncheon attended by 500 Billings civic leaders," he said, smiling proudly. "My partner, Bruce Crippen, told the crowd that for six months he had been unable to obtain any ideas or schematic plans from me about their proposed mall—so, his story was, he had sent an artist to the architect for a 'rendering' in oils. With that prelude, he pulled out this painting."

It pictured a vast lone prairie, a cowboy, Indian, two horses, a hitching post, cactus as far as you could see and a forelorn Western-style trading post with "Sunshine Mall" lettered across the front.

He assured me the Billings spoof is not what we can expect for a Hahn-styled redevelopment in downtown Long Beach, which is what I went to talk to him about.

ONE OF THE nation's most prolific producers of glorified shopping extravaganzas, Hahn is the developer who appeared at a City Council meeting recently and went back to his office in Hawthorne with an exclusive six-months negotiating contract to explore possibilities of building what everybody's been screaming for: a regional shopping mall in downtown Long Beach.

If you've been reading the papers, you already know that. What I wanted to hear from Hahn was encouragement that this time it was really going to happen—that downtown Long Beach will become so vital you'll have to go somewhere else to see a vacant store, get your purse snatched, see "Deep Throat," buy a porno magazine, lunch on a bowl of watered-down vegetable soup or pay to park in a littered and cracked parking lot.

Hahn, who has developed 90 million square feet of shopping centers in this country and abroad, was encouraged and encouraging. He cited the city's new proposed transportation center, planned middle-income housing in the core area, the new civic center, the Pacific Terrace and other developments as the pluses.

"With any degree of logic and some patience, I think we will be able to build shopping facilities covering a six-block area," he said. That is comparable in size to the Carson Mall—but would be vastly different in concept.

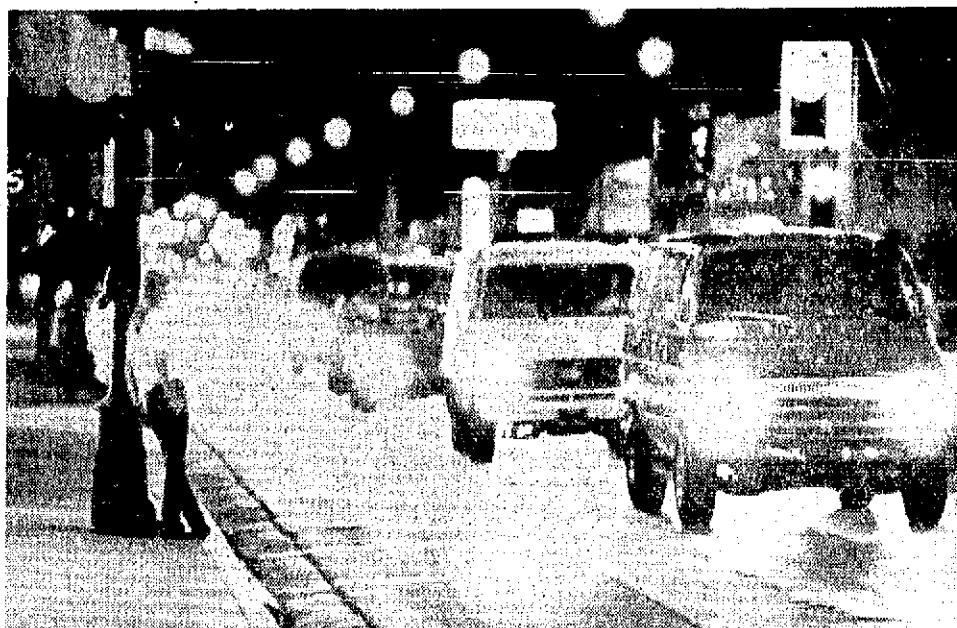

"WE SEE in Long Beach an opportunity to use the Buffums' store as a strong focal point," he said. "In addition, we would be exploring a store comparable to the Broadway or May Co. and hope to interest a facility like Robinson's. We would look into the possibility of creating new units for stores already there, like Penney's...and I think, perhaps, Montgomery Ward's may be interested."

"We would think in terms of an interesting mix of stores, restaurants of all kinds, entertainment, office space, reading rooms, art displays...perhaps an ice-skating rink, health spa and tennis club...also meeting rooms for group luncheons and dinners...shrubbery, plazas...all that."

Of course, it won't be easy. "If it were, the problem would have been solved long ago," is the way Hahn put it.

The biggest problem is the high price of downtown land.

But he assured, Downtown redevelopment never looked so promising. Otherwise, Ernest W. Hahn—busy man that he is—wouldn't be shopping here.

Cindy is an attractive, blonde, almost-16-year-old Lakewood girl who had tried to explain to her parents why cruising Bellflower Boulevard was all right.

"The sheriff's deputies are there directing traffic, making sure that there is no trouble," she told her mother.

One recent Wednesday at 11:15 p.m. she was in a pickup truck with her boyfriend Jeff, 16, who will also be a junior at Lakewood High School this fall. They were stopped by a sheriff's roadblock near the Artesia Freeway and "the boulevard."

Asked their ages, each responded, and they were ordered to the side of the road. There they waited for 15 minutes eventually to be taken from the truck, handcuffed, cited for loitering, and hauled off to Lakewood sheriff's station where they were held until 3:30 a.m. before being released to their parents.

There was no fine, but Jeff paid $20 to get his truck back after it had been towed away. And the youngsters were warned that next time they would go to court.

Cindy's mother was scandalized. "I want these kids to have a good attitude about the police, and now this happens. They had just left the house 15 minutes before. They were on their way someplace (Cindy was looking for a cousin at a theater on the Boulevard, she said), and then back home. They weren't loitering."

They were, however, at the wrong place at the wrong time.

At the request of the Bellflower City Council, sheriff's deputies have moved in on the Bellflower Boulevard cruisers in force this summer in an attempt to at least reduce the problems of congestion and harassment of merchants and residents.

The deputies working the boulevard are from Lakewood station and are there on overtime. On a busy night, 22 will be assigned to jobs of traffic and curfew enforcement and processing the youngsters back at the station. The bill to the city for one night of such enforcement is about $1,200.

City officials explain that they have moved in on the problem with some trepidation, and the deputies are trying to handle the enforcement effort with care.

"There is no doubt that 90 or 95 per cent of these kids are good kids, who are just there to see and be seen. That's healthy. There is nothing wrong with that," says Bellflower Mayor Clyde Wilson.

But, says the mayor, the boulevard "has at times been so crowded that nothing could get through there." Two fire stations are located nearby. Fire and police vehicles need to be able to get through on a moment's notice. City officials can't point to an emergency response yet that has been catas-

Popeil case before Mark Brandler

An intriguing trial for jogging judge

(The Popeil murder-conspiracy case, an alleged $50,000 "contract" on Chicago multimillionaire Samuel J. Popeil, goes into the second week of trial in Los Angeles Monday. For the retired judge assigned to hear it, the trial is the latest in a series of headline cases during a long and distinguished career.)

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Mark Brandler, the "jogging judge," has just run into one of the most intriguing cases in his distinguished life.

Now semiretired, his judicial career in Los Angeles County is transcribed in legal records and on the pages of a best seller.

He learned of his new assignment Friday, July 12, shortly after returning from his daily three-mile run along the bridle paths of Beverly Hills.

The call came from the presiding judge of the Superior Court:

"Would you start Monday on the Popeil murder conspiracy case in Department 53?"

Three mornings later, Monday, July 15, he was up, as usual, at 5 a.m., had finished his jog by 6:45, strode into court at 8:15 and began a day that was to end only after he had read through a two-inch-thick case file at midnight.

What makes Mark run?

Sheer exuberance, energy to burn, abundant curiosity and discipline, a life-long fascination with the law, a delight in hard, demanding work and a love of physical exertion, according to his and his co-workers' analysis.

At 64 he is a trim 6-foot, 180-pound dynamo with a mobile, sensitive face, sandy hair, blue eyes, staccato speech. The word "stroll" is alien to his vocabulary and metabolism: He strides or darts. Even when he sits on the bench he is still in motion. His pencil flashes across pages of yellow legal pads, keynoting testimony for his tape recorder mind, his eyes ceaselessly covering the witness, the jury, the counsel table, the spectators—missing nothing.

His recall is instant and total, to the exact wording and sequence of questioning. His rulings are equally prompt and his familiarity with cases cited by counsel is extensive.

He laughs easily but tolerates no departure from his strict standards of courtroom decorum. He's impatient with nit-picking by counsel and frequently rephrases their questions for them.

He's been a topnotch prosecutor himself, and as a deputy district attorney for 16 years had a no-lose record. His cases included those against William Bonelli, Joseph Shaw and the long, involved housecleaning of the city Board of Education in 1950-51.

Largely as the result of this series of cases, he says, in 1953 he was appointed to the Municipal bench by Gov. Earl Warren as his last appointment before leaving to become chief justice of the Supreme Court.

Four years later Judge Brandler was appointed to the Superior Court. For the next 13 years he presided over these headline cases: the Sheldon Graff $1-million forgery, the McKesson-Robbins grand theft trial, the Robert Douglas Hill murder trial and the one that got him into the best seller: the Smith-Powell trial, subject of Joseph Wambaugh's "The Onion Field."

During the course of that case he convened court from a card table set up in the onion field near Bakersfield where the two men executed policeman Ian Campbell and pursued a second officer who miraculously escaped.

In a statement after conviction, Judge Brandler wrote: "The method prescribed by law to effect the jury's verdict of death is less grim and ghastly than the brutal execution of Campbell by firing four

Sea Festival opens Thursday

The ninth annual California International Sea Festival sponsored by the city of Long Beach will be held Thursday through Aug. 18, with 14 events scheduled, including a treasure hunt for $1,000 buried along the Long Beach shoreline.

The festival begins with a national AAU water-polo tournament at the Belmont Plaza Pool and ends with a sand-sculpture contest on the beach.

Highlighting the two-week sea festival will be sailboat competition, with five events involving Finns, Sabots, classic schooners and model boats.

The National Drag Boat Association will hold its national championship at Marine Stadium, and water skiers have two events on the schedule — a ski-drag jambo-ree and a race from Long Beach to Catalina and back.

For swimmers there will be an aquatic meet at Alamitos Bay featuring a three-mile swim with more than 1,000 participants expected. There will be lifeguards' competition at the Belmont Plaza Pool, including lifesaving and rescue techniques and a lifeguard dory race from Catalina to Long Beach.

Rand study to show working of courts funded by LEAA

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

A survey to help judges and prosecutors assess their efficiency — and brighten the public's dim view of the way justice is administered in America — will be developed during the next 18 months by the Rand Corp. of Santa Monica.

The private research organization has been awarded a grant of $377,438 by the U.S. Justice Department's Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) to create a survey checklist and test it.

"The emphasis is on practicality," said LEAA Deputy Administrator Charles R. Work in announcing the grant.

Indeed, the project's approach to justice promises to be as realistic as it can get: Preliminary plans call for interviews not only with attorneys and judges, but with victims, witnesses and convicts as well.

It's all part of LEAA's evolving master plan, according to Mary Graham, spokeswoman for the agency's Washington-based research wing.

LEAA, the federal agency created in 1968 to help states and communities improve their brand of justice, "is very concerned with programs that will rebuild public confidence in the system," she said last week.

Several recent surveys have indicated that the rebuilding project is necessary, in part, because most people don't actually understand the workings of their courts, she added.

But there also are other reasons for the public dismay. "Our impression is that much of this is because the courts are overloaded," said Miss Graham. "There are trial delays, jurors have to wait to be called, witnesses have to wait in the halls and then we know they're often badly treated on the stand, too."

Last January, Donald Santarelli — LEAA's chief administrator until his recent resignation — told a legal gathering about an agency study of criminal trial witnesses in Washington, D.C., during six months of 1973.

More than 40 per cent of the criminal cases during that period were dropped because witnesses got cold feet and refused to cooperate, he said. The recalcitrant witnesses wanted better protection, fewer delays and less waiting to testify, and tougher punishment for criminals, Santarelli told his New York audience.

"They were people who at least initially were willing to make themselves known to the police as witnesses," he said. "And we know from surveys going back to the President's Crime Commission report of 1967 that a large percentage of victim-witnesses are unwilling even to report crimes."

That survey, he added, contained "a strong message...for all of us. It is that we must foster in witnesses a confidence that they will be safe before we can fully succeed in making the streets safe for all our citizens."

Another study indicating a crisis of confidence in the nation's legal system was cited by Los Angeles County Dist. Atty. Joseph P. Busch when he addressed a May meeting of the Long Beach Bar Association.

Municipal tinkering

A couple of weeks ago we noted here that the City Council was being asked by the Teachers Association of Long Beach to tinker with the method of electing school board members.

We listed a number of flaws in the proposal and suggested that the council should not tinker with a system that has given us an excellent school district.

Now a couple of members of the council are proposing to fool around with the terms of various city commissions and committees.

Once again, we ask why tinker with a good system?

THE PROPOSAL before the rules and procedures committee dealt with making all commission terms coincide with council terms and limiting commissioners and committee members to two terms.

The proposal to make the terms coincide with the council fortunately was defeated in committee but the two-term limit idea was passed on to the whole council.

We submit that both ideas would serve to lessen the effectiveness of our city government. It makes no more sense to limit commissioners to two terms than it would be to limit council members to two terms.

Our original charter was approved in 1921. In 1925 voters set up all commission terms to coincide with council terms. Nothing was said about limiting service of individuals to two terms.

In subsequent years—1931, 1937, 1945 and 1951—various charter amendments were passed removing the major commissions (Harbor, Water, Civil Service, Recreation and Planning) from the earlier coinciding terms.

THESE COMMISSIONERS now have terms of 4, 5 or 6 years, mostly staggered so there are always experienced people serving.

This has served to remove these commissions from the spoils system of politics. A new council now would have political difficulty sweeping out all commissioners and putting in their own political supporters.

Because politics has largely been taken out of the picture we have had top quality men and women serving on each of these commissions. By and large they have been successful and knowledgeable people in their own lines of endeavor and have donated great expertise to the community.

As their length of community service has grown their ability to serve well has increased.

The proposal now before the council to arbitrarily throw out of office anyone who has served two terms would make certain that the most knowledgeable would be barred from service.

The excuse for this is that it would allow other capable people to serve the community.

We have no quarrel with the idea that there are many capable people in the community and that we would like as many as possible to become active in civic affairs.

But really, we aren't talking about passing out favors at a party or playing musical chairs. We are talking about providing the best possible public servants to operate the major commissions in our city.

As we said before, these commissioners have been outstanding in their work.

WE MIGHT POINT OUT the turmoil that has frequently surrounded the Port of Los Angeles and contrast it with the Port of Long Beach. Politics too often has played a part in selection of commissioners in Los Angeles and there has been considerable turnover there. Here we have had a superb board, with little turnover. And Long Beach now has the number one port in the west. That's no accident.

We believe that spoils system politics should be kept out of our commission system and that the best qualified people should serve without any artificial limit on number of terms.

Any time an individual commissioner fails in his duty he can be removed by the manager with concurrence of two-thirds of the council. And if the council wishes it can refuse to approve reappointment of any commissioner whose performance has been below par.

IF THAT CAUSES some political heat on the council from time to time it is unfortunate. But as Harry Truman said, "If you can't stand the heat get out of the kitchen."

Long Beach has enough problems to keep the council busy. We have many areas that need redevelopment, we need to finish our new general plan, we have traffic problems, we need more jobs, and on and on.

We hope that parts of our system that are working well will be let alone and that attention of the community leaders will be directed toward those areas that do have deficiencies or major problems.

Letters to the editor

Someone Cares

EDITOR:

We took exception to a picture featured on page B-1 of the Sunday, July 14, 1974 Independent, Press-Telegram.

The picture is of our friend who is blind and plays the accordion and sings Gospel songs on downtown Long Beach Street corners. The comment by Robert Gore was, "Or the blind woman serenading pedestrians with her accordion. No one seems to care where she goes with her daily toll of loose change."

I write to say that someone cares for this fine Christian lady. That someone is God. Our friend is one of His called people. Not only does God care, but her blind husband and many nameless friends who seek her out each week because they are concerned about her and for her. The "daily toll of loose change" that she accepts constitutes her daily wages; her wherewithall to have the necessities of life.

Aid for the blind has been refused this woman because of her unusual position and she, out of choice, would rather humble herself, serve God, pay taxes and be a good citizen.

Yes, Someone cares — the bank for the house payment, the phone company, the gas company, the electric company, their gardener and many Spirit filled Christian friends like us.

Whose rights?

EDITOR:

In light of the ACLU's most recent stands, particularly in defending the sale of nude publications in newsracks and using the First Amendment in this defense, I'm not sure I need their defense of my rights anymore.

After all, the Ninth Amendment to the Constitution declares, "The Enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people." I construe this to mean that I should have the right not to have "deep throat" type literature forced down mine.

The Nixon-Ford understanding

WASHINGTON—Sources close to Vice President Gerald Ford say he has reached a private understanding with President Nixon.

The vice president, who is effective in the backrooms, has agreed to work quietly on Capitol Hill against impeachment. As one source put it, Ford "doesn't believe that the President is guiltless but only that it hasn't reached an impeachable level."

The President, in turn, has offered to help groom Ford as his successor. To help overcome Ford's weakness in foreign affairs, for example, the President will probably send him on a foreign tour after November elections.

THE UNDERSTANDING between the nation's top two leaders, says one source, has developed from informal conversations. Another source stressed that the understanding has been more tacit than explicit. "There is no quid pro," he said. "I don't think that is the way they do business."

The idea of a vice presidential trip, for example, was discussed shortly after

Jack Anderson

Ford's appointment. It has come up from time to time in their private conversations.

Ford likely will visit the Soviet Union, Middle East, Western Europe and Far East. He has already gone to Communist China. Now he would like to visit Taiwan and Japan. He is also eager to spend some time in Israel and Egypt. He also talked to the President about stopping at NATO headquarters.

THE VICE PRESIDENT doesn't want to take a whirlwind tour. He would like to stop in each country long enough to learn something about it.

Ford still tells friends that he isn't seeking the presidency. But he is not unaware that he now leads the polls as the favorite for the 1976 Republican presidential nomination.

Watergate victim! The Watergate steamroller has run over a veteran civil servant, Mille Acree, who has been accused of helping President Nixon prosecute his enemies through tax audits.

The doughty Acree has served the government faithfully for 37 years. He almost died of a heart ailment in 1970, but came back to win the National Civil Service League award for his courage and integrity.

He moved up from the Internal Revenue service in 1972 to become customs chief. But today, he is hanging on to his job by frayed fingernails.

Acree deserves to have his side of the story told. We have pieced it together from grand jury testimony, Secret Senate transcripts and interviews with the principals, including some of Acree's past bosses.

THE GRAND JURY testimony shows that Acree was summoned in 1971 to the White House annex by Jack Caulfield, the ex-detective who served as the White House liaison man with law agencies.

It took two visits before Caulfield finally got around to asking Acree, then the IRS inspections chief, how to initiate tax audits. Acree explained tersely that the procedures were laid out in IRS rules and could not be abridged.

Unfortunately for Acree, according to the testimony, Caulfield tried to pump up his own importance in memos he wrote to his White House superiors. These old memos, many of them false and misleading, made Acree appear like a White House patsy.

Caulfield claimed, for instance, that Acree agreed to help with an audit of Newsday reporter Bob Greene who had dared to criticize presidential crony Bebe Rebozo. Under penalty of perjury, Acree contradicted the charge.

CAULFIELD also said that Acree met with him and presidential secretary Rose Mary Woods' brother, Joe, at the Fairfax Country Club to talk about a private sleuthing agency with a "black bag" capacity. This could mean cash payoffs or Watergate-style break-ins.

Acree acknowledged he had once talked to Caulfield tentatively about forming a legitimate detective agency but swore there had been no mention of "black bags."

Caulfield testified that Acree has showed him tax data on the Rev. Billy Graham and actor John Wayne, both of whom had complained of IRS harassment. Caulfield said Acree also provided him with information on other actors for comparison.

These statements, protested Acree, were false. He had not shown Caulfield the Graham and Wayne tax data, and another IRS official drew up the comparisons of actors' tax troubles strictly for internal IRS use, testified Acree.

HE ASSERTED that only checks he ran for the White House were on individuals seeking clearance for appointments and, in one case, on a man who wanted to give a wine cellar to President Nixon's San Clemente home. To forestall embarrassing situations, checks on government appointees have been made by IRS for both Democratic and Republican presidents.

Acree's defense, in fairness, should not be lost in the Watergate welter.

Footnote: Caulfield told my associate Les Whitten that he had given his entire story to the grand jury and other official investigators, and that he had nothing more to add. "I told them the truth," insisted Caulfield.

ET TU?...ET TU?...ET TU?...ET TU?...ET TU?...ET TU...

Outlook for Nixon's tenure is very dark

WASHINGTON — The fourth week of July, 1974, is likely to go down in history as the time when the roof fell in on President Nixon. He was brought not only into imminent peril of being impeached by the House but of being convicted and removed from office by the Senate.

Republican support in the House Judiciary Committee began to crumble. The

Richard

Wilson

Supreme Court unanimously ordered the President to deliver up the additionally incriminating tapes demanded by Special Prosecutor Jaworski for the Watergate trial. Massive evidence marshalled by impeachment counsel John Doar overwhelmed the House of Representatives with the effect of a battering ram to prove that Nixon lied to the American public, deceived the prosecutors, exceeded the powers of his office in ominous ways under the cloak of national security, and enriched himself under the protection of the presidency.

WHAT EMERGES from this disastrous week is President Nixon's virtually naked vulnerability. His defense is not impressive. If it is no stronger than that presented to the Judiciary Committee by Presidential Counsel James St. Clair, the 34 votes in the Senate needed to acquit him may be hard to muster.

The Supreme Court presented him with no alternative to complying with its order than immediate disaster. Nixon was divested of any pretense that the presidency is above enforcement of the law.

His only recourse is the delay that compliance with the Court's order might cause in the timing of final judgment. But Congress did not need the new tapes, which it will eventually get through Prosecutor Jaworski, to move toward impeachment and trial.

And now, perhaps for the first time, those who have wished to suspend judgment and give the President every benefit of the doubt, must reluctantly conclude that the outlook for his survival in office is very, very dark. The odds have shifted drastically against him.

THOSE, TOO, who have questioned whether the awful punishment he faces fits the crime have been shaken by the towering structure of evidence from which one frightening conclusion may be drawn. Had Nixon and his staff been successful in their various enterprises, and had those enterprises remained hidden as intended, an apparatus would have been in working order for oppression and injustice on a growing and even more dangerous scale.

In all these dispiriting circumstances it is not unreasonable to suspect that a time will come when President Nixon will once again consider resigning. If the atmosphere continues to change as rapidly as it has in the past week, the President will come to a time this fall when he will have to judge if a third of the Senate will decide that the consequences of removing him from office are worse than letting him remain, chastened and restrained, for the rest of his term.

If the votes are not there to save him, should he resign and thus possibly preserve intact his rights to a lifetime pension of $75,000? He should not. A President is elected for a four year term and mandated to serve and protect the Constitution until he physically cannot serve or is removed. No president can be permitted for his own convenience to give up his office when he pleases.

The impeachment process should take its inexorable course, with the Senate deciding if the nation's best interest is served by his going or staying.

U.S. worriedly watches Soviet naval buildup

By JOHN F. BARTON
United Press International

WASHINGTON — American naval intelligence officials say they are deeply concerned about increasing Soviet naval strength in the Indian Ocean, with its strategic access to the oil rich nations in the Persian Gulf and Arabian Sea.

The Kremlin is spending the equivalent of several billion dollars to strengthen Soviet fleet operations there, according to Rear Adm. Charles D. Grojean, director of the Navy's politico-military policy division.

GROJEAN told the Senate Armed Services Committee recently that the situation will become even more serious when the Suez Canal is reopened. That will cut by 80 per cent the time now required for Soviet ships to get from the Black Sea to the Indian Ocean, the admiral said.

"The Soviet presence in the Indian Ocean has been growing for the past several years," Grojean said. "There has been a systematic rise."

As a result, he said, the Soviet Navy can now operate in strength in three oceans far away from its homeland: The Atlantic, the Pacific and the Indian oceans.

Grojean made his comments while supporting an administration request for $29 million for developing logistical support facilities at Diego Garcia, the tiny British-administered island station off the coast of India.

"It does not serve the best interests of the United States to deploy ships into the Indian Ocean without improving facilities that are already there for proper and economic logistical support of the U.S. Navy," the admiral said. "We believe that Diego Garcia is an obvious solution."

Grojean said the Navy is concerned about improved Soviet port facilities in Somalia, particularly in Mogadishu and Berbera. The Russians also have access to port facilities in Iraq and Aden.

GROJEAN strongly opposed suggestions by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., that the United States and the Soviet Union agree to limit military operations in the Indian Ocean, something sought by both India and Iran.

"It is not to our advantage to have an agreement with the Soviets to set up a limitation in the Indian Ocean," Grojean said. "The Soviet Union shares a border with Pakistan and Iran. They can exert psychological and political pressure all the time."

"In order to exert U.S. influence in the area, we have to do it through a naval presence. We would find ourselves operating at a disadvantage if there were such an agreement."

The future looks bleak for Rebozo

WASHINGTON — Through a series of stalls, Charles W. (Bebe) Rebozo has avoided producing records on his financial dealings with President Nixon, but the President's best friend is in serious trouble with the special prosecutor's office.

And the Internal Revenue Service, finally freed from the inhibitions of keeping the White House posted on all of its enforcement moves on the Miami real estate operator, is prepared to seek prosecution of Rebozo for federal income tax frauds.

THE POSSIBILITY of perjury looms large in the testimony that Rebozo gave in executive sessions of the Senate Select Watergate Committee in its exploration of the mysterious $100,000 in cash Rebozo received in 1969 and 1970 from representatives of billionaire Howard Hughes. It is Rebozo's contention that he received the $100,000 in cash in two bundles of $50,000 each at some vague date in 1969 or 1970 as a contribution toward the 1972 campaign for President Nixon's reelection.

This same cash was placed in a safe deposit box shortly afterwards and Rebozo contends that it remained there for three years until he returned it to Hughes in early 1973 at the suggestion of President Nixon.

In his interviews with the Internal Revenue Service in 1973 and with Senate Watergate committee investigators, Rebozo has told several different accounts of the times and places when he received the bundles of $100 bills.

Some of these stories have been inconsistent with the testimony of representatives of Howard Hughes and the physical circumstances corroborating the accumulation and delivery of the money.

REPORTS OF THE Federal Reserve Board on the serial numbers of the $100 bills that Rebozo says were kept in his safe from the time he received them casts doubt upon some of the first stories he told federal investigators. The record demonstrates that some of those bills had not yet been circulated at the time Rebozo had initially said he received the money.

Some aspects of the criminal investigation could result in rather rapid indictment of Rebozo, but the special prosecutor and the Internal Revenue Service are intent on trying to systematically unwind all aspects of his financial dealings with Mr. Nixon and others.

Many questions pending about Rebozo's financial affairs could be answered by President Nixon and are spelled out in a 16-page letter written on June 6, 1974, to White House counsel James St. Clair by Senate Watergate Committee Chairman Sam Ervin (D-N.C.).

THAT LETTER is a starting point for Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski's staff in its pursuit of the man who was a handy man with cash for any whim that Mr. Nixon had in mind, whether it was a swimming pool or a new roof at Key Biscayne, or the purchase of parcels of land adjacent to his seaside home at San Clemente.

Although Rebozo has refused to make his financial books and records available to the Senate Watergate Committee or the Internal Revenue Service, both had concluded that far from being the friendly multi-millionaire who helped Mr. Nixon out of his bountiful fortune, Rebozo has been living on borrowed money and mysterious cash.

When a tax investigation of Howard Hughes started three years ago it led to Rebozo, but at that time he had the charmed life of a man identified as a close friend of the President of the United States. It was labeled a "sensitive case," and the local tax agent treated Mr. Rebozo with a deference seldom accorded to taxpayers, including notice of what records they were seeking and why.

The pattern of Internal Revenue Service favoritism for the President's pal involved everyone from the IRS agents in Florida to such high officials in the Nixon White House as special assistant John D. Ehrlichman. Even after Ehrlichman left on May 1, 1973, the newly installed White House chief of staff, Gen. Alexander Haig, showed an unusual degree of attentiveness in seeing that Attorney General Elliot Richardson and the then Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox knew that "the Internal Revenue Service was giving Mr. Rebozo a clean bill... (After) the most thorough investigation in years."

There is evidence that the Cox investigation of Rebozo caused the President to fire Cox.

THE SENATE Watergate Committee and the special prosecutor have now reviewed in detail the IRS investigations of Rebozo and have established the following favoritism for Mr. Nixon's best friend:

1. For no good reason the investigation of Rebozo was postponed several times.
2. The reports on the investigation were handled through oral communications rather than the normal written reports.
3. Essentially every major move in the investigation included advance notice to President Nixon and to Rebozo.
4. No normal inquiry was made into irregular financial matters in the relevant periods of time when questions should have been raised on the basis of testimony and evidence available to IRS officials.

5. The tax agent permitted Rebozo's attorney, rather than the IRS, to obtain information that would corroborate or destroy the credibility of third-party witnesses.

6. There were no efforts to conduct additional interviews with Rebozo even after the IRS had learned Rebozo had changed previous statements on dates and places of delivery of large sums of cash.

7. Tax agents confided to Rebozo that the IRS did not intend to pursue a criminal investigation of his financial affairs, even though there were outstanding questions involving large sums of money and a refusal by Rebozo and his lawyer to produce records.

NOW THAT the facade of great wealth has been pulled away, the special treatment has vanished, and Bebe Rebozo for the first time in more than five years is being treated as any other citizen. In fact it might now be said that his connections with the President have become a handicap.

Only Bebe can say whether the years as a cover boy, with easy entry to the Nixon White House, have been worth his present anguish, the prospects of a bleak and troubled future, and a dubious place in history.

'Pick up the board, you're supposed to be one of the workers!'

Rabin: man of quiet strength

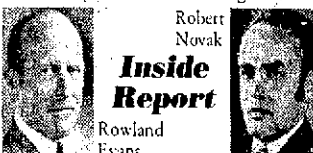

TEL AVIV—Only hours after Gen. Itzhak Rabin became Israel's first native-born prime minister on June 3, his political enemies plotted a confrontation to test his strength and leadership.

THEY SENT a 70-man contingent to found a new settlement near the West Bank (Palestinian) city of Nablus. What made the test particularly hairy for Rabin was that Gen. Erik Sharon, the famed hero of the Yom Kippur war and a major figure in the oppositionist right-wing Likud party, placed himself at the head of the settlers.

Rabin met the challenge head on: Lacking time for a formal cabinet meeting to discuss the emotionally charged question of new settlements on the Israeli-occupied west bank, he ordered the army immediately to disperse the settlers. In the process, Gen. Sharon was mildly manhandled. But despite Sharon's John Wayne appeal throughout this country, Rabin's swift reaction launched his premiership on a bold and decisive note.

RABIN NEEDED such a launching. He is probably the only prime minister in a modern parliamentary government anywhere to take office without any political experience, without ever having conducted a debate in the legislature and without even the rudiments of what Israelis call a "primary group" of his own—that is, an inner core of longtime advisers and confidants.

Worse yet, Rabin, who served as ambassador to Washington after commanding Israeli troops in the 1967 war, inherits leadership of a party in an advanced state of disorganization and a government that under Golda Meir, was run by a kitchen cabinet.

Rabin only joined the Labor party four years ago and only entered the Knesset (parliament) after last December's election. Add to this inexperience Israel's grave problems—an inflation rate that may hit 50 per cent by December and the far harsher political need to settle Israeli-Arab disputes—and the formidable dimension of Rabin's task can be seen.

YET, IN the two months since he took over the government with his coalition majority of a single vote in the 120 member Knesset, Rabin's plodding qualities of directness and honesty and his total lack of theatrics and political guile have served him not at all badly.

The divided state of his foes has helped. "You can't judge Rabin," one Labor party stalwart told us, "unless you first look at his opposition."

That opposition, centered in Sharon's Likud party headed by Menachem Begin, is undergoing even worse strains of disorganization than the Labor party as it, too, seeks to transfer party power to the new generation. When Rabin submitted his new economic program to the Knesset, the Likud faction headed by Elimelech Rikmalt defied Begin and supported Rabin's draconian anti-inflation program, with the support of more than half the Likud membership.

RABIN HAS easily surmounted efforts to bring down his government. The Knesset's large vote for the new economic policy, drafted by the courtly former Tel Aviv mayor and now Finance Minister Joshua Rabinovitch ("Tammany Hall in a velvet collar", as one of his colleagues described him), marked Rabin's most important parliamentary test yet.

But his biggest problems remain scarcely touched. He is moving with extreme caution on the Palestinian issue—perhaps partly because he came to the premiership with a dovish reputation, partly because he is a slow mover, fastidious about detail and still uncertain of his own power and prestige.

Nor has he begun to organize his own office: he still uses the loose and informal apparatus inherited from Golda Meir. Rather, his organizational target seems to be his cabinet, which he has put on a regularized twice-a-week meeting schedule and which he plans to use as the real machinery of his government, a revolutionary change from Mrs. Meir's intimate kitchen cabinet.

CRITICS CHARGE Rabin with moving too slowly, more like a caretaker government than a fresh regime bursting with confidence. But that's Rabin's style. Moreover, exuberance may not be what Israel wants in this dangerous time of finally trying to come to grips with the transcendent issue of how it can permanently fit into the Arab Middle East without more war.

Inexpressibly shy and reserved, Rabin is beginning to feel his way in the strange new world of high politics. His quiet strength may be just the tonic for a land in dangerous transition.

Senator Soaper

A WHITE HOUSE lawyer says that many of those "unintelligibles" on the tapes are caused by a recorder phenomenon known as "swerping." Is moral swerping an impeachable offense?

L.A.C. Says Job security for 40-Plus age group

For many years the 40-Plus Association attempted to overcome the discrimination against men and women in the over 40 age group. It was to overcome the trends that made it difficult for these people to get a job when they lost one because of former jobs being eliminated when an employer went out of business, or if an employer was trying to employ younger workers at lower pay scales. In some cases it was because the older worker would cost more under some new pension programs. Today such discrimination is penalized under the six year old "Age Discrimination in Employment Act."

The change was dramatized last May when Standard Oil of California agreed to pay out $2 million in back pay to 160 former employees and to rehire 120 of them. That was the largest settlement ever made in the six-year history of the law. Former similar cases had involved bias against minority members and women.

THE NUMBER of workers involved in our work force who are between the age of 40 and 64 years totals about 37 million. About 62 per cent are men and 38 per cent women. These people are largely in higher pay jobs, 49 per cent are white collar, 35 per cent blue collar, 13 per cent in household services and the balance are farm workers. Over half of the white collar workers are administrators or in professions and technical jobs. More than 40 per cent of blue collar workers are skilled craftsmen or foremen.

One provision of the law makes it unlawful for an employer "to fail or refuse to hire or to discharge any individual or otherwise discriminate against any individual with respect to his compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment because of such individual's age." Unions and employment agencies also are barred from such discrimination against persons in the 40 through 64 age bracket on the basis of age.

The Labor Department has set up a large legal staff to investigate complaints. Its head officer says some companies tend to discharge older workers in order to bring in younger persons at lower wage scales. Sometimes, he added, it appears that workers are fired a year or so before they are close to getting vesting rights in a pension plan. During the year ended June 30, 1973 inspections were made in 6800 establishments and violations found in 43 per cent of them. During that year over $600,000 in back pay was paid to 304 workers without litigation. Also some 8,000 workers were rehired.

The Standard of California settlement was the largest. It involved reduction of some 1600 workers over the prior 4-year period in a subsidiary company due to a reduction in business. The fired workers included supervisory and management positions. Because these were largely older workers two thirds of the jobs lost were not refilled because of normal attrition. Of the other 500 the government claimed 160 involved age bias. Of those 160 back pay of $10,000 to $50,000 was awarded and 120 of them were rehired.

IT IS NOW IMPORTANT that employers keep careful records of reasons for discharge of these older workers. If they are let go because of poor work or abilities the company should be able to give reasons for dismissal. If a person applies for a job and is qualified to fill it the employer will be subject to questioning if the reason for not employing the person is his age.

Secretary of Labor Brennan, referring to the California oil case said, "This agreement demonstrates clearly that age discrimination costs money. It swells the cost of unemployment compensation. Age discrimination is expensive for the employer. They are cheating themselves out of some of the best talent in America and they do so because of myths and prejudices that have no basis in fact. A number of recent studies show that older workers are at least as competent and productive as younger workers, and sometimes more so."

AN OPEN LETTER TO BUSINESS OPERATORS AND OTHER RESIDENTS OF LONG BEACH

The Executive Committee of Honorary Members of Long Beach Police Officers Association, representing 100 business, professional and otherwise concerned residents of Long Beach, in formal session on July 3, 1974 resolved, unanimously, that they support, unconditionally, a ten percent pay increase for our police officers.

This unanimous resolution was based upon the firm belief that Long Beach police officers render efficient, effective law enforcement with devotion to high standards of professionalism; that the same high standards of service are essential to our community on a continuing basis; that police work involves inherent hazards, and therefore, adequate incentives and compensation must be provided to attract and keep the competent; that their compensation must enable them to serve us free of financial distress and provide adequately for their families and needs.

MRS. SALZER CHRISTENS THE SEALIFT INDIAN OCEAN

Navy tanker christened

Hundreds gathered at Todd Shipyards in San Pedro Saturday to watch the launching of "Sealift Indian Ocean," a 25,000 ton U.S. naval tanker.

Eighty-five degree temperatures, stirring music, blasts from dockside whistles and an profusion of balloons and streamers were all part of the 45-minute ceremony. It marked completion of the fourth in a series of tankers at the shipyard.

Breaking the traditional bottle of champagne was Mrs. Robert S. Salzer, wife of Vice Adm. Robert S. Salzer, the featured speaker.

Assisted by Mrs. Joseph O. Bouzek, Mrs. Salzer smashed the bottle against Sealift Indian Ocean, christening the ship to the cheers of the crowd.

The tanker, 587 feet long with a range of 12,000 nautical miles, will carry 220,000 barrels of cargo.

Salzer addressed an audience composed of representatives from the Todd Shipyards Corp., Marine Transport Lines, Inc. and the Navy.

"As ships go," he said, "the Sealift Indian Ocean may not be the largest, but her mission—supplying armed forces around the world—is of the utmost importance."

Salzer said the ship would be used primarily to transport oil to American troops.

"In Vietnam," he said, "more than 96 per cent of all supplies were transported by sea—attesting to the importance of ships."

Salzer said oil, "the lifeblood of this nation," is particularly difficult to transport because of its bulky nature. "making ships the ideal means for transporting this commodity."

The Sealift Indian Ocean was built by more than 2,000 Todd Shipyards employees, many of whom were present for the ceremony.

Islands' owners doubtful

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

Although "not as conclusive as we had hoped," a title search done for Orange County shows that the Irvine Co. claim of ownership of three Upper Newport Bay islands is in question, a county official said.

Orange County Counsel Adrian Kuyper—expressing disappointment that the study did not provide all he wanted—said he believes findings are sufficiently strong so that he can seek quiet title to the three islands through a Superior Court petition.

However, the county also is bringing a prescriptive rights action against the Irvine Co. and could use the survey report in connection with that, Kuyper said.

He will recommend a course of action to county supervisors and give them a summary of the study, which is aimed specifically at discovering all title claims to the disputed property.

Of the three islands in the Upper Newport Bay, only Shellmaker island, the largest, has been occupied. It is headquarters for a dredging outfit.

Orange County challenged Irvine claims of ownership and began searching records of how the company came to claim title and how the islands were formed.

Kuyper said the study tends to show that the three islands did not exist when California joined the Union in 1850.

However, the report details a map of 1857 showing the existence of the islands. But Kuyper said it is "presumptuous to assume" that they existed in 1850 just because they are indicated on the incomplete map of 1857. If they were not in existence in 1850 when California assumed statehood, then the county would claim that a Santa Ana Superior Court decision of 1926, giving Irvine title to the lands it then claimed, is invalid.

The county is seeking to settle ownership claim in connection with plans to convert the vast upper bay into a combination wildlife preserve and nature park.

Irvine Co. values the islands at $10 million, but the county claims that the company does not own them and that their value, therefore, could not be considered in any negotiations for acquiring Irvine-owned lands in the upper bay perimeter.

At the time the county and the company had a pact for exchange of lands in the upper bay—in preparation for a now-scraped small craft port—the three islands were offered to the county in trade for land-side parcels.

If the playport project had been pursued, two of the smallest islands would have been dredged away to make a wider channel to the upper bay. The land swap agreement has long since been abrogated.

Smiling Mayor Wade leaves hospital

A smiling Mayor Edwin W. Wade was released from Pacific Hospital Saturday after spending two weeks in the hospital recovering from pulmonary emphysema and a heart attack.

The mayor will rest at home for up to six months before resuming his official duties, according to doctors. Since he needs lots of rest, they said, Mayor Wade will not be allowed visitors or phone calls at home.

Inquiries about his condition may be made to his secretary, Jan Dromgold, at City Hall, on weekdays, while on weekends calls can be made to Mrs. Dromgold at 423-4933, aides said.

"I'm feeling just fine," the mayor said, praising the hospital staff as a "team that doesn't quit."

All Pacific is home for pigeon

By VINT MADER
Staff Writer

A feathered friend—a pigeon—has become the unofficial mascot of the big German banana boat Anonacore, which left Long Beach for Hong Kong last week after a six-day visit.

The bird—never given a name—is one of 12 that had chosen the ship for shelter from a storm en route here. The others flew off some days later while sailing past the island of Taiwan, said Hans Friede, the Anonacore's first officer. The one stayed, however.

After some days of letting the bird sleep inside the bridge, Capt. Wilfred Brinck had the ship's carpenter build a little plywood birdhouse and had it set out on the starboard wing, where the bird has continued to make its home while traveling to and from Long Beach and far-flung ports around the Pacific.

THE ANONACORE'S MASCOT

It is presumably an Oriental pigeon, said Friede, who listed Thailand, Hong Kong, Nagoya (Japan) and two Nicaraguan ports, Corinto and Porto Suosa, as other locations at which the 5,902-gross-ton ship has called since the bird became the boat's mascot.

The crew has not caged it, and in the ports, as during their visit to Long Beach, it departs on regular liberty flights. Its longest shore leave was two days in Nagoya, said Friede.

It uses the birdhouse mainly as a dining room, feeding from dishes of grain and water set out on a little plywood veranda, but it still likes to roost higher up and as close as possible to Brinck's bridge.

While getting regular tours of the Pacific, the pigeon and the crew miss out on visits to the sailors' homeland. The Hamburg-registered ship, built in 1970, serves Pacific routes exclusively.

Motorcyclist, 18, killed in crash

John Charles Wiegman, 18, was killed early Saturday when his motorcycle collided with an oncoming car at Elm Avenue and 59th Street, police said.

Traffic officers said Wiegman, of 322 E. 59th St., was eastbound on Elm when the collision occurred. The car was driven by Jacky Ray Sondren, 400 E. 60th St. Wiegman was pronounced dead on arrival at St. Mary Medical Center, authorities said.

Gas explosion at bakery injures 1

An explosion of natural gas at the Colonial Bakery injured a 34-year-old employee, blew six plate glass windows into the street and caused about $3,000 in damages, firemen said Saturday.

Deputy Fire Chief William Patterson said firemen quickly extinguished the blaze and shut off the gas flow at the meters. The explosion occurred about 4:04 a.m.

Patterson said the gas had apparently leaked from a large oven in the bakery at 355 Pacific Ave.

The employee, Jose Barrajon, of 412 Daisy

Ave., was treated for first-degree facial burns at St. Mary Medical Center, authorities said.

Curb on 'cruising' in Bellflower

trophically hampered," but we have to look to what might happen," adds one.

Wilson and others also feel the cruisers scare away potential shoppers. Stores that used to be open Monday and Friday evenings no longer are, he notes. "Because of the 10 per cent bad element, I wouldn't feel safe walking down the boulevard late at night, and I wouldn't want my wife or child there either," says Wilson.

Cruising the boulevard in Bellflower is a time-honored tradition that dates back, in some memories, into the 1940s. It has survived years of upheaval that involved young people elsewhere—wars, student demonstrations, and the drug scene.

Some of the sociology and the trappings have changed. Five years ago car clubs of low riders (drivers of lowered cars) and bikers held sway, until deputies moved in with a get-tough arrest policy and moved the tough element out.

Today the scene is a comparatively gentle one, according to Peter Feenstra, Bellflower city administrator. Water fights from car to car are common. Some alcoholic beverage arrests are made, for minors in possession and for containers open in a car. Drug arrests are rare.

"Most of the kids are just there to have fun and meet each other," says Feenstra. A deputy agrees. "The girls and the boys come separately. About 11 or 11:30 you can see them start to pair up in different cars. Then they disappear. And you should see some of their vans. They are plush jobs, worth $8,000 or $9,000."

While some car clubs may be taking part, they are not flying their colors. "Everybody seems to fit together and to get along. There is little antagonism between groups. This is just where the action is," says the deputy.

The young persons who are involved generally agree. They say they like to cruise the inside lane, because it moves slowly and they can talk back and forth with passengers in cars moving the other way.

"I just go there some times to see my friends, like I did when I was in high school," says one girl.

"We do it because for kids under 21 there is just nothing else to do."

Captain Kenneth Cable, commander at Lakewood station, has ready answers for charges of heavy-handed or selective enforcement.

"We have a responsibility to be responsive to the community, and that is what we are doing now in Bellflower. The community also has a responsibility, to be aware when it is contributing to the problem. If a 15-year-old girl was on Bellflower Boulevard after 10 at night, it would be an unusual situation if she was not aware of the problem and that she was contributing to it. If she wasn't aware, she should have been."

About charges of selective enforcement of a municipal antiloitering law for minors, Cable responds,

"You could say it was selective if we were only going after 15-year-old girls. But we are hauling in everyone under 18. It is not selective just because we are concentrating where the problem is."

None of the authorities involved in the crackdown think they have found the final answer. They concede their immediate goal is not to drive the cruisers out of town altogether, just to lessen the problem.

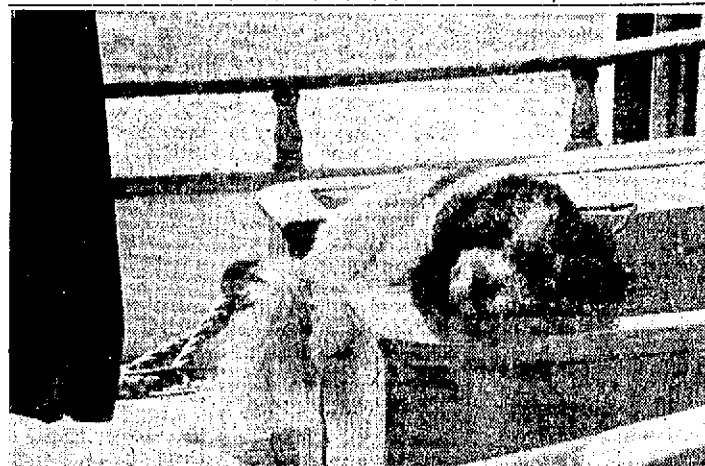

"For the long run, we need a solution that will allow us to ignore it," says Capt. Cable.

To that end, one resident has written the city with a suggestion:

"The situation existing in Bellflower on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights is creating ill feeling among all members of the community," he observes. "When traffic is routed from the boulevard, the side streets are bumper to bumper from 10 p.m. to after midnight. No one can sleep and the streets are not available to residents, let alone emergency vehicles."

"I suggest providing direction for youthful energy, commercialize the fact that all of those people come to Bellflower. Provide a constructive reason to come to town. Custom car shows, style shows, old car shows, and swap meets, band competitions, car club meets, etc., could be something to provide direction."

In response, city administrator Feenstra muses: "The idea has come up before, mostly facetiously. Maybe we ought to give it some serious thought."

Old sea dog

Overly relaxed might be the best way to describe this pup as he basks in the sun aboard his master's boat. Photographer John H. Neagle photographed him during his (the pooch's) rest period as he passed by at the Long Beach Marina.

What's the siren?

The following emergency calls were answered by the Long Beach police and fire departments in the 24 hour period ending at 8 p.m. Saturday:

Intriguing case for jogging judge

shots into his prone and writhing body and then stalking Officer Hettlinger in an attempt to execute him."

Five years ago, just before he retired, Judge Brandler found 20 San Fernando Valley College students guilty of felony charges arising from their takeover of the administration building and holding officials captive.

In that verdict he declared: "We dare not and will not sanction or tolerate the use of force, violence or other illegal acts to effect desired changes. College campuses are not privileged sanctuaries where disruptive, violent, felonious acts can go unpunished...The right to dissent is not a license for anarchy."

Nine years before reporter William Farr's case began, Judge Brandler seemed to have anticipated the coming controversy over a reporter's right to keep his sources confidential. He wrote in 1961: "A free, courageous and vigilant press, under the protective immunity of our existing confidence law, has encouraged and fostered a more energetic and impartial administration of justice."

Born in Antwerp, Belgium, in 1909, the son of a diamond merchant, he came to New York as a refugee during World War I. After finishing studies at City College of New York, he got his law degree at Brooklyn Law School of St. Lawrence University and was admitted to the bar in New York in 1932.

Two years later he came to California on a visit, decided to stay and worked his way into an association with the colorful, brilliant Jerry Geisler, doing much of his research and part of the trial work for three years before leaving for the district attorney's office in 1937.

After he retired in 1969, he served a short time as judge pro tem of the Court of Appeals. Thereafter for a time he worked as private counsel for a Beverly Hills corporation.

Since January 1973, he has been on assignment from the state chief justice, waiving compensation other than his regular retirement pay, trying Superior Court cases throughout the state.

Why work without compensation?

"Well, the tax situation is such that it's almost better not to get paid," he admits. "Also, one reason I retired was to get away from the routine cases, so I could be more selective, able to take the cases that are really interesting, really a challenge."

In his nonworking, nonjogging hours, Judge Brandler swims, watches any sports event that is televised and goes to symphony concerts, especially when any of his favorite B's are on the program: Bach, Beethoven, Brahms and Bruckner. If he hadn't become a lawyer and judge, he admits, he would have wanted to be a symphony conductor. "The first time I saw Toscanini in New York, that became my secret ambition," he admits.

Survey to assess efficiency of courts

Busch told listeners he'd recently seen a survey listing the professions that young people held in disrespect. "Lawyers were No. 2," he said, "and I don't like that."

He attributed the legal profession's apparent fall from grace in part, to the fact that many attorneys had been involved in Watergate.

What can another survey, a court's checklist, do to earn back Americans' respect?

"Closer attention to developing performance measures that the public can understand will make the legal system more responsive to those it's designed to serve," according to Work, the administrator who announced the Rand Corp. grant.

"Criteria will be developed for specific types of courts that take into consideration each court's particular resources and responsibilities," he added.

The checklist project, under the direction of Rand's Sorrel Wildhorn, will focus on two court jurisdictions, one large and sophisticated and the other smaller and simpler, LEAA officials said.

Neither of those test jurisdictions has been selected yet, according to Wildhorn. He said the selection itself will be part of the research, for the final checklist must have features useful to all sorts of court systems.

HE SAID it's also undecided whether the project will use two or three legal jurisdictions as sources for the victims, witnesses and defendants who'll take part in the survey.

Gerald Caplan, director of the LEAA research arm that will administer the grant, said that another facet of the project is to improve "the fairness and quality of justice that is being dispensed."

It's not enough to merely count the people who pass through the system or compute the time it takes to process a felony case," said Caplan.

That type of system is one way currently used by Los Angeles County to keep a finger on the pulse of its courts and prosecutors.

EACH MONTH, the county's Superior Court produces a "conspectus," statistically breaking down what has occurred in the court's various districts. Sent as personal mail to judges and prosecutors, these reports rarely find their way to the public.

Last month's conspectus shows that, for the entire county of more than seven million people, more than 1,500 new criminal cases were filed and more than 1,600 were disposed. It also shows that there were nearly 4,900 cases awaiting trial—down from more than 5,100 one year ago.

The reports for the past three months show that the court's South District—the greater Long Beach area—and the district attorney's Long Beach staff own the toughest record in the county for prosecuting cases.

A percentage comparison between the Central and Long Beach Districts for the period of April-June shows that in the Central jurisdiction, 85 per cent of all jury trials ended in convictions while in Long Beach, 94 per cent of the jury trials—all but two—were successfully prosecuted.

Growers 'dung-ho' for lions

Ridder News Service
Lion Country Safari is cashing in its chips.
Lion manure, the gardener's pungent weapon against foraging deer, is in such demand that the wild animal preserve's prides of lions are hard pressed to furnish enough product.

"Operation dung-ho," which began somewhat lightheartedly this summer to accommodate a frustrated gardener from nearby Laguna Beach has since been publicized nationwide—with stupefying results.

Station wagons and pickup trucks arrive daily at the African wildlife preserve and theme-amusement park in Orange County to purchase what one wag has dubbed "lion dandies."
And then there are the mail and telephone orders.
Mrs. E. L. Stone, of Manchester, Mass., read about the availability of lion chips on the front page of the Wall Street Journal and wanted to know when the product would be placed on the commercial market.
Dr. Rex B. Gosnell,

director of Whittaker Corporation's research and development division, rushed to Lion Country Safari soon after the story appeared. He said he was desperate.
"The (expletive deleted) deer are ruining my orchard," cried Gosnell, whose hobby is growing apples, cherries, peaches, etc., in the mountains of San Diego County.
"They're not content with stripping the leaves and eating the blossoms, they're now devouring the fruit itself."
One of the largest orders for the lion droppings came from nearby Bordier's Nursery.

Knott books Flash group, Peter Noone

Flash Cadillac and the Continental Kids head up a week of entertainment from tonight through Saturday night at Knott's Berry Farm.

Featured as the rock group "Herby and the Heartbeats" in the film "American Graffiti," they bring good times back into rock-and-roll. Capacity crowds in Knott's 2,150-seat John Wayne Theater have roared approval during Flash Cadillac's two previous visits.

The group will be followed Aug. 4-10 by Peter Noone, former lead singer of Herman's Hermits. Show times Sunday, Friday and Saturday are 6:30, 8:30 and 10:30 p.m., with Monday through Thursday shows at 8 and 10:30 p.m.

Prostitutes put on street on eve of meeting

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI)—Disagreement over just what's on the agenda at the "Northwest Regional Loose Women's Conference" Saturday briefly forced the hookers back on the street on the eve of their planned get-together.

James Gordon, treasurer of the Russian Center, said he canceled a rental agreement for his hall with the ladies' sponsoring group, COYOTE (Come Off Your Old Tired Ethics).

Meanwhile the man who started the run on dung, 73-year-old retired corporation executive Charles P. Culp, seems to be pleased with his newly discovered anticancer device. "My day lilies are now coming up nicely," reports Culp, "and I'm starting to see blossoms on my squash and cucumber—something the danged deer never permitted before."
His wife is less enthused.
"This stuff smells so bad that the deer probably faint after one whiff," she insists that Culp keep the lion dung in empty containers spaced around the garden—firmly capped during the day and opened only at sundown.

but he added, "I'm not a musical fan."
"Would you read some poetry today?"
"Believe it or not, I don't have a good voice for poetry — or anything." He thought it was unusual being guest of the TV Academy because he hadn't many encounters with TV. He was on a show with Dick Cavett and his wife, Carrie Nye.
"I noticed his makeup was running down his face and I told him. He said, 'Let's sit under the banana tree.' I had cut the bananas off the tree because they were too phallic. That was in New Orleans, where I have a crash pad. That was a very nice gig. Later Dick, Carrie and I skinny-dipped."

As probably the greatest of living American playwrights, he was a sensational attraction, and very free and easy.
"I'm one of those rare writers who always enjoys his own work," he confessed one moment, but at another point, when he was asked whether he ever thought of teaching, he said no.
"There are people who are great teachers, but I think a writer should devote himself to writing."
"Is it painful?"

WILLIAMS was also interviewed by an Austrian TV crew. Pressed to say something in German, he said, "Love-making is healthy," in a slightly earthier translation. The director said, "Well, Mr. Williams, I think we'll delete that for Austria but keep it in for Germany."
Again he laughed. "I got a lot of fan mail from Germany."
He's constantly asked who should have done his roles that hasn't. "I once told Kim Stanley that she should have played Blanche — and she told me she had!"
He saw Marlon Brando in "Last Tango."
"I think it is his greatest performance — better than 'Streetcar.'"

Growers 'dung-ho' for lions

Ridder News Service
Lion Country Safari is cashing in its chips.
Lion manure, the gardener's pungent weapon against foraging deer, is in such demand that the wild animal preserve's prides of lions are hard pressed to furnish enough product.

"Operation dung-ho," which began somewhat lightheartedly this summer to accommodate a frustrated gardener from nearby Laguna Beach has since been publicized nationwide—with stupefying results.

Station wagons and pick-up trucks arrive daily at the African wildlife preserve and theme-amusement park in Orange County to purchase what one wag has dubbed "lion dandies."

And then there are the mail and telephone orders.
Mrs. E. L. Stone, of Manchester, Mass., read about the availability of lion chips on the front page of the Wall Street Journal and wanted to know when the product would be placed on the commercial market.
Dr. Rex B. Gosnell,

director of Whittaker Corporation's research and development division, rushed to Lion Country Safari soon after the story appeared. He said he was desperate.
"The (expletive deleted) deer are ruining my orchard," cried Gosnell, whose hobby is growing apples, cherries, peaches, etc., in the mountains of San Diego County.
"They're not content with stripping the leaves and eating the blossoms, they're now devouring the fruit itself."
One of the largest orders for the lion droppings came from nearby Bordier's Nursery.

PETER NOONE

Knott books Flash group, Peter Noone

Flash Cadillac and the Continental Kids head up a week of entertainment from tonight through Saturday night at Knott's Berry Farm.

Featured as the rock group "Herby and the Heartbeats" in the film "American Graffiti," they bring good times back into rock-and-roll. Capacity crowds in Knott's 2,150-seat John Wayne Theater have roared approval during Flash Cadillac's two previous visits.

The group will be followed Aug. 4-10 by Peter Noone, former lead singer of Herman's Hermits. Show times Sunday, Friday and Saturday are 8:30, 8:30 and 10:30 p.m., with Monday through Thursday shows at 8 and 10:30 p.m.

Prostitutes put on street on eve of meeting

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Disagreement over just what's on the agenda at the "Northwest Regional Loose Women's Conference" Saturday briefly forced the hookers back on the street on the eve of their planned get-together.
James Gordon, treasurer of the Russian Center, said he canceled a rental agreement for his hall with the ladies' sponsoring group, COYOTE (Come Off Your Old Tired Ethics).

Meanwhile the man who started the run on dung, 73-year-old retired corporation executive Charles P. Culp, seems to be pleased with his newly discovered antideer device. "My day lilies are now coming up nicely," reports Culp, "and I'm starting to see blossoms on my squash and cucumber—something the danged deer never permitted before."
His wife is less enthused.
"This stuff smells so bad that the deer probably faint after one whiff." She insists that Culp keep the lion dung in empty containers spaced around the garden—firmly capped during the day and opened only at sundown.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Finds you eager for adventure, starting to work for the good things of life. Check plans and promises for reality—the tendency is to overstatement. Relationships are tested as you expect a great deal (or too much) from others. Today's natives are idealists, who somehow manage to protect themselves.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Expect increased outlay (or personal needs). Budgeting helps. News from distant people is encouraging. Avoid involvement in secret schemes.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Your efficiency is enhanced by new methods and ideas. Friends join in with all sorts of bright dreams of little substance. It's a fine evening for fun, not business.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): From the conflicts of today come sound lessons. It's too easy to propose activity beyond the capacity of others. Younger people are certain to ask good questions.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Enthusiasm causes you to skip details—okay, but make sure they'll be dealt with soon. Almost everything you do can be viewed from another angle to be productive.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Money, particularly that of family or group, poses temptations. You're overly optimistic and impatient. Complete routines, then move on. Enjoy a good show tonight.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are confronted with fresh challenge. Give exceptional attention to the subtle aspects of human nature, the fine nuances of speech and behavior.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's not so much what you do as how you show the doing. Care with details is essential. Reasonable spending is indicated—proceed with confidence, good humor.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be willing to switch from outdated methods to new ones, avoiding the impractical. Verify financial information, old records. Avoid business in later hours.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Unexpected is the word for much of today's experience. Trivial routine items lead to further "coincidence" or "luck," troublesome at first, beneficial later.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): This is another day for second thoughts, checking of schedules, revised plans — saving expense and inconvenience. Romance is offstage for now—more later.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Social moves involve costs you can't anticipate. Promote worthy causes, nonetheless. It's a long day and evening of interesting encounters with interesting people.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): You're likely to be busy all day and late into the evening with extra work, some of it promising great benefits. Personal arrangements must be kept simple.

Those wonderful, wacky Thirties

NEW YORK (AP)—The year was 1930 and there was a blight on the land called the Great Depression. There were millions of people out of work. Men polished apples not to curry favor but to sell on street corners. Some banks went broke and took their enraged depositors with them.

Things were a mess with one possible exception, baseball, the national pastime. The decade beginning in 1930 was possibly the most colorful, exciting, and in a pure baseball sense, the classiest the game had ever seen. It still may be. Baseball not only survived the depression, it outlasted it.

The winds of change were blowing. Night baseball burst on the scene. The farm system was born, a child of the depression. The minor leagues were close to bankruptcy. The majors stepped in to save them and created the farm system with subsidies for the lower leagues. Daily radio broadcasts of games became common in big league cities.

The late and great Dizzy Dean pitched his first game for the St. Louis Cardinals in 1930. He won it, of course. What else? Diz went on and became a superstar. But there were so many other superb performers.

If you're old enough to remember Franklin D. Roosevelt's cigarette holder, you'll recall these men. Carl Hubbell of the Giants, Dean's marvelous opponent in so many mound duels. Joe DiMaggio, the Yankee Clipper who fired broadsides at the plate. Bob Feller of Cleveland, who had lightning in his fast ball and thunder in his curve. Boston's Ted Williams, who carried a big stick but didn't know how to walk softly.

Robert Moses Grove, a lean lefty who won 31 games for the Philadelphia Athletics in 1931 with a fast ball that could burn a hole in the wind. Jimmy Foxx of Philadelphia and Hank Greenberg of Detroit, two big boomers with bats in their hands. Each took a run at Babe Ruth's home run record of 60 in a season and ran out of breath and homers after 58.

Joe Cronin, who led the Washington Senators to the American League pennant in 1933 as a playing manager, and Bill Terry, who did it in '33 '36 and '37 in a similar role for the Giants. Mel Ott of the Giants, a stubby slugger with a crazy batting style that produced 511 home runs.

John McGraw, the king of managers, lasted into the '30s. He stepped down as pilot of the Giants in 1932 after 30 years and died two years later. Babe Ruth stopped hitting home runs for the Yankees in 1934 and quit altogether one year later while playing for the Boston Braves.

Branch Rickey, a beagle-browed, thrifty general manager of the Cardinals, was the father of the farm system, inaugurated in the early '30s. Front offices from New York to San Diego have been trying to imitate him ever since. His players insisted that Branch could rub a pair of dollar bills together and come up with four. But he was a baseball empire-builder of Napoleonic stature.

Rambunctious Larry MacPhail, a promoter who could have given Phineas T. Barnum a run for his money, introduced night baseball to the big leagues in 1935 in Cincinnati. MacPhail even got President Roosevelt to switch on the lights at the Reds' ball park on opening night by pressing a button in the White House.

MacPhail MOVED on to Brooklyn a few years later and in 1938 inaugurated night baseball at the old brickyard called Ebbets Field. Larry didn't need FDR that night. He had Johnny Vander Meer, a Cincinnati southpaw, who picked that evening to pitch his second consecutive no-hit game. It was the only time that was done.

Night baseball was a smash hit, a much greater success for MacPhail than his headline exploit in World War I. Larry, an officer in the Allied Expeditionary Forces (AEF), attempted with some buddies to kidnap the Kaiser, the defeated ruler of Germany who had skipped to the Netherlands. They struck out swinging.

Even the nicknames of the '30s had a great deal of bounce. Try these for size: Dizzy Dean, Goofy Gomez, Dazzy Vance, Goose Goslin, Ducky Medwick, Tarzan Parmalee, Paul (Big Poison) Waner and Lloyd (Little Poison) Waner, Micky Finn, Tony (Poosh-Em-Up) Lazzeri, Schoolboy Rowe, Wild Bill Hallahan, Fat Freddie Fitzsimmons, Kiki Cuyler, Mule Haas and Harry (The Horse) Danning.

It's improbable there ever was, or will be, another ball club like the 1934 Cardinals, the Gas House Gang. They played like muggers, but in broad daylight on the ball field. They won the National League pennant with a swagging sprint through the stretch, overcoming a lead of seven games for the Giants early in September.

THE CARDS got a nudge from the Brooklyn Dodgers, who taught manager Bill Terry of the Giants what a costly thing a faux pas can be. In February, Terry had asked deridingly, "Are the Dodgers still in the league?" He got his answer in September when Brooklyn, managed by Casey Stengel, whipped the Giants in the final two games of the season and knocked them out of first place, handing the flag to the Cards.

Dizzy and Daffy Dean won 49 games between them, Diz taking 30 and Daffy 19. Each won two games in the World Series as the Cards topped the Tigers in seven thrilling games. In the 11-0 finale in Detroit, which Dizzy pitched, the Tiger fans rioted and hurled a barrage of fruits and vegetables on leftfielder Joe Medwick of the Cards. It was the ultimate in fan loyalty, throwing food away during a depression.

In addition to the Deans and Medwick, the Cardinals had such grown-up juvenile delinquents as Leo (The Lip)

Durocher, hawk-nosed Pepper Martin, Frank Frisch, the manager, and Rip Collins. They brawled, sang, laughed and played baseball with the zeal of rookies and the skill of veterans.

The Yankees, of course, bullied the American League, winning five pennants and World Series from 1932 to 1939. They had 20 victories and just three losses in series play in that time. Hubbell beat them in '36 and '37, and Hal Schumacher, Carl's teammate on the Giants, outlasted them in an overtime nail-biter in '38.

It was in the 1932 World Series between the Yanks and Cubs in Chicago that Ruth hit the now-legendary home run into the centerfield bleachers. Just before the homer, Babe held up one finger—or was it two?—pointing toward the mound. Did he call his shot or was he just keeping track of the count?

The Yankees had a money-pitcher named Vernon (Goofy) Gomez, who lived up to his name by once halting a World Series game so everybody could watch an airplane droning overhead. They also had a fabulous first baseman, Lou Gehrig, the "Iron Horse," who played a record 2,130 consecutive games from 1925 to 1939.

THE CARDS, Giants and Cubs dominated the National League in the '30s, each winning three pennants. But the gut-gripping pressure and drama came

Atlantans miffed over Aaron's choice of fruit

ATLANTA—The people of Georgia are up in arms this weekend over Henry Aaron and what he did to an Atlanta sportswriter the other night.

Not that they especially care that Aaron, the game's greatest home run hitter, shoved a plate full of fruit in the face of Frank Hyland, baseball writer for the Atlanta Journal.

They didn't like the fact that Aaron chose strawberries as his weapon.

"We're in the Peach State," said one disgruntled bartender. "What's the hell's he doin' with strawberries?"

Said Hyland, a personable chap who has covered the Braves for three summers, when told of the city's feelings:

"If that's the case, I'm glad I don't live in the watermelon state, whatever that is."

It all developed over Aaron's statement on national television last Tuesday night prior to the All-Star game in Pittsburgh. When asked if he had any thoughts about managing the Braves after Eddie Mathews had been dismissed just two days earlier, Aaron said yes, he would have liked to have been considered and that he felt the club owed him that much.

Hyland said he had asked Aaron the same thing just the day before and that Aaron said no, he didn't want to manage.

Hyland, writing in Friday's Journal, explained Aaron's two stands and, at one point, used the phrase "double-talked." This is what incensed Aaron. He asked to see Hyland and in the midst of their conversation at Aaron's locker, Aaron became angry and shoved the strawberries in Hyland's face.

"I'm glad it was strawberries he had in his hand and not a bat," Hyland said, laughing off the incident.

"When I walked into my favorite tavern Saturday afternoon, I was an instant hero," Hyland said. "The guys handed me a plaque which had a sign on it, 'Fresh strawberries, 40 cents.' They gave me a T-shirt with 'Strawberry Hill' written across it and also a bottle of strawberry shampoo."

Clyde King, the new manager of the Braves who said earlier this week he anticipated no problems dealing with his superstar slugger, laughed at the incident, too.

"Out there," he said pointing to a clump of bushes next to Chief Nocahoma's teepee beyond the leftfield screen, "is where we grow the strawberries. We grow them for all kinds of occasions, not just sportswriters."

One who didn't see much humor in it at all was Aaron himself.

"I don't want to talk about it," he replied when asked about the strawberry incident. "It's over with. I have no further statement to make on the matter."

Hyland, back in the press box Saturday night to cover the game between the Dodgers and the Strawberry Hill Gang, was the subject of a lot of joking from him fellow writers.

"I just hope," he said, "Aaron doesn't make a habit of it. I still kind of like the guy."

Twins are double trouble today Williams still big 0 at Big A

By DON MERRY

Jack McKeon bit into a piece of fried chicken, licked his lips, and contemplated his place in the American League West.

"We still have a good chance," the manager of the Kansas City Royals intoned after a 6-3 victory over the Angels—handing the local residents a stunning 14th consecutive home defeat.

"We need a big second half out of Amos Otis and John Mayberry, and Nelson Briles is a key, too,"

McKeon said. "We still haven't played as good as we're capable of but maybe these three games will get us started."

The Royals awoke in Texas today, tied for second place with the Chicago White Sox, six games behind Oakland. With more than two months remaining, thoughts of overhauling the A's aren't absurd.

Meanwhile, the Angels awoke this morning convinced that Anaheim Stadium is a haunted house. They haven't won there since June 29.

Their chances are twice as good today—they face the Minnesota Twins in doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m.

The Angels succumbed Saturday night to the tantalizing knuckleball of Bruce Dal Canton. They managed only five hits—one of which was Ellie Rodriguez' three-run homer in the fourth.

But after that, Dal Canton proceeded to set down 15 in a row before Bruce Bochte singled with two out in the ninth.

The Royals slugged 16 hits—15 of them singles—in completing a sweep of the three-game series. They had at least one hit in every inning except the seventh and they scored in that round anyway on a pair of walks and an error.

Somehow, manager Dick Williams remains composed and gracious through these troubled times. But he did not attempt to mask his displeasure with a few things he witnessed Saturday night.

"Errors, walks and poor feeds on doubleplay balls definitely hurt us," he said. "But we finally got a few key hits with

Malignant cancer didn't halt Alderman

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP)—Grady Alderman put off cancer surgery so he could play with his Minnesota Vikings teammates in the Super Bowl last January, the Viking offensive captain has revealed.

Alderman, 35, said Saturday that he learned of the malignancy in his groin after the Vikings had defeated Dallas for the National Football Conference title.

Successful surgery was conducted three days after the Vikings lost the Super Bowl to the Miami Dolphins, Alderman told Minneapolis Tribune columnist Sid Hartman.

"I noticed for some time last fall that there had been a change in my body," Alderman said. "It was after the Dallas game that I decided to see a doctor and have my groin checked."

"The minute the doctor saw it, he told me that it was serious. It had to come out. The doctor also informed me that the chances of it not being a malignant tumor were almost nonexistent."

Alderman said his physician wanted to operate immediately, "like the day after I saw him." But Alderman, who will start his 14th season with the Vikings this fall, said he could not allow that.

"I felt that with the Super Bowl coming up too much was at stake," he said. "Many people had worked too hard and too long to get there. I wasn't going to walk out on the guys."

Alderman said his doctor and team physician Dr. Don Lannin researched the matter and concluded "that there wasn't any danger if I did play in the Super Bowl."

"I felt there probably were 20 million people in the country who would trade with me for what I've been able to do in my 35 years," Alderman said. "I had lived a pretty good life. My spirits were good."

Alderman underwent surgery the Wednesday after the Super Bowl.

"The groin was malignant as the doctor figured," Alderman said. "But he was very encouraged. Of the four types of groin cancer, the type I had was the easiest to cure."

In order to be certain the malignancy did not spread through the lymph glands, Alderman took x-ray treatments for 20 days.

"This was the worst part of it all," he recalled. "About 80 per cent of the time I'd get nauseated."

Since then, though, there's been no sign of a recurrence and Alderman figured he's licked the disease.

"So now I'm ready to start another season," he said. "Everything is behind me."

DODGERS RIPPED—

placed the Hammer ahead of the Babe.

"She might have seen me hit some in New York," Aaron said afterward, "but I know it's the first one she's seen me hit here."

The home run, Aaron's 13th this season, came off of young Rex Hudson, who was making his first appearance in the major leagues after being recalled from Albuquerque when Tommy John became disabled.

It was a three-run wallop in the seventh inning and so shaken was Hudson that the next hitter, Baker, also homered.

"That," said an obviously pleased King, the one-time Pilot of the Hollywood Stars, "was the Dusty Baker I know. That's the Dusty Baker I managed (three years ago) at Richmond."

Baker batted .311 that year, .321 in 1972 with the Braves and .288 last season.

But he was batting only .245 until King took over — he's 5-for-9 in the two games King has managed — and it is the major reason the Braves have thus far not been a contender in the National League's Western Division.

The pitching has been the major surprise and, at the moment, it is the Braves, the team with the poorest pitching in the N.L. last year, who are leading. Their team earned run average is 2.97. The Dodgers, who have led all season, dropped to second at 3.00.

"When you can say you have a staff second only to the Dodgers," said King, "you have something. But when you go past L.A., you REALLY have something."

The loss clipped another game off the Dodgers' lead — they now show only a 4½-game advantage over Cincinnati — but King insists the Dodgers aren't going to blow it. "Cincinnati may catch the Dodgers," he explained, "but the Dodgers aren't going to kick it away. They simply have too good of a team. Losing John is a big blow, perhaps more psychological than anything for the other pitchers."

Al Downing, the man who served up No. 715 to Hank on April 8, started the game but was gone after five innings, trailing 5-0.

Hudson followed and pitched two good innings, getting Aaron the first time he faced him with a fly to center, and then the roof fell in during the seventh.

But Aaron consoled the 20-year-old right-hander, nicknamed "Billy Jack" for his collection of wide-brimmed hats.

"Hey," Aaron said later, "I saw Koufax get bombed when he first came up back in Brooklyn. This kid has a good arm. I never faced him until he got me out in the fifth inning. But he had a good record in the minors (13-3 at Albuquerque) so he must have had something. He's probably going to be around a long time."

DODGER DOPE: Aaron's homer was his third of the season off of Dodger pitching. Downing was tagged for the memorable one, No. 715, then Charlie Hough for No. 716 three days later.

The Dodgers lost a chance to jump out quickly against Nickerson when shortstop Craig Robinson made a phenomenal play of Joe Ferguson's hard grounder in the second inning, taking away a certain hit that would have scored a run and turned it into a doubleplay. Nickerson, now 10-9, is 2-9 against the Dodgers this year.

Dave Lopes had two of the Dodgers' four hits, a triple and a single, to extend his hitting streak to nine games, his longest of the season. Bill Buckner has hit in four games in a row and 11 of his last 12.

Pitching today will be left-hander Geoff Zahn (1-1) and Buzz Capra (10-5).

The game will be televised (Channel 11) beginning at 11:15 a.m.

Kansas City jumped on starter Ed Figueroa for two runs and four hits in the first inning and Figueroa was obliged to depart after facing only six men.

The Royals got another run off John Cumberland in the second, and added single scores in the fourth, seventh and eighth.

A pair of walks preceded Rodriguez' sixth home run in the fifth but did not serve to rattle Dal Canton, the erstwhile reliever who has rediscovered prosperity with his knuckler.

McKeon explained Dal Canton's new role as a starter:

"I'd rather have him start than bring him in as a reliever. He's like a rookie with that knuckler. He doesn't know where it's going and neither do I."

Diminutive Freddie Patek led the K.C. assault with four hits while first baseman Tony Solaita collected three and Cookie Rojas chipped in with a double and single.

Cowboys have 49ers' number

The San Francisco 49ers lost a controlled benefit scrimmage, 20-12, to the Dallas Cowboys Saturday at the Cowboys' training camp in Thousand Oaks.

It was the second time in eight days that the Cowboys had beaten San Francisco.

Rookie running backs Larry Lloyd, from San Jose State, Roy Snell of Iowa State and Delvin Williams of Kansas divided the ball-carrying chores for the 49ers.

Snell's 39-yard run accounted for one of San Francisco's touchdowns. The other was scored on a 30-yard pass from Dennis Morrison to wide receiver Fred Riley.

Dallas scored on twin 1-yard plunges by backs Doug Dennison and Larry Robinson. The Cowboys also hit on a 30-yard field goal by Toni Frisch and a 35-yard boot by Harry Kokulus.

The proceeds collected from the nearly 1,000 fans who watched the scrimmage went to Debra Steffer, 16, a Thousand Oaks girl hospitalized for accidental gunshot wounds since July 4.

Montebello tips Douglas Jets

George Martinez hurled a four-hitter and George Zilla singled in two runs as Montebello upset the Douglas Jets, 3-1, Saturday night in the District Connie Mack tournament at Blair Field.

In another contest, Compton's Mohawks rattled La Mirada pitching for 13 hits, including four triples and three doubles, in an 11-3 romp. Douglas Jets get a rematch with Compton tonight, the Jets winning Friday's tourney opener, 4-3.

Gregg bags road race by second

ELKHART LAKE, Wis. (AP) — Peter Gregg of Jacksonville, Fla., driving his Porsche the full 200 miles without a pit stop, edged out Warren Agor's Camaro by less than a second Saturday to win the Trans-American road race crown.

Gregg, whose car averages 6.7 miles a gallon, nearly twice that of the larger Chevy Camaros, covered the winding Road America course in two hours, three minutes and 23.8 seconds, averaging 97.25 mph.

The victory gave Gregg 60 points and the Trans-Am circuit championship, five points ahead of Ludwig Heimrath of Scarborough, Ont., who finished fourth in a Porsche.

In preliminaries for today's feature for Formula 5000 Indytype cars, Mario Andretti pushed his Lola-Chevy to a speed of 115.444 mph, setting a lap record for the four-mile course of 2:47.1.

Qualifying second for today's 100-mile event was Brian Redman of England in a Lola-Chevy.

Intrepid takes another first

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) —Intrepid, 48 seconds ahead of Courageous, Saturday finished first in a special race held by the New York Yacht Club for contenders of the America's Cup. Valiant, sailing alone in the closing yards of the 20-mile course in Rhode Island Sound, came in a poor third.

The three 12-meter yachts will race again next Saturday, the last day of the New York Yacht Club Cruise which is touring the Rhode Island Sound. Mariner is expected to join them to show the results of her recent surgery.

Stokes Award to go to Dave Bing

NEW YORK (UPI) —Guard Dave Bing of the Detroit Pistons has been honored as the winner of the Maurice Stokes Memorial Award as the player who most typifies Stokes' courage and determination.

Bing's career nearly was ended in 1971 when he sustained an eye injury in an exhibition game but he recovered and even though suffering from double-vision, averaged 22 points a game that season.

Nitehawks win 7-3, keep WSC hopes alive

The Long Beach Nitehawks kept alive whatever hopes they might have of catching the Lakewood Jets in the Western Softball Congress pennant race Saturday night with a 7-3 win over the Lakewood Barons at Mayfair Park.

The Nitehawks travel to Mayfair Park tonight for a 7:30 encounter with the Jets while the Barons host San Bernardino at 1, also at Mayfair Park.

Better conditioned North stops South

By PAUL McLEOD

It was "conditioning" after all, that finally prevailed in the 23rd Shrine Game Saturday night.

A bubbling crowd of 39,117 at the Rose Bowl watched a lackluster offensive show that provided little more thrills than trying to get into the stadium. A 32-yard field goal by specialty kicker Mark Reed provided the North with a 9-6 win.

So slow was the offensive action that the biggest cheers of the night occurred when one of only eight sky divers attempting to land on the 50-yard line during halftime sailed on target.

It was the second consecutive loss for the South, 14-10 losers last year under the old interstate format in the Coliseum. The North won the series record to 13-7-3 in favor of the South.

"We used our game plan which was based on physical conditioning," commented co-coach Hal

Lambert of Taft High. "We figured we could run around, through and at them and physically wear them down."

"Where we practiced there wasn't much to do," continued a weary Lambert. "There were no girls, no nothing...it was hot and our conditioning program paid off. There just wasn't anything to do but think football while we were at Whittier College."

It was defense by both clubs, especially Lambert's tireless North squad, in the fourth quarter that provided the thrills.

The South quarterback, Neff High's Rick Costello, put the Rebels on the board following the opening kickoff. After fumbling the opening snap, Costello sent Dwight Ford up the middle for 13 yards, then sent him off tackle for four more.

Expecting Costello to throw, North linebacker Brian Woods, and Dan McCann were caught flat-footed as fullback Frank Manumaluena burst through the line on a draw gaining 21 yards to the North 40.

Two carries by Ford netted one yard, but on a third and nine, Costello connected with Santa Monica's Dennis Thurman for 35 yards to the North four.

Thurman, himself a record-setting quarterback, had beaten North

'Sun could beat lot of NFL teams'

Williams given new lease on life

"It's still a game, I still love the game, it's always been fun for me — up until the last two years, anyway — and it's fun for me again." — Dave Williams.

Life often takes fateful turns that can change a person's humdrum existence into instant success.

Jim Nabors was never taken seriously as a singer until he found out he was funny. Phyllis Diller discovered she was a big hit being ugly. Joe Garagiola has made a career out of his inability to hit a curve ball. Or any other kind of ball.

It all turned around for David Laverne Williams the day he left the National Football League, signed with the Southern California Sun of the World Football League, left his family in San Diego and moved in with a quarterback. On a boat.

Williams, one of the Sun's starting wide receivers, and quarterback Tony Adams live in Newport Beach aboard the 51-foot ketch that Williams bought last February.

Dave explains that his wife Marilyn and two children "come up once or twice a week," but otherwise he and Adams are left alone on the poop deck to while away the hours congratulating each other on their liberation from the National Football League and hard times with the San Diego Chargers.

THEY KID each other a lot, such as the other day after Adams had thrown Williams a 40-yard bomb to beat Jacksonville, 22-19, on the last play of the game.

"Hey, Tony," Williams said, "I want to thank you for getting me in the defensive states — one tackle."

Williams had been obligated to wrestle an opponent to the turf after Adams threw an interception.

But both are serious students and practitioners of the game and not living a lark.

"The cornerbacks in this league are tougher than I thought they'd be," says Dave. "You know, there are a lot of shaky ones in the NFL."

Williams, an all-America at the University of Washington, was a No. 1 draft choice of the St. Louis Cardinals, with whom he played five years until moving to San Diego in a trade involving one Leon Burns.

Adams was there, too, recently arrived from Utah State.

"I was really impressed with Tony but he wasn't given much of a chance," Williams recalls. "Other than (John) Unitas, Tony was the best quarterback there — better than Dan Fouts or Wayne Clark. There's a lot of politics, especially in that organization. We can get into that later, if you like."

WILLIAMS IS PLAYING for his fourth team in the last four years — fifth if you count the New York Stars, who held his World Football League rights for awhile. After the San Diego season, he was traded to the Pittsburgh Steelers, then asked for and was kindly granted his release to make a deal for himself.

Arl Rooney, the Steelers' owner, Dave recalls, "was really decent about it," but that's the last fond memory he has of the NFL.

"I have a lot of animosity toward the NFL," says Dave, a straight sort of guy not ordinarily given to cause he didn't play regularly but because being in the East disrupted his family and kept him away from his contracting business in San Diego. His misery was with the Chargers was entirely different.

"As I look back at things, I came from St. Louis with a lot of great ideas. I was a receiver and I wanted to be with a team that would throw the ball and throw it well, and San Diego could. Well, they could until Sid (Gillman) left, anyway."

"John Hadl, I think, is the best quarterback in the game, but they didn't give him a chance to do what he does best. Okay, we could have played that way and won but we fell into a lot of personality conflicts."

Then you get into the real problem, which was the drugs.

WILLIAMS DOES not attempt to minimize the volume of revelations concerning the Chargers' use of pot and pills.

"It got totally out of hand," Dave says. "I saw what was going on and couldn't believe it. Harland (coach-general manager Harland Sware) was told ... he was told by several guys, but he didn't want to believe it. That's what really sent the Chargers to the bottom."

"Nobody else took it upon himself as a leader to stand up and say, 'Hey, we've got to put this stuff down.' Everybody'd just come to practice at the last minute, then right after practice they're like ghosts — just gone. No unity, no cohesion. That's pretty rough. You really don't have anything."

Williams is personally involved in avoiding disruptive situations on the Sun. At Jacksonville, Fla., last week he was the only offensive starter with previous pro experience.

"I've taken a role as a team leader," he says. "When you have a young team you look to the veterans. I'm not a real vocal person, but it just seems natural for me to talk up at meetings."

Dave was one of six Team Council members — one for each position — originally appointed by coach Tom Fears. Later he became one of four permanent captains.

"All I want is to win," Dave says. "I haven't won a championship since high school. We can do it here. It's still a game, it's fun for me again and we've got a helluva club. We could beat a lot of teams in the NFL."

unkind comments about anyone. "The strike now is ridiculous. The players want too much and the owners are too damn stubborn."

Williams, who will be 29 next month, says, "It's asinine to go in and ask for some of the things they have, like fewer meetings and no curfew."

"Frankly, most of the players I know in the NFL feel the same way I do. We're in this game to play. We want to make money, sure, and we don't want to get stepped on, but you can't be absurd about it."

WILLIAMS WAS reminded that Ed Garvey, the NFL Players' Assn. executive director, has talked of organizing the WFL players as well.

"Garvey?" responds Williams. "We don't want anything to do with Garvey. We don't want the NFLPA. There are too many of us that have had bad experiences over there and have come over ... been given a new life. To hell with 'em. We don't need 'em."

Billie Jean coach of year?

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — The coach of the year just might be Billie Jean King: not the female coach of the year, but THE coach of the year — male, female, or neuter.

If the Philadelphia Freedoms go on to win the World Team Tennis championship in the playoffs next month, Billie Jean would have to be considered along with, say, Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins and Fred Shero of the Philadelphia Flyers for the honor.

The conqueror of Bobby Riggs is challenging male supremacy again, this time with her instinct, her vitality, her psychology. She's also challenging it with her skill. That might be the only flaw in the argument that she deserves to be coach of the year. Her success as a coach is influenced somewhat by her success as a player. The Freedoms have a 25-1 won-lost record, the WTT's best. But as a coach she already sounds like Don Shula or Fred Shero.

"One thing's made us the leader," she was saying. "We've worked harder than any other team."

The other Freedoms players are Fred Stolle, Buster Mottram, Brian Fairlie, Tory Ann Fretz and Julie Anthony.

"ON OFF DAYS, I MEAN on nongame days," she explained, "we practice for three hours. I make 'em run a lot too. In the beginning we were running 12 minutes straight almost every day. Condition and practice, you've got to have them. But the big thing I found is to sit down and listen to the players, then talk with them. If they know you feel compassion for them, they trust you. I knew Fred and Brian and Tory pretty well, but I didn't know Buster or Julie that well."

Christopher (Buster) Mottram is a 19-year-old Englishman, the son of Tony Mottram, once a British Davis Cup player. Julie Anthony is a 26-year-old Californian.

"You have to realize that each person is different,"

DAVE ANDERSON

Billie Jean continued. "I learned that I can yell at Buster but with Julie, I have to be gentle. During a match I can shout at Buster. 'What's wrong with you, go, fight' and he responds. But with Julie, I have to make her laugh because she gets very tense. On a crossover I'll tell her, 'We haven't got a chance if you don't laugh,' and slowly she'll smile. I can handle hyper people."

Stolle, a 35-year-old Australian who is the Freedoms' captain, needed some time to adjust to a female coach.

"I don't think Fred or Brian really believed I knew anything about men's tennis," she said. "I convinced them."

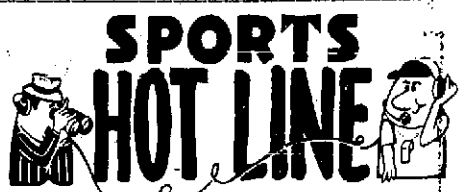

AS THE COACH, SHE ESTABLISHED fines for various infractions of rules but she didn't set a curfew. "They're too old for a curfew," she said. "But we have fines for being late for practice or for a bus or for a match or for forgetting part of your uniform. It's a $100 fine if you miss a plane, plus you then have to pay for your own ticket. I got the first fine. I was 18 minutes late for practice. I didn't get my wake-up call at the hotel. It cost me $18, a dollar a minute."

Her responsibility as coach has detracted somewhat from her game, she believes. She was dethroned at Wimbledon in the quarter-finals.

"It's taken a little bit off my game," she said, "but it's added a new dimension to my life. It's nice to be able to give back to tennis what I've received from other people through the years. People like Clyde Walker who gave me the fundamentals, the Long Beach Tennis Patrons who sent me East for the first time, Harold Guiver who sent me to Wimbledon for the first time, the Frank Brennans, who were like a second family for me, Mervyn Rose, who gave me the subtleties of being a top player, and Alice Marble, who showed me the mentality of a champion."

"I found that people like to be coached. I come out an hour early every day just to help Buster work on his volley. I yell at him, 'Buster, get your racket back.' He's improving. I think I was made to be a coach."

"MY DAD SHOULD HAVE BEEN a coach. He was always coaching Randy and me," she said, referring to her brother, a pitcher for the San Francisco Giants. "As a kid, I played tennis but I played team games like basketball and softball and speedball. It was like

Q. Just a few days ago I read that more than 100 veterans were in pro training camps and it occurred to me that the momentum had swung from the players to the owners. Do you know any inside information, on how this came about? — Dudley Smith, San Antonio.

A. The players began to be staggered by the reaction of the fans, who equated them with the Baltimore police and other striking civil servants. However, there were two moves by management that hurried things along. Teams followed the lead of the Dallas Cowboys in listing the number of veterans who made it as rookies in 1970, year of the previous strike. A whopping 15 Cowboy rookies began NFL careers that season and 10 eventually wore Super Bowl rings. The biggest pressure point was the owners' vote to play the pre-season with whomever they had in camp. "That's it," one owner exulted. "The war is over. Now it's just a matter of time."

Q. Joe Louis is back in the public eye again as ref for Quarry-Frazier, frontman in Las Vegas, etc. I am happy to see that his problems are apparently over, but I don't know exactly what his problems were. Were they mental or financial or both? —Henry Canton, Durham, N.C.

A. Louis is so well-liked by sports writers that his troubles were seldom catalogued in detail. Now that he is rehabilitated, Joe keeps no secrets. Five years ago he suffered a physical breakdown brought on by cocaine addiction. A year later he was in and out of clinics with emotional disorders, which included a delusion that the Mafia was out to get him. His famous troubles with Internal Revenue are long settled and today Joe's life is more promising than anytime since his first retirement.

Q. Have there been any no-hit games where the pitcher has lost? I don't mean like Wayne Garland got beat in the ninth by Oakland. I mean no-hitter all the way. —Butch Peterson, Granite City, Ill.

A. Several pitchers (Harvey Haddix, Jim Maloney, Bobo Newsome) have had no-hitters through nine and then lost on extra-inning hits, but only one has done what you describe. On April 23, 1964, Ken Johnson, of the then Houston Colt .45s, pitched a no-hit game and lost 1-0 to Cincinnati when he threw wild on a play at first base.

Q. Score another one for longevity. First Aaron and now Bob Gibson. I don't care if Gibson is the first man since Walter Johnson to strike out 3,000. I will always believe that Sandy Koufax was the greatest strikeout pitcher I ever saw. Can you furnish me with some facts to back up my opinion? —H. J. Livingston, Pittsburgh.

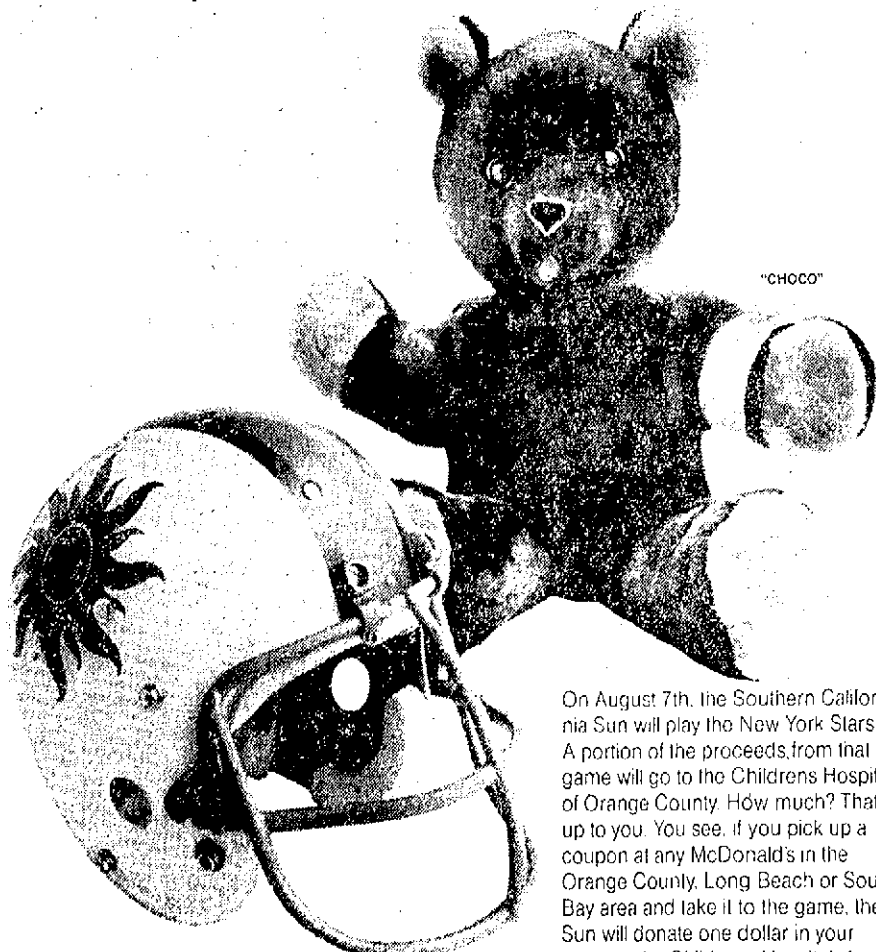

A. Koufax holds the National League record for most strikeouts in a season, 382, and a half a dozen other esoteric marks. Your point should be that for six seasons (1961-1966) when Koufax was at his peak, striking out more than 1,500, he was the greatest who ever lived.

Q. Baseball and football are talking expansion again. I know the Mets won the World Series, but overall how have the other expansion teams done? —Ken Overmire, Rutherford, N. J.

A. None of the other seven expansion teams has ever won a division title and only one, Houston, has ever finished second. By contrast, two NFL teams (Dallas, Miami) have won the Super Bowl, which seems to prove that pro football's mechanics are better equalizers than baseball's.

BUD TUCKER

Bowie Kuhn has —hic—spoken

When Bowie Kuhn rose to publicly vocalize the other day, the nation was delighted at the reassurance that (a) there is a commissioner of baseball and (b) the commissioner of baseball can speak.

As near as anyone could recall, the commissioner was last moved to oratory a couple of springtimes ago when advised of a wife swapping incident within the camp of the New York Yankees.

"This office finds the matter regrettable," Kuhn said at the time, "but there is nothing I can do about it."

Breathless, the population anticipated dialogue from the commissioner on the occasion of Henry Aaron's 715 home run which was deposited into the bullpen at Atlanta Stadium, thereby marking a significant milestone in the history of the national pastime.

Unfortunately, Kuhn was not present in Atlanta. He was attending a cocktail party in Cleveland.

BASEBALL WILL forever lament the absence of an official quote from the office of the czar, but intelligence has leaked out of Cleveland as to the reaction of Kuhn to one of the game's most magic moments. At the height of the revelry in Cleveland, the story goes, an aide rushed up to Kuhn to inform him of Aaron's historic heroics.

"Hic," the commissioner exulted.

Now Kuhn has spoken again, this time to request a move from the 24 major league teams. The commissioner has asked that all, or as many of the clubs as is feasible, schedule some of their home games in the stadium at Washington, D.C.

In placing this suggestion before the club owners, Kuhn points out that the nation's capital has been without baseball since the local side rode into the sunset to become the Texas Rangers after the 1971 American League season.

The statistics presented by the commissioner are, of course, beyond dispute. Washington indeed has been without major league baseball since 1971.

HOWEVER, KUHN'S reasoning is not altogether clear. It is noteworthy that he does not mention Boise, Idaho or Victoria, Tex., or Great Falls, Mont., or Providence, R.I.

You see, these communities have never had major league baseball.

Naturally, theories will be advanced as to why the commissioner would concern himself with Washington while apparently giving no thought or consideration to other deserving cities.

It will be suggested that baseball, always alert to such matters as antitrust, wishes to get in bed with certain politicians and will bend over backwards to maintain friendly relations in the government and social circles of Washington.

It will also quite likely be pointed out that the cocktail party circuit in Washington is extremely attractive. In fact, the scene on the hill is said to rival even that of San Francisco which, as you know, is the national headquarters of the cocktail hour.

AT LEAST, Washington is rated several furlongs ahead of Cleveland.

Otherwise, the motives may be entirely cultural. For one thing, when there is no sporting activity in the capital, literature suffers noticeably.

It was Washington that was celebrated in story and song as follows:

"First in war, first in peace and last in the American League."

And it was not until George Allen got to Washington with the Redskins that he was inspired to announce, "The future is now."

This is not necessarily to insist that commissioner Kuhn is in need of inspiration, but the utterances he delivers out of Cleveland are something less than memorable.

NFL oldtimers picket over pension

CANTON, O. (AP)—National Football League oldtimers, upset that they are excluded from the pension fund, demonstrated against striking members of the NFL Players' Assn. who manned picket lines Saturday outside the Hall of Fame exhibition game.

Nearly 20 former NFL players mingled with the game's current performers outside Fawcett Stadium, site of the season's first pre-season contest between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Buffalo Bills.

It was the first time in pro sports history that striking players brought their protests to a game. The two teams played the contest mainly with rookies and free agents.

"The Cardinals and Bills are not playing here today," said NFLPA president Bill Curry. "The Cards and Bills are out here on the picket line."

Among those supporting the old-timers by carrying a picket sign was Marie Lombardi, widow of Hall of Famer Vince Lombardi.

"We're trying to make the players aware that those who quit before 1959 do not share in the pension fund," said Leon Hart, president of the NFL Alumni Assn.

"We're asking that players before 1959 be included in the pension," said Hart, former Notre Dame and Detroit Lions great who retired 17 years ago.

The alumni association has a class action suit pending in a Providence, R. I., court against NFL owners and current players over the pension controversy. A pre-trial hearing is scheduled for Sept. 17.

"I can't believe what the rank and file players are doing," Hart said of the current strike. "They are being misled. We are outraged at their unreasonable demands."

Bill George, Dick (Night Train) Lane, and Lou (The Toe) Groza joined the old-timers pickets after they were inducted into the Hall of Fame prior to the game.

Tony Canadeo, also inducted Saturday, did not picket.

There were no major problems between the two groups although they occasionally jarred one another.

Curry led the NFLPA pickets who were supported by more than 200 auto workers, machinists, and steelworkers from North-eastern Ohio.

"We're growing up as a union, and you guys are showing us how," Curry told the union workers before they left the NFLPA local headquarters for the picket line.

"I can never tell you how much the players appreciate your coming out and supporting us," said Curry, who had nearly 50 fellow players with him.

Curry acknowledged that fans are upset over the prolonged strike threatening the regular season.

"Folks are sick of turning to the sports pages and reading about controversy," he said. "No matter how great our differences are, the owners and players should stay at the bargaining table until this is settled. We're showing our good faith by making major concessions in all areas this week."

He did not elaborate.

Curry looked at a "Football's Forgotten Men" placard carried by an oldtimer and said "they are suing us to be included in the pension plan. But that's something we can't legally do. It's not a valid lawsuit."

Catcher Dan Rowe singled home Tommy Thomas with the winning run in the sixth inning to enable Los Altos to win the District 36 Little League playoff, 9-8, over Bellflower Saturday. Los Altos continues playoff action against District 42 winner Tuesday at 5:45 p.m. in Huntington Beach. Greg Larson was the winning pitcher for Los Altos which received sparkling support in the top of the sixth when Scott Hoop and Thomas threw runners out at the plate.

Card rookies outscore Bills'

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Larry Stallings issued a warning to his striking fellow veterans Saturday after playing in the St. Louis Cardinals' 21-13 exhibition victory over the Buffalo Bills.

"There will be a lot more rookies make it than usual this year because of the work they're getting," said the 12th year middle linebacker, the only bona fide regular involved in the first 1974 preseason game.

Stallings played in only two defensive series. Yet to Greg (Grape Juice) Johnson and 13 yards to Bill Porter. Johnson, a free agent rookie from the University of Wisconsin, also scored on a one-yard run.

Buffalo's scoring came on Boris Shlapak's 26 and 27-yard field goals and an 11-yard run by quarterback Gary Marangi, the Bills' No. 3 draft choice from Boston College.

Keith Denson, a rookie from San Diego State, set up two of the three St. Louis touchdowns with brilliant punt returns. The 5-foot-8, 165 pound wide receiver returned a kick 44 yards in the opening quarter to the Buffalo 20-yard line, the springboard to Bynum's five-yard strike to Johnson.

Denson rambled 38 yards with another punt return to the Bills' 16 in the second quarter. Five plays later, Johnson punched over from the one to give the Cardinals a 14-10 halftime lead.

The game was part of the annual Hall of Fame enshrinement ceremonies. Lou (The Toe) Groza, Bill George, Tony Canadeo and Dick (Night Train) Lane joined pro football's shrine before the contest.

Trevino, Hill chase Nichols in Canada golf

PORT CREDIT, Ont. (AP)—Veteran Bobby Nichols came from three strokes off the pace with a wind-blown 68 and swept into a one-stroke lead Saturday after the third round of the $200,000 Canadian Open golf championship.

Nichols, who combines his tour activities with his job as head pro at the famed Firestone Country Club in Akron, O., put together a 54-hole total of 202.

That was eight under par for three trips over the 6,788 Mississauga Golf Club course and one in front of challenging Lee Trevino and Mike Hill going into today's final round of this national championship.

Trevino—like Nichols the winner of one title earlier this season—and Hill also had two-under-par 68s in the hot, windy weather and were tied for second with 203.

"I've hit the ball a little better every day," Trevino said. "I'm getting closer and closer with the putter every day. I just hope I can hit the ball as well tomorrow and maybe make a putt."

Chi Chi Rodriguez, who led after a second-round 63, didn't make a birdie in the third round and blew to a 74 and a tie at 205 with Larry Wise, Lionel Hebert, Larry Ziegler and Tom Kite.

Nichols scored the 11th victory of his 15-year career earlier this season in the San Diego Open and, with $71,660 in earnings, is enjoying one of his best years.

He would like nothing better than to win this one. In addition to the $40,000 first prize, the winner gets a berth in the four-man field for the World Series of Golf which will be played on Nichols' home course this fall.

"You don't really need any extra incentive to win," he said. "But if there is one, well, the World Series would sure be it."

Nichols, who plays some 20 tour events a year, had a very solid round that included 16 pars and two birdies. He missed four greens but chipped close on three of them and saved par with a 10-foot putt on the other.

He birdied the 13th from 15 feet and took sole control of the lead on the 15th with a downhill 40-foot putt that he said "I was just trying to get close enough to get down in two."

Skala wheels as Laura fades

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP)—Carole Jo Skala carved two strokes off par Saturday and assumed an almost-insurmountable six-stroke lead after two rounds of the Wheeling Ladies Professional Golf Assn. Classic.

Mrs. Skala combined a 70 with her first-round score of 69 for a five-under-par 139 over Oglebay Park's Speidel course.

Heading into today's final round, she was the only member of the field under par.

In second place at 145, one over par, were Jane Blalock and Christl Pastore. Both had 74s Saturday.

Three first-day challengers—Maria Astorloges, Laura Baugh and Robyn Dummett—faded Saturday under the Stadler amateur tee semifinalist

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. (AP)—Curtis Strange of Wake Forest went to the final hole before defeating Bill Mallon of Framingham, Mass., 1-up, in the second round of match play Saturday at the Western Amateur golf tournament.

Strange, the 19-year-old NCAA golf champion, eliminated Buddy Alexander in 21 holes earlier in the day. Then the Virginia Beach, Va., teenager hit a chip shot to within 18 inches of the pin and sank the putt on the 18th green against Mallon to advance to today's semifinal round.

He'll be matched against 18-year-old Brad Fabel of Madisonville, Ky., who ousted University of Florida star Phil Hancock, 4-and-2, in their quarterfinal match.

The other semifinal will pit reigning U.S. Amateur titlist Craig Stadler of La Jolla, Calif., against another member of Wake Forest's NCAA championship team, Jay Haas of Belleville, Ill.

Stadler had the easiest matches of the day, defeating Mike Fermoy of Minneapolis, 4-2, and then Randy Simmons of Shreveport, La., 4-3.

Stadler's USC teammate Mark Pfeil of Palos Verdes suffered a 4-2 morning loss to Hancock, one of the U. of Florida's fine competitors.

Tribe uses singles to skip past Tigers

CLEVELAND (UPI)—Cleveland parlayed five successive singles into a three-run third inning and reliever Tom Buskey hurled 3 1-3 perfect innings Saturday to pace the Indians to a 3-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

After Detroit starter and loser Lerrin LaGrow retired the first seven batters in order, singles by Buddy Bell, Frank Duffy, John Lowenstein, Jack Brohamer and George Hendrick gave Cleveland starter Jim Perry a 3-0 lead but the 37-year old veteran righthander was chased in the sixth inning.

Bosox edge Yankees, 5-4

BOSTON (AP) — Bob Montgomery's bases-loaded pinch-hit in the bottom of the ninth inning gave Boston a 5-4 victory over the New York Yankees Saturday night and kept the Red Sox in first place in the American League East.

Dwight Evans beat out a leadoff infield hit, off Sparky Lyle, 6-2, and Rick Burleson punched a one-out single down the right field line.

Lyle wild-pitched the runners to third and second and walked Doug Griffin intentionally before Montgomery batted for Tim Blackwell and lined a single to left.

Twins topple A's, 6-1

OAKLAND (AP)—Glenn Borgmann drove in three runs, backed the eight-hut pitching of Ray Corbin, and led Minnesota to a 6-1 victory over Oakland Saturday.

The Twins scored three runs in the first inning against Jim (Catfish) Hunter (14-9) whose personal winning streak was snuffed at seven games.

Tony Oliva led off with a double and Bill Holt singled him to third. Eric Soderholm doubled for one run and Borgmann singled for two more.

Singles by Holt and Soderholm and Borgmann's sacrifice fly made it 4-0 in the fourth inning. In the seventh, a walk to Rod Carew, Steve Braun's single, a sacrifice and Bob Darwin's double gave the Twins two more runs.

Oakland nicked Corbin (6-3) for its only run in the bottom of the seventh on Bill North's single.

A walk to Gene Tenace and Dick Green's infield out preceded North's RBI single for the A's, whose winning streak against the Twins this year was halted at eight games.

Barrow takes Trans-Am golf

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — Barbara Barrow, until now a 19-year-old unknown on the women's amateur golf scene, rallied from a two-hole deficit with five holes to play Saturday to capture a convincing 3-1, 36 hole triumph over Mrs. Janet Engesser of Huntington Beach, to win the 1974 Trans-National Women's Golf Tournament.
Miss Barrow, Chula Vista, Calif., turned things around with a birdie on the 13th hole of the second round then went on to win four consecutive holes, climaxing the match with a four-foot birdie putt on 17.

Bucky Dent then belted a two-run double and Orta capped the rally with a run-scoring single.

The Rangers took a 1-0 lead in the first on Alex Johnson's one-out double, a hit batsman and Mike Hargrove's bloop single to right center.

The White Sox scored two runs in the third. Sharp struck out to open the inning, but reached first when the pitch went wild. Ed Herrmann's single put runners at first and third and Sharp scored on Dent's fielder's choice. One out later, Orta's single to left made it 2-1.

Texas regained the lead at 3-2 in the last of the third. Cesar Tovar led off with a double and took third on Johnson's grounder. Jeff Burroughs doubled home his 75th run of the season with a double, then moved to third on a grounder before Jim Spencer hit a run-scoring single.

The White Sox tied it in the fourth on May's single and Henderson's double. Hargrove's two-run single in the fourth provided Texas with a 5-3 lead.

BALTIMORE (AP)—Darrell Porter drilled a three-run double in the first inning and scored a fourth-inning run that carried the Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Saturday night.

Singles by Dave May and George Scott, off Wayne Garland (3-4), and John Briggs' grounder that shortstop Mark Belanger fumbled for an error loaded the bases before Porter belted a double to right-centerfield.

Are you happy at the gas station? And miserable everywhere else?

Over the last six months, one burning question has swept America: "What kind of mileage d'ya get?" In response to it, car manufacturers have come out with a rash of small cars overnight.

Of course, it's not easy to build a small car overnight. So a number of new questions are being raised about them like: "Where do I put my legs?" "Why can't I sit up straight?" "What do I do with my luggage?" and "Must I leave half my family at home?"

At Fiat, we've been building small cars for 70 years. We worked out the problems of getting good mileage years ago. But we've also had a lot of time along the way to figure out how to make a small car that doesn't make you pay for driving a small car.

We make your legs happy.

In the Fiat 124 you see below, you won't find yourself with your knees crunched up somewhere near your chin. By taking away some of the room normally used for the engine and giving it to the passengers, we've given the 124 more legroom than a Lincoln Continental, a Cadillac Eldorado, and a Chrysler Imperial.*

We make your head happy.

By making the 124 coupe a little boxy instead of sleek, we've given it more headroom than a Mercedes 450 and a Rolls Royce.* This height, plus exceptionally large windows, keeps you from the claustrophobia you often get in small cars.

We make the people in the back seat happy.

Most small cars promise room for a family of four. And they deliver it, if two of the four are under six years old.

FIAT

The biggest selling car in Europe.
Over 2 million cars arranged through your dealer.

The 124 gives you enough room in the back for two children 6'6" or an exceptionally large mother-in-law and a St. Bernard.

We even make your luggage happy.

If there isn't much room for people in most small cars, there's even less room for what the people have to carry.

Here, too, the 124 is an exception. There's room in the trunk for 7 pieces of luggage.

In fact, there's almost twice as much trunk space as a Volkswagen Super Beetle.

The 1937 Fiat.

The 1974 VW.

In 1939 we stopped making ours.

We make you happy to drive it.

The way the 124 handles is by far its strongest feature. It has excellent acceleration, and it'll cruise faster than you'd normally care to go. It corners flat and sits solidly on the road.

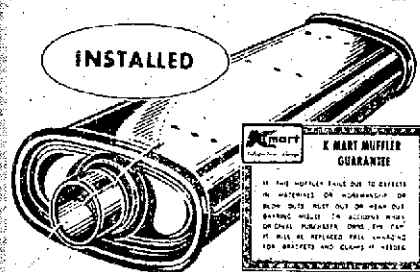

The car has self-adjusting, power-assisted, four-wheel disc brakes.

Radial tires that run $100 extra on most cars are standard.

And if you prefer not to rough it, automatic transmission and air conditioning are available.

In all, the 124 gives you something hard to find in a small car: more mileage without less everything else.

The Fiat 124.
You can't make a car like this overnight.

Reds rip Padres, 5-1

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Tony Perez doubled home two runs to trigger a four-run first inning Saturday night and the Cincinnati Reds went on to defeat the San Diego Padres 5-1 as rookie Tom Carroll notched his third straight victory since his recall from Indianapolis July 4.

Coupled with the Dodgers' loss to Atlanta, the Reds now trail by only 4 1/2 games in the NL West.

Carroll's Geronimo touch-off the Reds' first with a single to center and Pete Rose walked. Joe Morgan then reached first on Rich Morales' error to fill the bases and, one out later, Perez doubled home Geronimo and Rose. When Padre third baseman Dave Hilton threw wildly to second trying for a play on Perez, Morgan crossed the plate with a third run. A single by Dan Driessen scored Perez with the fourth run of the inning.

A walk to Willie

McCovey and Clarence Gaston's double—one of four hits yielded by Carroll in his eight innings of work—accounted for the Padres' only run in the fourth inning. Dave Freisleben was tagged with the loss, his sixth against seven victories.

The Reds added another run in the eighth inning when Driessen singled for his third hit of the game and came home on Dave Concepcion's double.

5 errors doom Cubs

CHICAGO (UPI)—Rookie pitcher Bob Forsch scattered eight hits Saturday while his St. Louis Cardinals teammates took advantage of five Chicago errors to scratch out a 3-2 victory over the Cubs in a nationally televised game.

The Cubs capitalized on sloppy fielding by the Cubs to take a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Chicago tied it in the bottom half of the inning but St. Louis scored another unearned run in the second inning and Forsch allowed just five hits and no runs the rest of the way. He struck out three and walked none in his record to 3-2 since being called up from Tulsa on July 4.

Second baseman Billy Grabarkewitz, purchased by the Cubs from the Philadelphia Phillies on July 3, committed errors in the first, second and fourth innings before being pulled from the lineup for a pinch-hitter in the seventh.

Phils sweep Bucs, widen lead to three

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Mike Schmidt drove in four runs with a homer and a double to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a 7-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday night for a sweep of their doubleheader.

Mike Anderson's two-run single in the seventh enabled the Phillies to overcome a four-run deficit and win the opener, 6-5.

The sweep widened the Phils' lead in the NL East to three games.

Schmidt hit his 20th homer after a Larry Bowa double in the first inning of the nightcap, then doubled home two runs in the third. Willie Montanez singled in Schmidt to knock out loser Bruce Kison, 5-5.

Bob Apodaca, 3-5, had allowed only a double by Willie Davis in the first inning, when a Met error produced the Expos' first run, before leaving the game in the midst of a four-run flurry by Montreal in the eighth.

THE WACKY THIRTIES—

Every time Dean and Hubbell were rival pitchers. Dean was a broadsword, coming down over the top with a fastball that screamed. Hubbell had a screwball that lurched like a drunk on an icy sidewalk.

After Dean's recent death, Hubbell talked about those games. "It seemed like every time we went to St. Louis the first game would be Dizzy and I pitching," he said. "It was the same way when the Cards came to New York. I think we met at least 16 times. I never saw the record book but someone told me I had the edge, 10-6."

Terry Moore played centerfield for the Cards and remembered how it was. "When Hub and Diz were pitching," he said, "all the guys in the bullpen would sit down for the afternoon."

On July 2, 1933, the Cards and Giants, as usual fighting for the pennant, met in a doubleheader at the horseshoe arena called the Polo Grounds. Hubbell and Dean both pitched, but this time not against each other. Yet, it was a day to remember for the more than 50,000 fans who were there.

Hubbell pitched the first game and drew Lepp, tough Tex Carlton as his opponent. After 16 innings, neither team had scored. Carlton left for a pinchhitter and Jesse Haines took over. The Giants won it, 1-0, on a bouncing single up the middle by second baseman Hugh Critz. Hubbell had given up no walks and six hits, three of them scratch, in 18 innings.

Twilight was moving in fast when the second game started. There were no lights. It was Dean for St. Louis and Roy Parmelee, who could smoke it like Dizzy but with inferior control, going for New York. In the semi-gloom, the batters not only failed to dig in but some of the right-handers seemed to be hitting with one foot in the third base coaching box.

One run was scored in the game, and the Giants made it. Johnny Vergez, the New York third baseman, got enough wood on a Dean fastball to lift a lazy fly down the leftfield line. It was 279 feet to the wall. The ball might have gone 270. But it grazed the scoreboard which jutted out like a terrace from the upper stands. It was the original cheap shot, but it was a home run.

THE FIRST All-Star game was played in Chicago in 1933. The American League won it, 4-2. The A.L. also won the second game, 9-7, the next year in New York. But the story of the game was Hubbell. Carl worked the first three innings for the National, and over one stretch, fanned five successive hitters. Their names—Hall of Famers all—were Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin.

In 1930, the Cubs had a burly bomber in centerfield named Hack Wilson. He was slow and not much of a fielder, but he could make a baseball bleed when he took a bat in his hands. Hack drove in 190 runs in 1930. The record still stands.

He was a man who liked the sound of popping corks and the tinkle of ice in glasses. On one occasion, the Cub manager—either Joe McCarthy or Charlie Grimm—lectured in the clubhouse for Wilson's benefit. The Cub skipper got some bootleg whiskey and poured a glassful. Then he dropped a couple of worms into the glass. The worms curled up and died.

"Now, gentlemen," the manager said while looking right at Wilson, "what does that prove to you?"

"I don't know about the rest of the guys," Hack answered with a serious face, "but to me it proves that if you drink you won't have worms."

Hack and Art (What a Man) Shires almost met once in a boxing ring, Shires having had some experience in that area, and Wilson being very game. But Judge Landis, the baseball commissioner, vetoed the idea.

Landis was unable to veto a gentleman named Flint Rhem who pitched for the Cardinals in 1930. In mid-September, the Cards rolled into Brooklyn to play the Dodgers in a three-game series that seemed likely to decide the pennant. Brooklyn had a thin lead and the Cards were challenging. Rhem had won six games in a row and his manager, Gabby Street, tabbed him to pitch the second game with Hallahan going in the opener, and Burleigh Grimes in the finale.

THE CARDS won the opener, 1-0, but Rhem was not in shape to work Game No. 2. He was missing for 24 hours, and when he returned to the club he told Street that he had been kidnapped.

"By whom?" inquired the startled manager.

"Two guys who grabbed me right off the sidewalk," Rhem said. "I think they were gangsters. They kept me prisoner for 24 hours. But that's not all."

"What's the rest of it?" sadly asked Street.

"Well," explained Rhem, "I guess they wanted to bet on Brooklyn. For 24 hours, they held a gun to my ribs and poured whiskey into me...scotch, rye, bourbon, you name it. I got a little drunk."

There were a lot of gangsters around New York in those days, and Street backed up his pitcher when he gave the story to the press. General manager Branch Rickey was skeptical, however.

When asked what he thought of Rhem's story, Branch snapped: "It's preposterous."

In short order it was not only forgotten but forgiven. The Cards won all three games in Brooklyn without Rhem, and Flint was able to pitch and win a game a few days later that as good as clinched the pennant for St. Louis.

MARTIN STUNS STAN SMITH

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Seventeen-year-old amateur Billy Martin scored an astonishing upset over No. 1 seeded Stan Smith Saturday, 6-3, 1-6, 7-6, to gain the semifinals of the $100,000 Washington Star-News Tennis Tournament after defending champion Arthur Ashe was ousted by Argentina's Guillermo Vilas.

Martin was trailing his far more experienced opponent 0-3 in the third set when he rallied to win the contest on a tiebreaker. The Palos Verdes, Calif., youngster evened the count at 3-3 and held even with Smith to 6-6. In the tiebreaker, he fell behind 3-5, then slammed home four straight points for the victory.

Martin took the first set by breaking Smith's serve in the fourth game, but then bowed to his 27-year-old foe's experienced skill in the second.

Vilas toppled Ashe 6-2, 6-4 to gain the tournament semifinals.

MATTY TRACKS

To be perfectly honest, some guys play matty fairways — where the turf is heavily thatched — better than I do because I beat down on the ball so hard.

Sometimes this makes the divot curl instead of fly, so the ball doesn't come off of it crisp. Well, there's different strokes for different blokes, which explains the opposing methods that Gary Player and I use on matty fairways.

Gary moves the ball up for these shots, and I play it back. It's hard to criticize a man who's won every major tournament, so I won't. He plays the ball forward, with his hands slightly behind the ball, and hits it a little cleaner than on a normal swing.

THAT'S GARY'S way. But a pro can sweep the ball off the thatch where the ordinary golfer will skull it into the next county.

My method is to play the shot from well back in the stance. The reason is that matty fairways catch the heel of the club first — like shooting from tall rough — and smother the ball.

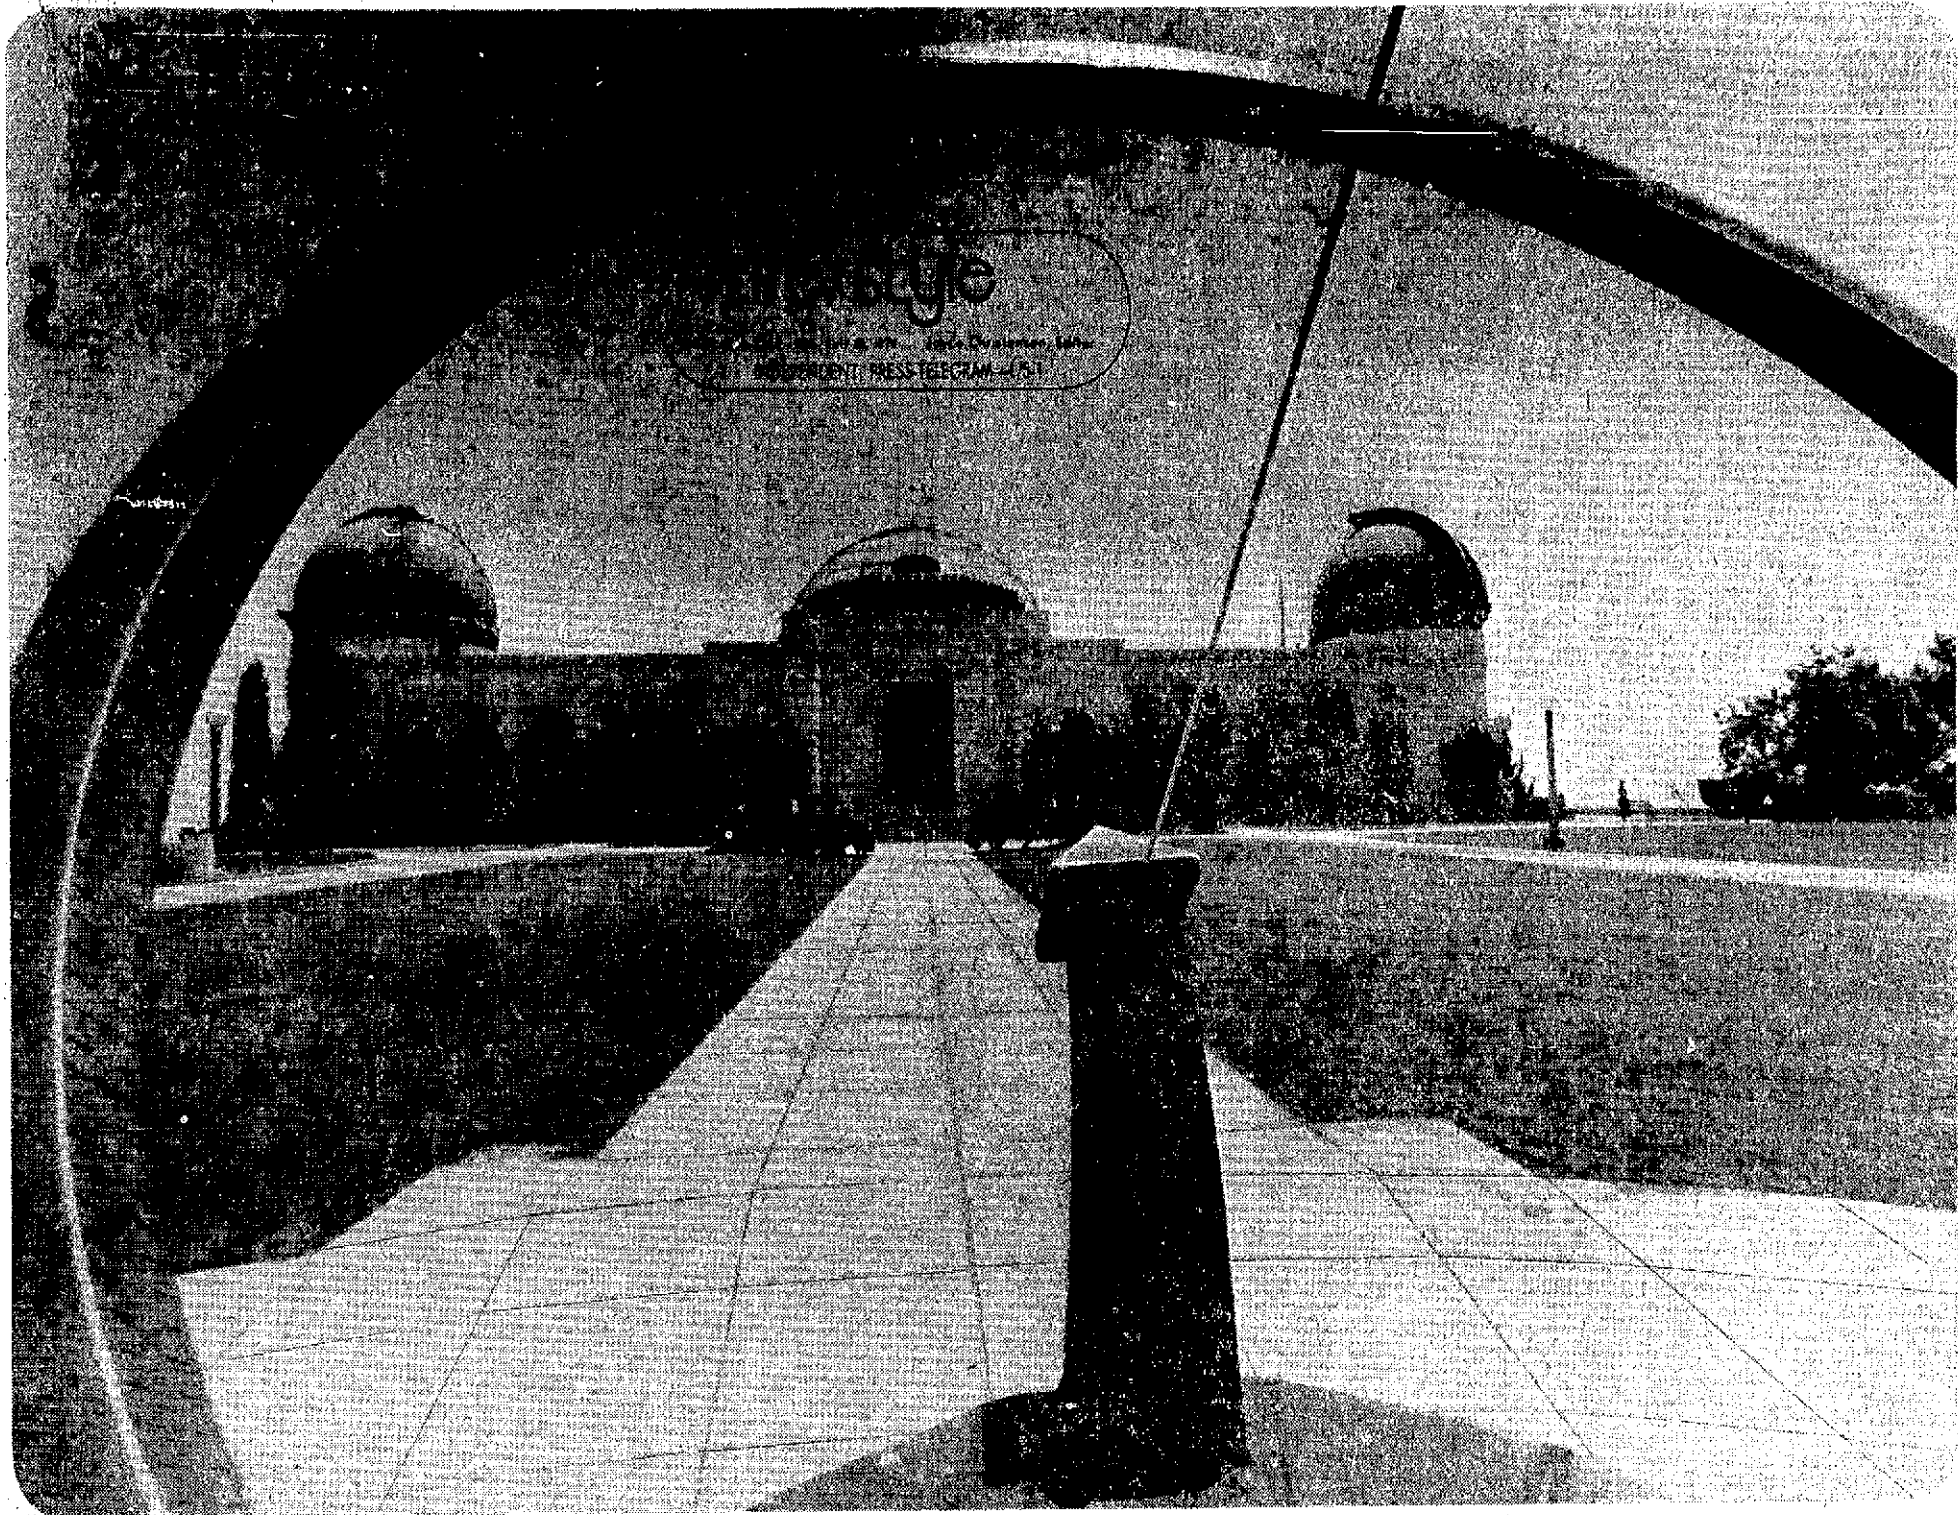

Choke down a mite on the grip for better club control. As you get closer to the green, shorten your swing to about three-quarters. You'll get a cleaner contact.

Observe the universe come to life

DR. ED KRUPP, curator of the Griffith Observatory, stands before the large Zeiss telescope, which is open to the public daily except Mondays from sunset until 10 p.m. The telescope is focused regularly on some object of astronomical interest in the sky and an astronomer is present to answer questions.

"This isn't just the same old observatory everyone remembers visiting as a kid," Ed Krupp was saying for the fifth time in as many minutes. He really wants people to know that.

He's right. What some of us may remember as nothing much more than big, cold rooms filled with meteorite displays and pictures of stars has brightened into a delightful mixture of entertainment and information — a place where people are educated while having fun.

There is a lot of Dr. Krupp in the observatory's new programs. He's young and very enthusiastic and full of innovative ideas. He became curator a few years ago after working as a lecturer at the observatory while attending graduate school at UCLA.

"All along I'd planned to settle down to teaching astronomy at some nice, quiet New England college," Krupp explained, pushing our way through the crowded lobby. "But this is a most exciting job and the next five years should see some really fine major developments here. We're all quite enthusiastic about new shows and exhibits."

Currently, "Earth — an Endangered Planet" is being shown in the Griffith Observatory's planetarium theater, which consists of a 75-foot dome at the center of which are projectors that reproduce the night sky so realistically the audience feels as if it were outdoors.

During regular planetarium shows, the sun, moon, planets and stars can be shown in their proper places at any time — past or future — from any location on earth. Days, years and even centuries are compressed into minutes.

DURING THE endangered planet show continuing through Aug. 4, the audience is immersed in projected landscapes which have been painted by planetarium artist Lois Cohen. The skies, colors, animals of prehistoric eras and ice ages color-change toward the finale — a gorgeous fall New England landscape slowly devastated by pollution. All to appropriate accompanying music and narration.

Following "Endangered Planet," the planetarium show continues with "The Earth and the Sky." See OBSERVATORY, Page L/S-5

NEW YORK — With changing lifestyles, how would you define "family?" A father, mother and children? Or a childless but married couple?

Joanne H. Kerbavaz, 18, of Richmond, Calif., for example, says it isn't easy to define the word. But when asked in a United Press International poll of 50 youths, she responded:

"Families no longer need to contain children, a home or both spouses. Any living group can be classified as a family."

Miss Kerbavaz was among the outstanding high school seniors in the nation named Future Family Leaders — one from each state. She is the Future Family Leader for California.

Mary F. O'Brien, 18, of Volga, Iowa responded this way:

"A family is a group of people that really care about one another. It is not necessary to live together or to have parents and children, but a family must be people who do all they can to help one another."

OTHER DEFINITIONS from the future family leaders include:

"A family is a number of people that care about each other." Kristine L. Hefta, 18, of Grand Forks, N.D.

"A group of people held together by bonds of mutual love and respect." Catherine R. Zuurbier, 17, of Catasauqua, Pa.

"Family refers to two or more individuals living together and sharing responsibilities and pleasures. A childless couple is a family, and a commune of 20 adults is a family — just as much as the traditional mother, father, children." Rita Lynne Rubin, 17, of Wheeling, W. Va.

"A family is a group of persons who live together and stay together despite all circumstances, have a mutual desire to help each other and find this arrangement convenient for everyday existence." Cynthia E. Green, 17, of Atlanta, Ga.

"A family is a group of people bound together by many bonds, including actual relations and love." Eleanor G. Welsh, 17, Purcellville, Va.

"Several people, each with their own needs, wants and goals, living and sharing together. Of course, no family is ideal, but by my definition a family provides its members with the presence of the other members and induces a situation of caring from which all benefit and grow." Kathryn Jean Partridge, 18, Englewood, Colo.

"A family does not have to exist within the confines of the traditional, legal concepts of marriage and parenthood, but every family has one or two adults who accept the responsibilities of parenthood and children who receive the guidance of the parents." Harold C. Washington, 17, Decatur, Ala.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

No cards dealt at these parties

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

LLOYD AND CLAUDINE Shidler are ignoring the heat with a series of cool summer barbecues on the patio of their La Linda Drive home.

They invited two different bridge playing groups for non-bridge evenings co-hosted by Walter and Marion Landis.

The one group of grand slammers dates back to the halcyon days of the Pacific Coast Club.

One group of party goers included the Fred Roehms, Stan Smiths, Roy Smiths, Ralph Wrights, Cliff Eldreds, Pat Tierneys, Bob Pettifers and Judge Merrill Lilleyes.

La Linda Drive neighbors enjoyed vivands and conversation at the most recent party.

All the Cloyds came over, Marvin, Edna and Ellen, and Jerry and Pat Flanigan, Clark and Ella Burgess and Dr. Dick and Dee Lewis.

After a brief recovery, the Shidlers are going to cook up another barbecue.

WITH THE leisure set.

Retired employees of Local 43 of the B. F. Goodrich Co. like to keep in touch.

So they did at a gala party in the Belmont Shore home of Lee and Martha Springer.

Someone got the bright idea of figuring up the number of years the men had worked at the plant.

The 20 men came up with 800 collective years of service.

Old timers included Bill and Ollie Mae Gartrell, "Pip" and Ruth Pipkin, Pearl Nield, Frank and Monica Bullinger, Al and Velma Lightfoot and, from Hemet, Bruce Mitchell.

THE PARK ESTATES home of Vance and Carole Thurston is a flurry of pre-wedding plans.

Carole's daughter, Lynda Breithaupt, will wed Pat McCabe in early August.

Among the round of pre-parties for Lynda were a mother-daughter brunch hosted by Dora Lee Berberet and daughters, Debbie, Mary and Lori.

Friends and former classmates from Wilson High and their mothers included Nancy Terpstra and Carol Gray, Margaret Jones and Nancy, Toni Thompson and Barbara, Kim White and Pat, Lisa Russel and Virginia, Denise Hill and Dorothy, Robin Rowland and Lorna.

More were Kathy White, Janet Lawhead, Kim Crutchfield, Mary White, Lynn Tally and Cheryl Zavatsky.

Lorna Rowland and daughters, Kathy and Robin, entertained for Lynda with a dinner party featuring Greek cuisine.

Lynda's aunts Dorothy Hill, Kathy White and Virginia Russell co-hosted a miscellaneous shower at Virginia's Bixby Hill home.

IF YOU COULDN'T get a parking place at Mr. C's restaurant the other evening, it was because there were 300 extra patrons besides the regular crowd.

They had come to toast the opening of Mary Ann's Boutique.

Mary Ann's last name is Rector and she came north from the Newport area to share her fashion ideas with us Long Beachers. Her shop is in the lobby — best thing to do is buy before you eat. Sometimes you can save a whole size that way.

Wellwishers included the Ray Tices, Jim Amblers, Paul Shiffs, Bob Wrights, Lauren Moffetts, Peter Gadds, Phyllis Whaley and daughter, Chris and Harry Gladd.

TRAVEL time...

Back from three weeks in Mexico City are Mac and Dorothy Thompson. They were visiting son, Tighe and daughter-in-law Susan, transplanted localites.

Dorothy pronounced the supermarkets absolutely super. But offers a word of advice.

If you hanker after any kind of coffee other than instant Nescafe, take your own. That is all they offer—unless you'll settle for tequila. And if you want refritos, check the imported gourmet section. They come from the U.S.A.

OFF FOR AN extended trip to Savannah, Ga., and other Southern points is Kristin Elofson, daughter of Chris and Cathy.

She may become the youngest member of the jet set. Kristin is six years old.

NEW ETIQUETTE

Wedding not beauty parade

By MAUREEN ELENA REARDON

Q. Several months ago I was asked to be matron-of-honor for a friend, and I accepted. I was not aware that I would be eight months pregnant at the time of the wedding. Would it be proper to excuse myself as a member of the bridal party?—Mrs. L. C., Scranton, Pa.

A. It would be a good idea for you to tell the bride you are pregnant and offer to withdraw. However, I think that the bride should refuse your offer. The wedding procession is not a part of the Miss America pageant, where women parade to show their measurements. Theoretically you were chosen because you are a special friend of the bride, and your pregnancy shouldn't change that. Pregnancy is nothing to hide, or be ashamed of. You can help the bride by telling her as soon as possible that you are pregnant. It might be possible to select dresses for the attendants which will be flattering to you ... a loose rather than a fitted dress, for instance.

Q. I want to have a BYO (Bring Your Own) party, inviting many of our friends over, but my wife said she would be embarrassed to have such a party. She says that if we can't afford to provide the liquor, then we can't afford to have a party. What do you think?—H. B., Tacoma, Wash.

A. It depends very much on how you and your wife feel about it. I don't think it's a good idea to force the person you're married to through a supposed ordeal when there are so many types of entertainment that you will both like.

On the other hand, I don't think your wife should be embarrassed to have a BYO party. You might suggest that you two prepare some inexpensive munchies so that she feels you have something to offer your friends besides your company.

You could also mention to your wife that you can learn a lot about your friends by having a BYO party. Perhaps those who don't come because they think it's an insult to bring their own liquor aren't interested in your company as much as the free goodies you can provide.

Q. I ran into a high school friend at a supermarket. She had two children with her and I had my two with me. We started talking about high school, and I interrupted the conversation to introduce my children to her. She didn't introduce her kids ... her daughter kept saying, "Who's that, Mom?" Was I right, or was she?—R.R., Chicago.

A. Kids should always be introduced to adults. It's possible, though, that your friend had forgotten your name or didn't know your married name. If that was the case, she should have said, "I'm sorry, but I've forgotten your name" and then introduced her children. Forgetting somebody's name is unfortunate. Not introducing the kids is inexcusable.

Q. My husband and I have a standing reservation to play on the same court each week at an indoor tennis club. Last night a club attendant asked if we would play on another court. We didn't ask why, and even though we like that court, agreed to play on the next court over. When we were playing we noticed that the mayor of our city showed up and played on the court we vacated. I don't think we should have been asked to move just to make the mayor happy.—Mrs. P.J., (city omitted).

A. I agree with you. Too many public officials have Caesar complexes. The world should not be divided into bigshots and non-bigshots. If the attendant asks you to move again, ask if it is to accommodate the mayor. If it is, you couldn't be faulted for refusing. It is presumptuous for the club people to ask you to move over for hizoner. You are just as important as the mayor.

A day in life of modern Tom Sawyer

IT'S ALL IN a summer's day for young Larry Williams of Oxford, Ala., as he walks along a fence, fishing pole in hand, enroute to his favorite fishing hole (above) and romps through the woods, (below left.)

LATER, THE MODERN-DAY Tom Sawyer takes a leisurely stroll through a pasture where horses graze undisturbed.

THERE'S TIME OUT for relaxation, too. Nine-year-old Larry rests while waiting for the fish to bite.

by a maker of foods, were those opting for slight variations of the traditional definition:

"A family now is what a family always has been and always will be — a unit of people, usually related, usually living together at least part of their lives, working together to satisfy their necessities and relating to each other to fulfill their wants." Wendy Rae Weaver, 17, Indianapolis, Ind.

"A married couple, with children. I don't think the definition has changed much." Michael David Greenspoon, 17, Morrison, Colo.

"For me a family is composed of two people living in a permanent commitment of love for one another, and includes the children who are a living representation of that commitment, who are to be raised in the environment of that commitment." Lawrence Alan Krissok, 18, of Kansas City, Kan.

"Family is the unit which provides anchorage in the transience of our society. It is no longer the focus of an individual's life since activities, interests and friends diverge so greatly from those of other family members. But the family remains an important functional institution." Candace Hope Haigler, 17, Matthews, N.C.

"The family is a small social unit consisting usually of husband, wife, and children, but sometimes excluding one of these members or including grandparents or other relatives, even nonrelated friends. The only real qualification for belonging to a family is a willingness to love and to try to understand its other members, to stand by them in times of stress and also in times of happiness. The family is the unit which gives the individual his strongest sense of community, and which, more than any other single institution, lends stability and security to his life." Victoria Joanne Perry, 17, Orono, Maine.

um show will be "In Search of Ancient Astronomers," a trip back into time to ancient Egypt, Babylon and Greece, featuring a visit to Stonehenge in England where an ancient civilization displayed a remarkably sophisticated interest in astronomy. Krupp himself photographed Stonehenge last summer and Lois Cohen is faithfully reproducing those photographs to be projected on the dome. The ancient will open Aug. 6 and run through Sept. 15.

The planetarium's many permanent exhibits, dealing with such subjects as radio astronomy, light, stars and galaxies, are designed to animate concepts which might otherwise be just vague notions for most of us. The bright, moving and frequently audio-accompanied displays tell visitors what modern astronomy is all about, in terms simple enough for laymen.

TWO SPECIAL lecture series will begin in the fall — one to be taught by Dr. Krupp, on ancient astronomy, and another on relativity. Fee information may be obtained from the observatory offices.

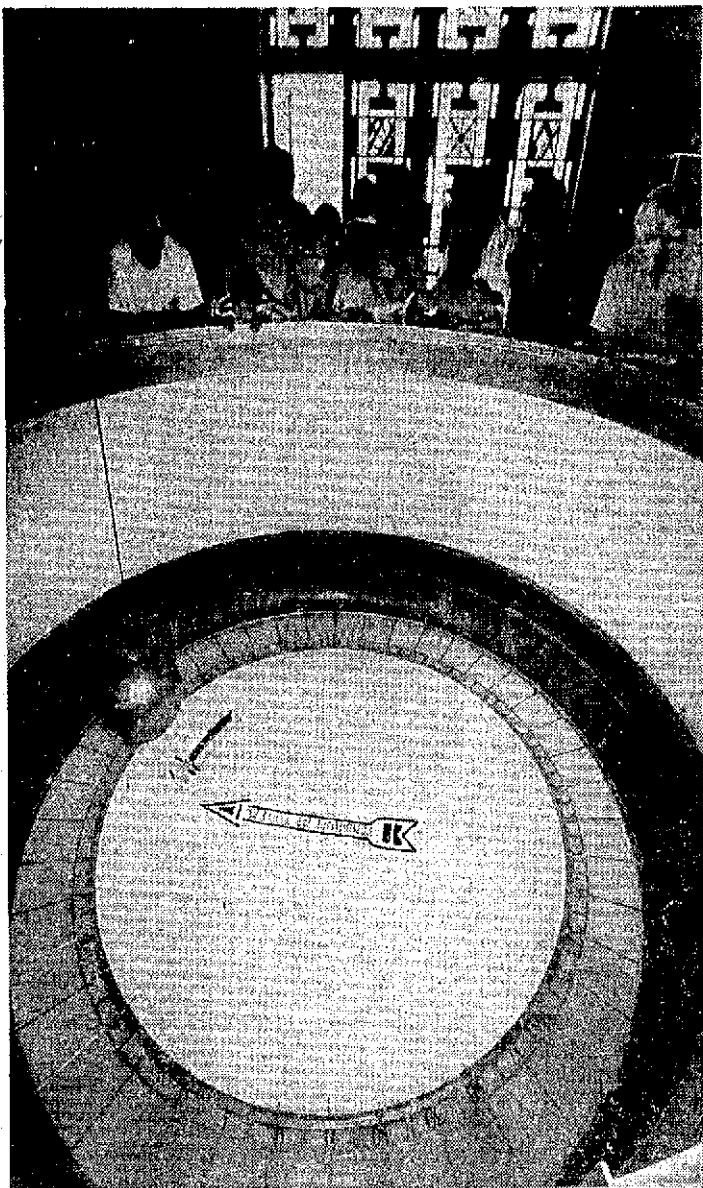

The observatory, Dr. Krupp noted, is the only place in the city of Los Angeles where a publicly-operated telescope is available to visitors. Every evening except Mondays the large Zeiss telescope is open (weather permitting), free of charge. The telescope is focused on some object of astronomical interest in the sky and an astronomer is present to answer questions.

An exceedingly popular show at the observatory is the continuing Laserium, presented in the planetarium theater Mondays and Tuesdays at 3, 7 and 9 p.m. Laserium is a light-show concert under the stars during which powerful lasers are used to produce dramatic effects covering the sky. Tickets at $2 per person are sold prior to each show. On Mondays and Tuesdays, the observatory is open only to those people attending the Laserium show.

The Griffith Observatory was a gift to the City of Los Angeles in the will of Col. Griffith J. Griffith. He had presented Griffith Park to the city in 1896 and provided for the Greek Theater in the will into which the observatory was written.

The observatory was officially opened May 14, 1935, divided into three main sections — the observatory proper, housing the twin refracting telescope and three solar telescopes fed by a triple mirror system. One of the solar scopes produces a large image of the sun in the Hall of Science, which is the second division of the facility.

For program information and operating hours, contact the Griffith Observatory.

AT WIT'S END

Trade up? Gross!

By ERMA BOMBECK

Through many years of observing the American family it has come to my attention that what this country needs is a Park 'N' Swap for parents and children.

I have never met a child who did not feel that he is maligned, harassed and overworked and would do better if he had Mrs. Jones, who loves untidiness and eats out a lot, for a mother.

On the other hand, I have never met a parent who did not feel unappreciated, persecuted, servile and would have been better off with Rodney Phipps who doesn't talk with food in his mouth and bought his mother a hair dryer for Mother's Day.

WHAT I'M suggesting is a Sears parking lot that could be made available every Saturday afternoon where parents and their offspring could come to look, compare, and eventually swap if they felt they could do better.

When I mentioned this to my card club, they fairly quivered with excitement. "I have always wanted to 'trade up' to a child who picked towels up off the floor," said Peg.

"I have one like that," said Dorothy. "But she's a drain stuffer. If it doesn't fit down the drain she lifts out the trap and shoves it down."

"That doesn't sound so bad," said Evelyn. "I'd take a drain stuffer over a shower freak anyday. Empties our 40-gallon water tank three times a day."

"At least she's clean," said June. "I'll swap someone a long-hair who is an endangered species. Someday he's going to get lost behind that hair and never find his way out again."

"Look," said Peg, "I'm going to make you an offer you can't refuse. I'll offer my towel dropper for a boy who never learned how to use the telephone and I'll throw in a three weeks supply of clean underwear."

"I'LL DO YOU one better," I said. "I'll swap or trade a quiet boy who is never late to dinner, gets up when he is called, sits up straight, has just finished two years with his orthodontist, is reasonable to operate and doesn't play his stereo too loud. No offer is too ridiculous."

The entire card table put down their cards and leaned forward. Finally June asked, "What's the catch?"

"No catch. He just knows one word ... gross!"

Everyone went home keeping what they had and feeling better about it.

Remember the special pleasure you feel when you receive a dividend, a bonus, a gift, the added item in a baker's dozen? The French call it lagniappe—something extra.

It's a musical bonus—a Starlight Serenade Extra—that will be given Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Recreation Park when the Long Beach Junior Concert Band, directed by Marvin Marker, stages an evening of popular numbers and of pageantry.

Long Beach Symphony Association and the Independent, Press-Telegram, which sponsor the official Starlight Serenades, are extending the free outdoor programs to include this performance by the California champion youth band.

Marker has arranged for Ernest Gold to conduct highlights from his score for "Exodus," music which won for him an Academy Award in 1961. In addition to his many distinguished motion picture scores, Gold has written Broadway shows, recorded albums, written and produced pageants and has an impressive list of credits for serious classical music.

MARKER'S CORPS of young musicians, colorfully garbed, precision drilled, will open Tuesday's concert with marches, Broadway hits, solo performances, ensembles and specialty acts. Trumpet soloist Rick Montano and champion twirler Sherri Agnifili will perform, as will the Pageantry Dancers. The Syncopated Percussionists will demonstrate their skill and the wide-ranging program will come to intermission with a finale, "Instant Concert."

After intermission, the stage will be a kaleidoscope of color, lively with sound, as the Junior Concert Band performs a marching extravaganza, "We Believe in Music." Marker describes this as "A spectacular salute to America's variety of music, featuring the entire cast, choreographed dancing with precision drill, special lighting and props."

The program will end with "Bicentennial Countdown," a salute to 200 years of American music—such numbers as George M. Cohan's "Yankee Doodle Boy," "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "This Is My Country."

The finale will be the "firing" of a simulated firecracker, a giant 12 feet high, 5 feet in diameter.

So come along, picnic on the grass, bring the family—enjoy something extra!

COMPOSER Ernest Gold will be guest conductor for excerpts from his motion picture score for "Exodus."

Hollywood Bowl begins celebrity recital series

Pianist Alfred Brendel will initiate Hollywood Bowl's new series of Wednesday Celebrity Recitals and will be soloist with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Tuesday and Thursday when David Zinman will conduct.

Yehudi Menuhin will close the Bowl's fourth week with an evening of Viennese music Saturday. This will mark Menuhin's debut as a conductor with the Los Angeles orchestra and will introduce his sister, pianist Hephzibah Menuhin, to Bowl audiences.

Tuesday's program will include Rossini's Overture to "La Scala di Seta," Mozart's "Concerto in B Flat for Piano and Orchestra" and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7."

For his Wednesday recital, Brendel has chosen to play Liszt's "Benediction de Dieu dans la Solitude" from "Harmonies Poétiques et Religieuses," Schubert's "Four Impromptus," Beethoven's "Andante Favori in F" and "Sonata No. 32."

On Thursday's bill are "Eight Russian Folk Songs" by Liadoff, "Concerto No. 4" by Beethoven and "Scheherazade" by Rimsky-Korsakoff.

ZINMAN was appointed music director of the Rochester Philharmonic in 1973 after several seasons of guest conducting major American orchestras—including Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Minnesota and Los Angeles—and nearly a decade as conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra.

Born in New York City in 1936, Zinman is all-American trained. His international career began in 1961 when he went to Europe at the invitation of Pierre Monteux and made his European debut leading the Danish State Radio Orchestra. He made his Los Angeles Philharmonic debut last summer at Hollywood Bowl.

The versatile pianist, Brendel, made his professional debut when he was 17 in a piano recital which included a sonata of his own composition, while a nearby art gallery was exhibiting a collection of his watercolors. Since, he has achieved prominence as a pianist, appearing regularly in recital and with leading orchestras in Europe, North and South America, New Zealand and Australia. Since 1963, he has performed with the Philharmonic both indoors and at Hollywood Bowl. He also has performed in recital at the Music Center under auspices of the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

YEHUDI MENUHIN, violinist and conductor, will direct the Los Angeles Philharmonic Saturday in "A Night in Vienna." On the program will be Schubert's "Symphony No. 8" (Unfinished), Beethoven's "Concerto No. 2," Overture to "The Gypsy Baron," "Emperor Waltz," "Perpetuum Mobile," "Tales From the Vienna Woods" and "The Fun Train" by Johann Strauss Jr., and "Radetsky March" by Johann Strauss Sr.

Menuhin's career is legendary, beginning with his solo violin debut in San Francisco when he was 7. As the years went by, the child prodigy became the mature artist, honored and acclaimed throughout the world as one of the great violinists of his era. He now spends as much of his time on the podium directing his own Menuhin Festival Orchestra and as guest conductor of other orchestras as he does as solo violinist.

The brother-sister team of Yehudi and Hephzibah Menuhin is of long-standing, dating back to the early 1930s when the two began to concertize together in Europe and America. Their first recording, in 1932, won the national Prix du Disque in France.

AFTER EARLY successes in the concert world, Miss Menuhin retired to raise a family. In 1959, she returned to an active career and now performs in Europe and America as orchestral soloist, in recital and in chamber music concerts. In addition to her tours with Yehudi, she performs each year at the Windsor and Gstaad Festivals, playing concerts of chamber music, as orchestra soloist and in recital. She now is a permanent resident of London with her husband, sociologist Richard Hauser.

IT WAS the unqualified success of recital and chamber music performances at Bowl Marathons in past seasons that led to the creation of the new Celebrity Recital Series. Previously, this kind of musical offering was considered unsuitable for the amphitheater.

Now, with a single performer on the Bowl's fore-stage, another dimension will be added to Bowl concerts. Only limited seating will be available, to assure artists and audiences of congenial recital conditions.

Drop by for a chiller

"More Chillers for Hot Summer Nights" is the continuing theme of the film series which will run through August at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2309 E. Ocean Blvd. The classic, or proto-classic, atmospheric horror films, spanning a period from 1925 to 1970, are shown on Friday evenings at 8:30 on the museum grounds. It's wise to bring blankets or pillows, as chairs aren't provided. The price is right—admission is free.

This Friday, the film will be "The Dunwich Horror" with Sandra Dee, Dean Stockwell and Sam Jaffe. A U.S. film, it was directed by Daniel Haller in 1970.

Other films scheduled are: Aug. 9, "The Mummy" with Boris Karloff, Zita Johann, David Manners; directed by Karl Freund, U.S.A., 1932.

Aug. 16, "The Innocents" with Deborah Kerr, Michael Redgrave, Peter Wyngarde, Pamela Franklin; directed by Jack Clayton, U.S.A., 1961.

Aug. 23, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" with Spencer Tracy, Ingrid Bergman, Lana Turner, Donald Crisp; directed by Victor Fleming, U.S.A., 1941.

Aug. 20, "Eye of the Devil" with Deborah Kerr, David Niven, Sharon Tate, David Hemmings; directed by J. Lee Thompson, U.S.A., 1967.

For further information, call the museum.

GHOSTS and monsters also have invaded Downey Museum of Art, 10419 S. Rives Ave., Downey. The first public showing in the Los Angeles area of original paintings from "The Night Gallery" will continue through Aug. 23.

"The Night Gallery" was a Universal Television series. Artist Tom Wright created more than 90 paintings which were used to introduce the short horror stories which made up the hour-long TV series hosted by Rod Serling. On exhibit in Downey are 25 of the most famous paintings which give ghastly impressions of witches, vampires and phantoms, as well as of their haunted abodes.

"Night Gallery Portraits" are shown in conjunction with the exhibition, "Street Art Story" which documents art forms found on public streets.

A BOOK slated for August publication can be a boon to artists and craftsmen and a valuable guide to buyers. Lila Weingarten and Kendall Taylor are the authors. The women got the idea for their book, "Selling Your Crafts and Art in Los Angeles" when they tried to sell their own art and discovered "there are not just some markets for artisans but many—store owners are very receptive to original and handmade items—art fairs are burgeoning—and local and national art competitions are increasing yearly."

Weingarten, author of "Where to Go and What to Do With the Kids in L.A.," is an experienced author and researcher. Both authors are artisans and L.A. residents.

The 144-page, soft-cover book, published by Wollstonecraft, is illustrated with simple drawings by Helene Toller French. In addition to the many listings of arts and crafts outlets, it is full of such practical advice as how to obtain display or sales permits when necessary, how to prepare and present your work and how to prepare publicity releases.

The buyer in search of original ceramics, macramé, batik, sculpture and other forms of art and crafts, will find a ready guide. The book, which sells for $3.95, will be carried by the bookstore at Long Beach Museum of Art.

LBCC chorale, orchestra to offer public concerts

Admission-free concerts will be open to the public at the Long Beach City College Liberal Arts Campus Friday and next Sunday.

The 75-voice Summer Chorale, with string orchestra and marimba ensemble, will perform Friday at 8 p.m. in the Nordic Lounge of the College Center between Carson Street and Harvey Way on Clark Avenue. Wayne Gard will direct.

The vocalists will sing Pinkham's "Wedding Cantata," selections from "Sound of Music" and a rock motet. Tenor Dwight Wilson will be soloist.

Next Sunday at 3 p.m., Dr. Michael Pappone will conduct the Summer Orchestra in a program of classical selections including Smetana's "Moldau," Tchaikovsky's "Pathe-tique" and Elgar's "Enigma Variations."

Michael Eipper, Stan Tuler and Vall Fairchild, all bassoonists, will be featured instrumentalists. This program will be given in the campus auditorium.

Activism ends at dishwashing

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

Today's chef of the week was recommended by four of his buddies who previously donned chef's caps and aprons. We heartily agreed with their suggestion for George M. Murchison is deeply involved in civic affairs.

Born in New Hampshire, he moved with his family to Long Beach when he was 7. St. Barnabas Elementary, St. Anthony High School and Long Beach City College preceded his enrollment at UCLA from which he was graduated with a bachelor of science degree.

As president of Long Beach Civic Light Opera Association, Murchison says, "Words can't describe its importance to our city's cultural interests." He also serves as president of International City Club, as director/secretary of the new Harbor Bank and of the Forty-Niner Shops, Inc.

MURCHISON is a member of the board of trustees of St. Mary Medical Center; serves on the advisory boards of California Museum of the Sea Foundation, California Museum Foundation and Assistance League of Long Beach.

He is a member of American Institute and California Society of Certified Public Accountants and Long Beach-Orange County Chapter of CPAs also benefits from his services.

Among other organizations which he serves are Long Beach Area Chamber of Commerce, Virginia Country Club, Rotary Club of Long Beach, UCLA Alumni Association, Long Beach Athletic Club, 49er Athletic Foundation, United Crusade and Los Altos YMCA Indian Guides. The family is active in St. Joseph Catholic Church.

Politically active as well, he served as co-chairman of the Long Beach Region for the reelection of both Governor Reagan and then-Assemblyman James A. Hayes. He was an unsuccessful candidate for Long Beach City Council in 1972, served on the Republican State Central Committee from 1970-72 and as chairman of the Region 13 1972 Republican Victory Squad.

MURCHISON and his wife, Joyce, have a son, Michael, 9, and a daughter, Kellie, 6. Both attend St. Joseph Elementary School.

Our chef plays racquet ball three mornings a week at 7 a.m. sharp and also enjoys golf, tennis and basketball.

Joyce says, "He's not a cook, I can tell you that for sure. Like most men, he does enjoy mowing the barbecue, however." She contends he's allergic to the dishwasher. He can somehow get the glasses where the silver belongs and vice versa.

His recipe today for baked papayas has all the goodness and flavor of the Hawaiian Islands.

BAKED PAPAYA MAUNA KEA

- 3 papayas, cut in half and seeded
- 1 1/2 cups cottage cheese
- 1 1/2 cups cream cheese
- 1 teaspoon curry powder
- 2 tablespoons chutney, chopped
- 2 tablespoons white sultan raisins
- 1/2 cup water chestnuts, sliced very thin
- 1/2 cup melted butter
- 1/4 cup cinnamon sugar

Increase the amount of above ingredients if papayas are extra large.

Mix and blend the cottage cheese, cream cheese, curry powder and chutney until smooth. Add water chestnuts and raisins.

Fill papayas with the cheese mixture. Sprinkle tops with cinnamon sugar and melted butter.

Bake 15 minutes in 450-degree oven. Serves 6.

DEAR ABBY

Foolers-around her weakness

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Al and I were married for three years. I divorced him because I caught him fooling around. I gave him "one more chance" so many times I lost count.

Then I met Hughie. He was married, but he caught his wife fooling around, so he left her and moved in with me. He didn't get a divorce right away because of financial problems, but I wasn't in a hurry to make it legal because I wanted to be sure before marrying again.

Meanwhile, I grew to love Hughie more and more and started figuring out ways to help him with his money troubles so he could get a divorce and marry me. Well, wouldn't you know, I caught Hughie fooling around! I just about tore me up. He swore the chick didn't mean anything to him, and he begged me to give him another chance.

Are all men alike, Abby? Or do you think maybe I can't hold on to a man?

LOSING CONFIDENCE

DEAR LOSING: All men are not alike, any more than all women are alike. Your weakness seems to be men who do a lot of fooling around. Every dog is entitled to one bite. Give Hughie another chance, but if you catch him fooling around again, consign him to the doghouse!

DEAR ABBY: I go with this man who likes to drink. He lost his driver's license so I have to drive him around. He tells me that after we are married, he will straighten out. I love him, but I don't believe him. I want to get married, but I'm afraid he won't keep his word. I've had one bad marriage and I don't want another one. Please tell me what to do. I keep changing my mind.

YES AND NO

DEAR YES AND NO: The word from here is NO! Tell him to straighten himself out first, and then you'll marry him.

CHANGING OF THE GUARD AT QUEBEC'S CITADEL

GAL-IVANTING

Have a ball in Quebec

By CHORAL PEPPER

Quebec City residents tried to avoid cannon balls in the 18th Century. Today, they try to find them.

"With old Place Royale destined again to become a fashionable address, it is often only by the vintage of a cannon ball buried in an old mansion wall that a new owner can date the origin of his building.

Restoration of this cradle of French civilization in America began in 1970. When finished, it will represent the greatest concentration of 17th and 18th Century buildings in North America.

Located along the river front at the base of a steep cliff, Place Royale lies in the precise spot upon which Samuel de Champlain constructed the fortification that gave birth to this Canadian capital.

Later, as the community expanded to an "upper city" above the cliff, citizens wishing to build houses were obliged to build upon the ruins of Champlain's early habitation as the church controlled all property at the upper level.

QUEBEC FLOURISHED under the reign of Louis XIV until 1759, when the British lobbed 40,000 cannon balls over it in a surprise attack. The French culture remained in spite of the British conquerors, however, and by 1800 everything was repaired or rebuilt in the French manner.

Old buildings with residences on upper floors that once housed rich merchants are now museums and galleries in which you can study examples of architectural detail and relics uncovered during the current reconstruction. If you are interested in antiques, a self-guided tour is invaluable in identifying both the uses for and the periods of rare items found in Quebec's plethora of antique shops.

A brochure with map is available at Maison Le Picart, the Reception and Information center directly opposite historic Notre-Dame-des-Victoires, the church that has dominated Place Royale since 1688.

Looming upon the cliff above Place Royale like a Storybook castle is the Chateau Frontenac hotel. This imposing, fortress-like structure has been the action center for Quebec ever since its corner stone was laid in 1892.

Its austere exterior is somewhat deceptive. The rambling old building leads itself as well to the discotheques and coffee shops of life today as it has to so many formal functions of the past. Guest rooms recently underwent complete rejuvenation, long overdue, but, whether you billet there or not, dine in one of its restaurants.

This is the only place I found in Quebec that serves the kind of hardcrusted, soft-centered rolls that you would expect to find in a French city. For that alone, it is first on my list for dining.

THE ACCENT has always been on culture in this walled city and the old world atmosphere of its narrow, cobble-stone streets will drive you straight into the history books even if you didn't plan it that way.

The preferred means of locomotion is afoot so you can intimately sniff the fragrance of a soup pot simmering inside a darkened doorway or listen to the exciting cadence of conversations carried on in French. But if you aren't a walker, then rent a caleche, or horse-drawn carriage at Place d'Armes in front of Chateau Frontenac.

The drivers will insure you a colorful tour, especially in winter when their horses draw open air carriages, or sleds, rather than carriages and you snuggled cozily under the warmth of a buffalo skin robe.

Any season is good for a visit to Quebec City. Winter Carnival during Mardi Gras is bound to be crowded, as is midsummer, so make reservations early. Two new hotels soon will open in mid-city while a number of motor lodges have sprung up on the outskirts near the airport.

BECAUSE Quebec City is a favorite with convention-goers, hotels near the Frontenac are frequently filled. I stayed at L'Auberge des Gouverneurs for that reason, in the new suburb of Ste. Foy. Accommodations were superb, but it is inconveniently located unless you have a car.

I did learn, however, that a bus runs several times each hour from the hotel to the Chateau Frontenac across town for only 20 cents, a break compared to the $5 taxi fare.

PENNYWISE TRAVELER

Get a fare deal

By JANE MORSE

It's a bright, pretty day in Los Angeles, and you step out the door of your downtown hotel smiling. Within no more than five minutes, a spiffed-up minibus pulls up to the curb and opens its doors to welcome you.

You slide into a seat and commence a whirl of sightseeing on a star-studded loop that takes you past the Civic Center, Chinatown, the Mexican markets and restaurants of Olvera Street, department stores, major hotels and the rest—all for a pittance price.

No wonder you're smiling. You can do the same in Long Beach, on a double-decker Queen Mary municipal bus.

This is no pot smoker's fantasy. This is tourist life as it now can be lived all over the country. Some places, of course, have more to offer than others, but the short-on-gas, short-on-cash vacationer has a better chance this year than ever before of cutting his sightseeing costs in America's cities by using public transit.

More and more city-transit companies have figured out that there's gold in them thar tills if they aim their services at tourists as well as regular passengers.

IN NEW ORLEANS the transit company will steer you to the St. Charles trolley, one of the compact and convenient ways to see this pretty city and one of the cheapest. Fifteen cents takes you from the outskirts of the French Quarter to just beyond Tulane University, most of the time trundling past the handsome, sometimes antebellum homes of the Garden District.

In New York a "Sunday Ticket" means that not only does the user pay only half fare on all metropolitan subways, buses and trains but qualifies for discounts at the Empire State Building, Rockefeller Center and a host of other attractions plus restaurants.

Philadelphia visitors can pay one 50-cent fare for all-day on-and-off riding on a loop route that includes most of the cultural and historical spots in the inner city.

Phoenix Transit hands out maps for five routes the visitor can follow to take in everything from shopping centers to pueblo ruins and museums.

Boston has "Dime Time" with 10 cent fares, 10 a.m.-2 p.m., Monday-Friday and all day Sunday. The city will supply color-coded maps to points of interest along the routes.

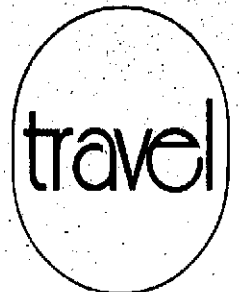

In Baltimore they've got a 50-cent "Super Sunday Pass" for unlimited riding on that day.

Seattle, expected to be a popular destination this summer with Expo '74 just 300 miles away, tops them all with free downtown bus service all the time.

In Oakland there are daily bike buses with racks inside for your bike and trips to the bigger parks in Oakland for 50 cents and San Francisco for 75 cents.

ALMOST EVERY city now has some kind of promotion with tourist appeal, says the American Transit Assn. Even the most ambitious and well-intentioned, though, may still be somewhat sluggish when it comes to follow-through.

Don't, for instance, try to inspect Phoenix on a Sunday because there's no bus service of any kind. The Los Angeles downtown loop minibus (not to be confused with the larger buses of the main bus system) will get you to lunch in Little Tokyo, but don't try it for dinner because service ceases at 4 p.m. On Saturdays and holidays it doesn't start.

There's also the problem in many places of severely restricted evening service and even daytime schedules that arrange vehicles so far apart that

For example, with the exception of one museum, the San Francisco cable cars running directly outside my hotel got me everywhere I wanted to go for five days and nights—and could, I think, have kept it up longer without exhausting the possibilities.

IN ADDITION to tourist routes, it's fascinating for financial reasons to know about such things as cheap ways to and from airports; passes with built-in fare reductions; discounts for senior citizens, families and people who ride at non-rush hours, and special excursions to out-of-town resort spots and festivals.

These things don't all exist everywhere, but you'll never know where they are available unless you ask.

You're supposed to ask the local transit company. On the scene, you can get directions and do it by phone. From a distance, things may be a little harder in that the companies often hide out under names you'd never guess.

A true digger might pry the name and address out of a long-distance information operator or make the proper deduction after a library visit to look at the city's Yellow Pages, but your easiest route is probably to write to the local chamber of commerce and ask them to forward your query.

A LETTER calculated to produce results should start out by telling (a) when you'll be in the area, (b) where you'll be staying, (c) where you want to go, (d) if you are or have with you a senior citizen or handicapped person (there may be special services) and (e) the date by which you need information.

Explain, of course, that you're interested in knowing of any special fares, routes or excursions that would help you see more and do more on your holiday. Ask also about when they don't operate—like in and from the airport after, say, 5 p.m.

You need to allow two to three weeks for an answer, but armed with all this information the transit company should then be able to flood you with all the news you need to know. Many should then even mark route maps for you to show you exactly how to get to places you've asked about. They can also generally supply timetables so that you know what to wait for and what to give up on.

You may be amazed at how much a 10-cent stamp can do to balance your vacation budget.

Where it's happening in Fun City

All the obvious things are there — in the new American Airlines New York City tour offerings — the hit shows, the night clubs, the hotels, the shopping jaunts, the cultural tours, the restaurants, the sightseeing, all that New York has built a reputation on.

On the other hand, there is also a sampling of the not-so-obvious delights available in the "Big Apple" that only a long-time New York citizen, like American Airlines, can ferret out and offer visitors.

Things like: German beer at a pub in Yorktown (New York's "German-town"), a visit to the Money Museum of The Chase Manhattan Bank, a banquet dinner in Chinatown, a performance at the unusual "New York Experience" electrovision theatre.

This proliferation of possibilities is described in detail in American's New York tour brochure, a flexible catalog that allows the travel planner to choose from a range that includes quicky weekends or an all-encompassing 14-day package with 14 different day and night tours.

Prices begin at $31.95 per person, double occupancy, for two night including hotel and applicable escorted tour.

Details are included in the tour brochure available from travel agents or American Airlines ticket offices.

SAILING ON THE BLUE NOSE II

Sailing through Canada's history

The age of the windjammer is still vigorous in Nova Scotia, Canada, as evidenced not only by the growing number of yachting enthusiasts in Canada's Atlantic province, but also by the rising popularity of the Marine Museum at Halifax Citadel.

A group of rooms is jammed with models, photographs, and paintings of sailing ships, displays of tools, and artifacts. A special course is offered to schoolchildren by the staff of the Nova Scotia Museum.

The historical part of the course fascinates the small fry, because in the story of Canada's Maritime Provinces, a major role involved the building of fleets of ships, both warships and cargo vessels.

Among them were the fastest sailing ships in the world.

The schooner "Blue Nose," built in Lunenburg in 1921, and still portrayed on the Canadian dime, was one of the most effective fishing schooners and undefeated champion of the international schooner races.

An earlier Maritime product was the square-rigged "Marco Polo." In 1867, the year Canadian Confederation came into existence, she covered the run from Australia to Britain in 76 days, beating by a week the time of the latest steamship.

The tall square-riggers once built in Nova Scotia sailed best with following winds: Trade routes to Europe, South America, Australia, or Pacific Ocean ports, were planned to take advantage of prevailing winds.

A photograph of an old shipyard is surrounded by a display of tools used to build the wooden ships. A broad-headed axe, an adze, wood-block planes and other tools are on display.

A chart of ship silhouettes shows the different rigs used in the oldtime sailing craft. Visitors can see the differences between a fully-rigged ship, a barque, brigantine, or schooner.

A series of slides show paintings and drawings of sailing ships, some heeled over by the wind with white foam drenching the deck. Some of the slides show close-ups of 19th century seamen high in a ship's rigging, clinging to yard-arms as they furl the stiff canvas of the square sails.

Holiday in sun

For those who prefer to get away from the annual holiday rush of Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's, winter cruising offers the great escape.

This winter, Princess Cruises' elegant Island Princess will be making three two-week cruises to the Mexican Riviera throughout the holiday season, and passengers won't miss any of the festivities and traditional meals, as the ship's staff will plan everything.

The Thanksgiving Cruise departs from Los Angeles November 15; the Christmas Cruise leaves December 13, and the New Year's Cruise follows on December 27.

Holiday ports of call are Puerto Vallarta, Manzanillo, Acapulco, Zihuatanejo, Mazatlan and Cabo San Lucas.

For passengers wishing a shorter cruise, 7-day air-sea or sea-air options are available, and those who want to see more of Mexico can add a Princess Tour to their cruise, which offers extensive land arrangements and deluxe hotel accommodations.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE Tips on tying knot

By STAN DELAPLANE

London
London and Paris are the ejection seats for most of us leaving Europe. The airports are enormous. And the paper work! Exit forms to fill out. Airport taxes to pay — just when you've cashed in most of your foreign money.

If you bought anything in France, you can get your local tax money back by going to a Customs window to get your receipt stamped. If you can get near it. HUNDREDS of people lined up. Only two Customs men to examine, stamp and hand back the receipt.

I try to get an early afternoon plane. With the time change, you land in New York before dinner.

I go to the airport about 11 in the morning. Check in all the baggage. Do the paperwork. Pay the taxes. Then I have a drink and lunch. Poke around the airport shops. Cash in my last money and go to the departure lounge leisurely.

Does this make it better? No, by Jove. I arrive home exhausted. Snarling at the children. (I've tried everything. Airport departures are like facing a firing squad.)

"We'd like a honeymoon cruise in the Caribbean this fall. Could we be married on the ship by the Captain?"

I always thought you could until a shipping bloke told me no. But these ships always have a chaplain aboard. He can do a nautical job for you: long splice, short splice, wire splice or a Turk's Head.

Ships usually sail late afternoon or night. So you'd better tell the shipping line what you've got in mind. At sailing time everybody's busy. What if you can't FIND the chaplain?

"We will spend our honeymoon in Hawaii. Is there a Hawaiian wedding?"

Very nice thing at Coco Palms on Kauai. They've got a grass chapel. Arrange any kind of ceremony you want — including guitars, ukuleles and somebody singing the Hawaiian wedding song. Plenty romantic and you can have a grass shack room with a bed set in an outrigger war canoe. (But make love, not war.)

Coco Palms, Kauai, Hawaii is the address. Write them and they'll send you the cost for everything. It's a low-cost package at the most romantic place in the islands. You'll love it.

"Where is the best place to buy diamond engagement rings?"

Diamonds are a best buy in Hong Kong, Israel, Amsterdam.

"... if we get married in Mexico?"

Mexican marriages are done by the State. A judge marries you and that's what counts. A church ceremony is only icing on the cake. Only a Catholic priest can perform a church ceremony. Other churches can't — maybe that's been changed but I doubt it. The judge does his part free, but he won't object if you give him a hundred pesos: $8 U.S.

Mexicans go down to the Social Security building and are married free. Don't know though whether they let gringos go on the cuff.

If you are going to Mexico, Hawaii or the Caribbean next Christmas, you should make your reservations — and tie them down with a deposit — NOW!

NEW ZEALAND'S ATTRACTIONS

From one extreme to another

By TOM TALAMINI

What will you do and see when you're in New Zealand? Certainly you won't want to miss the country's great thermal area. Rotorua is the center of a bubbling, hissing, smoking triangle of underground activity extending from the East coast to the center of the North Island. Rotorua is also the main Maori settlement of New Zealand, and ancient arts and crafts are still performed there.

Another must is the Glow-worm Grotto of Waitomo Caves on the North Island. Each year more than 50,000 visitors go underground to see one of nature's most amazing phenomena. As you enter the grotto in a boat on an underground river, you will gaze in silent wonder at a galaxy of tiny lights from a multitude of primitive creatures called glow-worms, each glowing for all he's worth with a softly-shining, blue-green light.

travel

IF YOU'RE a fisherman, you'll go out of your mind, so great is the selection of choice spots. And wherever you toss in your line, it will probably be the right place since there are few bad spots in New Zealand.

If it's big game fishing you're looking for then head for the East coast of the North island above Auckland, at the Bay of Islands. At Lakes Taupo and Rotorua in the center of the North Island it's fishing season 365 days a year, and any trout less than 14 inches must be tossed back as too small.

No trip to New Zealand would be complete without a look at the rugged South Island with Alps that rival Switzerland and Austria, spectacular fiords that even Norway can't surpass and the most magnificent glaciers outside of the polar regions and the Himalayas.

Plan several nights at the Hermitage near 12,349-foot Mt. Cook, the country's highest peak. From here you can explore a glacier on foot or take a flightseeing trip in a ski plane, including a glacier landing high up in the alps. This is a unique experience that gives you a close-up of some of the most spectacular scenery in the world in armchair comfort.

THERE IS one other "must" on the South Island and that's Milford Sound, best known of the many immense drowned valleys of Fiordland along the southwestern tip of the island. A sightseeing cruise will take you past sheer rock cliffs, plunging waterfalls and several glaciers, the finest being that on Pembroke Mountain, which rise to a height of 6,710 feet.

If you watch closely you might even see a penguin or two. The most exciting view of all can be enjoyed while you relax in the lounge of the Milford Hotel, and that's Mitre Peak, a 5,560-foot pyramid that rises out of the still waters.

If you're an outdoorsman, the challenges are endless. The skiing is excellent as is the hunting. And there are countless trails for the hiker including the famous Milford Track.

The six or seven day 33-mile package trip along the track takes walkers past Sutherland Falls, the fourth highest in the world where water dives 1,904 feet in three flights, as well as other spectacular views of the Clinton Canyon and Arthur Valley from the top of the 3,400-foot MacKinnon Pass. The Milford Track is claimed as the finest walk in the world.

This is only a sampling of what to see and do in New Zealand. The country is often described as "the world in miniature," an apt description, since there's no place else on earth with so much variety—such a wealth of contrasts—squeezed into such a small, compact package no bigger than the State of Colorado. You can see it all in several weeks. Yet, you will continue to find new things to do and see even after several months.

Rock music's Kirshner picked up trends early

By DENISE KUSEL
Staff Writer

It began with his wife's $47 unemployment check and a basic understanding of people.

By the time he was 28 years old, rock music entrepreneur Don Kirshner had parlayed his money into millions, using his knack for recognizing trends before they became vogue.

"When I first approached ABC with the idea of In Concert and told them the program could draw more viewers than Johnny Carson, they thought I was crazy.

"But we did it," Don Kirshner said, using his hands to emphasize his words.

Kirshner — the innovator. The Pappa Rock of the late night video rangers put it all together into a neat package, called it In Concert and scored.

The idea of In Concert grew a competitive sister when Kirshner found the format of the now established show too confining.

"I needed room to expand my ideas. I needed more room for creative freedom. My own show gives me this freedom."

Don Kirshner's Rock Concert, which like In Concert dominates the midnight rock concert airwaves, moves with the Kirshner brand of raw creative energy and something he calls "sound, musical integrity."

The show is currently being video taped in the concert hall of the Long Beach Auditorium. The concert hall is the back side of the auditorium, sharing the same stage, but rock audiences seldom see it. It's flanked with statue busts of composers who stare down on the maze of newly-installed television and sound equipment with bronzed eyes.

"There's a certain feeling in this hall," Kirshner said, "It has a quality to it ... a certain atmosphere and attitude that makes it come alive for a concert."

The concert hall opened along with the rest of the Auditorium facilities in 1930 — four years before Kirshner was born.

For a man who has discovered stars with the magnitude in rock music of Carole King, Neil Diamond, Neil Sedaka, the late Bobby Darin, Tony Orlando and Olivia Newton John ... and created the Monkees and the Archies (both groups with a solid string of hits to their credit) ... and arranged for the Rolling Stones to kickoff his new TV show (a feat he calls "a slight miracle,") Kirshner still maintains a comfortable shyness about him.

Dressed in Navy blue slacks with a matching jacket shirt, Kirshner's carefully combed black hair sneaks over his collar as he sits in an office in the bowels of the auditorium. The windows are open and the air conditioning is not working.

His brown eyes, streaked with red lines from two marathon sessions taping Rock Concert (which will be aired in September), are warm and sincere.

"Rock is a fact of life. It's a super-healthy thing," Kirshner says. "I think music is the essence of our culture."

His format is simple: He presents a rock and roll concert on television.

He presents it, he says, so "families who can't afford to go to a concert can turn on their television sets and enjoy."

Kirshner likes people. He radiates positive energy and glows when he talks about his family.

"My wife, Sheila, (the same one who put him in business with the unemployment check), says I don't spend enough time at home. I have a son who's 14 and a daughter who's nine years old — going on 20. She's really something else," he smiles.

"My whole being is wrapped around my family." When Kirshner smiles his cheeks dimple slightly. When he talks about his family, a special warmth comes into his voice. He's a sincere individual and that's rare in a business that is hotly competitive.

His sincerity is probably the reason he's able to attract and air every top name rock group around today, and also why he instills in his assistants a fierce loyalty.

David Yarnell, producer of the show, walks around the stage in crepe sole shoes, stroking a stubby salt and pepper beard. Yarnell has been with Kirshner since the days of In Concert.

The director is Al Fisher. Fisher sits in a mobile video-sound van outside the hall. A microphone is pressed close to his lips so he can shout instructions at cameramen to angle in for certain shots and all the while his fingers push buttons and twist dials with the agility of a piano player— never once taking his eyes off the TV monitors.

The two men help shape the potpourri of music that pours out of the stage and funnel it into a

Russians wait, wait for expensive television sets

By FRANK CREPEAU
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's television picture is clouded by lagging production of color sets while more than half a million unsold black and white sets gather dust on the shelves.

Problems of the television industry illustrate the wide gap between official promises to meet consumer demands and the reality for Russian buyers.

Three years ago Sergei Lapin, chairman of the State Committee for Television and Broadcasting, predicted the Soviet Union would have 3.5 million color sets by 1975.

That proved too optimistic and in 1972 the deputy chairman of the State Prices Committee said 200,000 sets would be produced that year and 1.5 million a year by 1975.

The government newspaper Izvestia, in an article criticizing the TV industry, said recently that in 1973 only 168,000 color television sets were made and quoted industry leaders as saying by 1975 production would reach 600,000.

The newspaper said, "We hardly call that task an intensive one" and said Izvestia readers "suggest it is time for us to transfer to color programs."

Yet there are problems. Izvestia said that at the Moscow color television plant color tubes were being produced at only 80 per cent of capacity and about 20 per cent of these have defects.

And Izvestia added that the responsible ministry still hasn't allocated funds for 50,000 color tubes, hundreds of thousands of resistors and millions of condensers needed to fulfill the 1974 plan.

On the other hand, there are too many black and white sets in most areas of the country because 1973 production was up 5 per cent while demand dropped 10 per cent.

Despite price reductions on black and white sets, there are about 600,000 unsold sets left over from last year.

Izvestia criticized the ministry of electronics for continuing to make a 15-inch black and white set and said "work is continuing on improvement and modernization of these unmarketable models."

The Soviet Union places great emphasis on the television medium to educate and indoctrinate the public. Available figures indicate there are about 60 million sets in the Soviet Union, although another 50 million people live in areas where there still is no television.

Soviet publications frequently say that television here does not depend on advertising or license fees and that television has now become a necessity. But prices remain in the luxury class.

A popular 19-inch black and white set sells for 230 rubles — $308 at the official rate of exchange and nearly two months salary for the average industrial worker who earns 140 rubles.

A 19-inch black and white set in the United States costs about $150.

The largest selling black and white sets, with 24-inch screens, are priced at 360, 380 and 390 rubles depending on the brand. There is one price for the 23-inch Soviet color TV — a whopping 630 rubles — or nearly five months' pay for the average Russian worker. And the bulky set, nearly three feet wide and two feet deep, weighs 132 pounds.

Even though the sets are expensive and Russians have problems with service, repairs and supply does not meet demand.

The largest selling black and white sets, with 24-inch screens, are priced at 360, 380 and 390 rubles depending on the brand. There is one price for the 23-inch Soviet color TV — a whopping 630 rubles — or nearly five months' pay for the average Russian worker. And the bulky set, nearly three feet wide and two feet deep, weighs 132 pounds.

Even though the sets are expensive and Russians have problems with service, repairs and supply does not meet demand.

'Airwatch' inaugurating school safety program

By JAMES J. DOYLE

LOS ANGELES (UPD) — In 1959 Radio Station KMPC purchased an idea called "Airwatch" and began one of the most valuable, and possibly most expensive, public service programs in broadcasting.

On its 15th anniversary, July 1, Golden West Broadcasters and its helicopter traffic and emergency vigil added a new wrinkle.

The station is sending its helicopter pilot-reporter, former Los Angeles Police Officer John McIlhenny, to elementary schools to talk about traffic safety.

McIlhenny was a 20-year police veteran and head of the police helicopter operation before he joined KMPC as pilot-reporter last year.

He will make about 100 visits a year to schools in the Los Angeles and Orange County area.

Herb Green, KMPC Airwatch vice president and general manager, feels they have a sure attention grabber.

"When the helicopter lands in a school playground and the pilot steps out," he said, smiling, "we're going to get their attention."

He added that McIlhenny is expert in the necessary fields. He has been a pilot for 22 years. He is an accomplished public speaker, and his view of traffic problems and dangers from 2,000 feet up adds to his experience as a police officer who started in traffic control.

Each youngster who hears one of McIlhenny's traffic safety presentations will be presented with a Junior Airwatch Club membership card. It's hoped by the Airwatch crew and the station it will serve, at some time, as a reminder.

The copters and the fixed wing aircraft, a Beech Baron, fly out of Hollywood-Burbank Airport to scan the Southern California freeway web. The station also maintains a fleet of radio-equipped cars in Orange and Los Angeles Counties.

Airwatch was the first operation of its kind in the country and is still the largest.

"We're very proud of this," Green said, "we're proud of this program."

Green has been flying for more than 40 years and has for many years been the personal pilot of Gene Autry, an owner of Golden West. Green's involvement now, however, is Airwatch.

McIlhenny said the Junior Airwatch Club concept will, hopefully, be a great spur to traffic safety.

NEW WRINKLE for KMPC's "Airwatch"—will key to safety talks to Long Beach and other area elementary schools. Officials say the 'copter landing in the school awareness among youngsters. It is the key event of the 15th anniversary of the service.

Airwatch pilots have logged more than 23,000 hours in Southern California skies, reporting news and traffic.

Mostly it is where the traffic jams are on the freeways at peak traffic hours. The pilots cruise about five hours a day breaking into regularly-scheduled broadcasts to let drivers know what's ahead.

The Airwatch program, which was an innovator in using aircraft in news reporting, has another rare aspect:

It has refused all offers of commercial sponsorship for its reports.

KMPC has donated more than $1 million worth of radio time each year to keep the reports a public service.

In addition, Green said, the operational cost runs about $200,000 per year.

KMPC Vice President and General Manager Stanley Spero says that is a necessity.

"When we do it solely as a public service we can alter our schedule at a moment's notice, if we think it advisable, without having to consult an advertiser or his agency."

McIlhenny stressed the company attitude of "no questions asked, when an emergency occurs."

"If a fire, an emergency of any kind happens," he said, "we turn around and join in. That includes searches for lost persons. It's a decision the pilot makes on the spot. Not many companies would go along with that."

The assistance to law enforcement and other government agencies as well as the public has brought a stack of awards over the years.

Airwatch pilots are credited with the arrest of fugitives, saving lives in fires and floods and often being the first to report accidents and disasters to the proper agency.

It was an Airwatch pilot who first spotted the Bel Air fire in 1961 and it was the late Jim Hicklin, pilot-reporter, who first noted the problems at Van Owen dam during the 1971 Southern California earthquakes. They hovered over the collapsing Baldwin Hills Dam in 1963 and the Watts riots of 1965.

"There's just a lot of satisfaction in it," McIlhenny said, "when you're the first to get an ambulance to the scene of an accident and maybe save a life."

KMPC acquired Airwatch July 1, 1959, from its originators, the late Capt. Max Schumacher and KMPC Newsman Donn Reed. It became a subsidiary of Golden West Broadcasters with Green as its head.

yard will be an automatic attention getter. The programs will be conducted after the morning rush hour activity is completed by the whirlybirds.

Guitar mag picks off easy biz with shows

By JAY SHARBUTT AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Guitarists tend to be a picky lot, but a magazine specifically written for them has been trying of late to strum up some business with a unique radio approach.

Ernest Beyl, a spokesman for "Guitar Player Magazine," says the approach consists of 13 half-hour taped programs that illustrate differing guitar styles as played by the greats of the instrument.

Alas, this plectrum forum isn't heard on commercial radio. Beyl says it's only been heard on about 50 college campus radio stations and wasn't really intended as a commercial radio program.

In fact, he says the stations got the programs free simply by asking for them.

He said the idea was to interest college-area guitarists in subscribing to the magazine by offering them a taste of what the professionals are doing, accompanied by a soft-sell pitch for GPM.

"So we started hunting for suitable colleges that had radio stations with a loose enough format to accommodate something like that," he said, adding that the shows began airing about six months ago.

Beyl, whose publication is based in Los Gatos, Calif., 50 miles south of San Francisco, said the musical commentator on the series is Jim Crockett, editor of the seven-year-old magazine.

Beyl said the programs feature selections from albums by such varied virtuosos as Jose Feliciano, the late Charlie Christian, Eric Clapton, T-Bone Walker and classicalist Christopher Parkening.

In addition, he said each show has a five-minute interview on the state of the art with well-known guitarists, people like Les Paul, jazzman Barney Kessel and bluesman Dock Watson.

None of the interviewees plug new albums or current engagements at nearby bistros "because that would date the shows and we want them to be timeless, so to speak," Beyl says.

He said the entire package cost about $3,500 to put together.

Deaf get chance with TV

By ROUBEN CHANCO RIDDER NEWS SERVICE

ST. PAUL, Minn.—The people sat intently reading the captions on the moving pictures in front of them.

But they weren't watching an old silent movie.

They were seeing something new—a modern, captioned television program.

They were able to do so because the TV set in front of them was equipped with a special "decoding device" which instantly placed captions on the screen as the characters spoke.

The TV viewers, mostly deaf or hard of hearing, watched the program in the auditorium of the St. Paul Technical-Vocational Institute (TVI). The TV show was part of national tests to see how well the captioning (subtitle) system works and how the deaf and hard of hearing react to such programs.

If the tests are successful, these same people in the future could be watching captioned shows at home on their own TV sets.

"It will be a significant breakthrough for the deaf and hard of hearing," Paul Michaud, community coordinator of the captioning TV programs for the deaf project, said.

"The blind have had their 'talking radio' for years. This will be like introducing 'visual radio' for the deaf," added Michaud, who also is a rehabilitation counselor for the deaf with the Minnesota Department of Public Welfare.

The national television captioning project, funded by a $210,000 grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

TV stations get better yardstick

By DAVID BURNHAM

(C) 1974 New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON—A new yardstick that will help regulators, business competitors, and the public measure the performance of television stations across the country has been developed by the Federal Communications Commission.

The yardstick, actually a brief report devised by the FCC, requires all commercial TV stations to tell the commission and the public, each year, exactly how many minutes of news, public affairs, and other non-commercial programming, on such subjects as religion, were broadcast during a special test week.

The new annual reports are considered important because they will give the commission, competitors, and public interest groups up-to-date information on how much time each station is devoting to public affairs. This is the key question considered when a broadcaster asks that his three-year federal license be renewed.

In New York, for example, WNBC-TV reported that 21.6 per cent of the 7,359 minutes of broadcasting during the test week were devoted to news and public affairs. This compared with WNEW-TV, which during the same period devoted 9.9 per cent of its 7,344 minutes of broadcasting to news and public affairs.

The new programming reports, which the FCC is expected to release soon in a consolidated national report, became available as both the Senate Commerce Committee and the commission prepared to resume consideration of two key TV regulation issues.

The Commerce Committee has held hearings on a broadcast renewal bill already passed by the House. Broadcast groups say the pending legislation provides needed "stability" while critics say it will remove a competitive spur that forces stations to be responsive to the needs of the community in which they operate.

At the FCC, hearings are scheduled on a long-pending proposal to eliminate the cross ownership of television stations and newspapers.

An examination of a small sampling of the 682 programming reports filed with the commission did not appear to support the contention of opponents to the ban on such ownership that such stations had greater resources and thus provided more news.

Another finding was that in most cities, one station was the clear leader in public interest broadcasts.

Concerning only actual news programs and public affairs programs such as the regularly scheduled news interview shows, for example, WNBC-TV was far ahead of the other stations in New York during the test week.

Compared with the 21.6 per cent showing of WNBC-TV, WCBS-TV reported 17.7 per cent, WABC-TV 15, WOR-TV 13, WPIX-TV 10.9 and WNEW-TV 9.9.

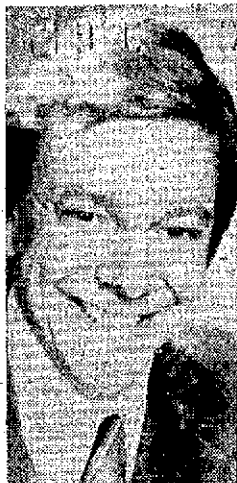

Educational stations such as Channel 13 were exempted from reporting.

The pattern of news and public affairs broadcasting by stations in several other major cities was not markedly different from that in New York.

Before the existence of the new reports, stations reported on how much news and public affairs they scheduled only every three years when their license was up for renewal.

Another key difference is that the new annual reports permit a comparison of all television stations in the United States. This was not possible before because the renewal applications are staggered over a three-year period and thus the test weeks frequently varied from city to city.

FCC Officials acknowledge the new forms have shortcomings. The chief one, perhaps, is that they measure only quantity, and not quality. The Los Angeles stations affiliated with the three major networks, for example, were found to provide considerably more hours of news and public affairs programs than those in New York, Chicago, and Washington. But officials say that Los Angeles news programs tend to be more oriented toward show business, and have less solid news than those in the other three cities.

NEW JOB for Jim Hartz.

The NBC reporter and anchorman is the new permanent co-host for the "Today" show, filling the vacancy created in April by the death of Frank McGee. The network used a group of candidates in trial programs and then made its evaluations.

Seal Beach jazz band on Monday

The Seal Beach Elementary School Jazz Band, composed of third through eighth graders, will perform on KOCE-TV's "Some New Jazz" an "Omnibus 50" program Monday at 7:30 p.m. over Channel 50.

"Omnibus 50" will be repeated on Aug. 1 and Aug. 4 at 6 p.m.

Host Dr. Warren Marsh, will talk with Charles Wackerman, director of the Seal Beach Elementary Jazz Band, on the bands future, how the children are selected and their rehearsal schedules.

The jazz band, aged 8 to 13 years old, has appeared at several leading jazz festivals and won the Reno International Jazz Festival in 1972 and 1973.

The Seal Beach Elementary Jazz Band performs all special compositions on the program including, "Nothing But the Truth" by John Prince; "Mighty Might Cardinal" by Don Rader; "Chump Change" by Quincy Jones and Bill Cosby; and "Impressions" by John Coltrane.

Producer-director is Gary Greene of Channel 50.

Another problem with the reports is that some television stations apparently padded their results by including advertising in the time claimed for news although this was specifically prohibited. Sources in the FCC indicated the reports of at least some stations would be audited.

'Columbo' settles with studio

Actor Peter Falk has reached an out-of-court settlement in his dispute with Universal Studios and is back at work on "Columbo."

Falk's attorney, Bertram Fields, said, "The matter has been resolved amicably."

A Universal spokesman said, "Any differences that may have existed between Peter and the studio have been amicably resolved."

In the meantime, Carroll O'Connor remained away from CBS's "All in the Family" as a second show was taped without him.

Falk's suit against Universal to break his contract was due to be heard in Los Angeles Superior Court on Monday.

Terms of the settlement were not disclosed.

Filming of the third "Columbo" for NBC for the fall season will begin Aug. 12 at The Citadel in Charleston, S.C.

Falk charged in a suit filed June 21 that Universal had breached his contract by failure to make a $132,777 payment to Falk's company, Jackie Productions, on June 4.

BEFORE WALKING OUT, Falk had completed two segments of the two-hour "Columbo" for NBC's "Sunday Mystery Movie." He will make six for the season.

In an interview several months ago Falk said he wanted to cut back the number of "Columbo" segments. He made eight last year.

"My choice is to cut back," he said at the time. "The fewer there are the better it is and the more time I have to make movies."

Earlier this year Falk completed "Mickey and Nicky," in which he co-stars with John Cassavetes.

'Mr. Wizard' finds program led to many science careers

By DALE F. MEAD
RIDDER NEWS SERVICE

STANFORD, CAL.—It's Mr. Wizard!

And it was childhood revisited recently for an auditorium full of graduate science students when "Mr. Wizard"—Don Herbert—came to Stanford University.

Now 55, tanned and handsome with silver hair, witty and dramatic as ever, he wowed 'em.

"How many here have seen Mr. Wizard?" asked Prof. Arthur Schawlow before introducing Herbert. Virtually everyone in the near-full auditorium enthusiastically raised his hand. Schawlow had arranged for his friend to talk.

Schawlow, co-inventor of the laser, starred in a science film made by Herbert after his "Mr. Wizard" series ended a 15-year stint in 1965.

The television show featured Herbert as Mr. Wizard, hosting a young boy or girl in a home or laboratory setting to explain some scientific subject—wind, bridges or electricity, for example.

During that Saturday morning half-hour, the youngster and host would play with a gamut of experiments using little more than materials found around the house.

"I'm really an interpreter of science, not a scientist," he said. "When I go on the Tonight Show (as a guest), they think I'm a scientist. When I meet people like Dr. Schawlow, they think I'm a television personality."

But he has had his impact. According to Schawlow, when word got around of Herbert's appearance a number of students attributed their science careers to watching his show.

An English and general science major from a small college in Wisconsin, he tried writing radio scripts until a successful writer told him they were not very good and that he should home in on subjects in which he was sincerely interested.

Pausing to ponder, "What I would like to do with my life," he decided to do something that would appeal to children, something visual and creative that involved using his hands.

He dreamed up the science show and one day thought up the name, "Mr. Wizard" while riding on an elevator with a friend. The pilot show attracted the support of the Cereal Institute which in turn convinced NBC-TV.

The program was launched in 1951 and eventually reached millions of viewers over 165 local stations.

Surveys of the program's appeal "found we were No. 2 most of the time and that half of our audience was adult—interesting because the show was aimed at 12 year olds.

"But their letters indicated they weren't morons. They were people who didn't like science in school or families watching together," said Herbert.

The show played its course and was discontinued in 1965 to be replaced by "Something New," but at that time Herbert's Prism Productions, Inc., which handled the show, got a new project.

'Dandy Don' proves mettle

Former pro football quarterback Don Meredith is making a feature film for television. Eventually, there may be a regular series in his TV future. If so, says Dandy Don, he hopes there'll be some humor in it "for spice."

By JERRY BUCK

Associated Press Writer.
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Smoke curled menacingly into the top floor of a tall, modern office building. The workers frantically taped doors and cracks in a desperate effort to keep the deadly fumes out. "We're going to die!" a secretary cried. A co-worker shouted, "Somebody shut her up!" Off-camera, Don Meredith stood by the doorway, a portrait in smoke-shrouded serenity, clutching a rug.

"It's my security blanket," he grinned at a bystander.

Then on cue, the former Dallas Cowboys quarterback plunged forward with his rug to block the smoke, supposedly from a fire several floors down that trapped the top-floor workers during a Christmas party.

The heroics at hand were part of his first television feature film, "The Only Way Is Down," in which he portrays a spineless, womanizing executive. It'll be on NBC-TV next season.

Meredith, the Texas delegation on ABC's "NFL Monday Night Football" for four seasons before quitting in March, now is under exclusive contract with NBC.

The pact calls for the trim, tanned son of Mt. Vernon, Tex., to star in three TV movies a year for at least two years, appear in variety specials, act as substitute host on the "Tonight" show and do sports commentary.

He might even get around to singing some day. Meredith, whose humor and singing style are strikingly like that of Roger Miller, periodically threatens to go to Nashville and cut a record for laughs.

The movie on which he's now working is part of the new package of NBC World Premiere Movies. It's TV's contribution to the recent rash of films about men versus disasters, films like "The Towering Inferno," which also is about a skyscraper fire.

A normally amiable, easygoing free spirit, Meredith almost balked at doing the NBC film and not just because it created interoffice smog.

"He was taken aback at playing a bad guy," said Stan Robertson, NBC's vice president of film programming. "He said, 'What about my image?' I told him that if he wanted to grow as an actor he had to play all kinds of roles."

"He wanted the role tempered some so that he was not so much of a bad guy. So we tempered it some."

"I was honestly frightened by it," said Dandy Don, who in his playing days faced more fearsome matters — like 280-pound linebackers. "I didn't know if I could do it."

"I couldn't believe they had that role picked out for me. We're not through, but I feel pretty good at this stage. We had a couple of difficult scenes and I got through them."

It's not Meredith's first plunge into the acting field. He's done four "Police Story" segments. He first began thinking about acting during his days on ABC's Monday football show.

Although he had no experience at emotion, he knew "Police Story" producer David Gerber, who recalled, "We used to get together now and then and his agent suggested him for parts."

"Finally last summer, we came up with the role of a wise-cracking detective in 'Police Story,' and I said, 'Let's take a chance on him.'"

"He'd become a big personality and I thought he would be an addition to the show. I said I wasn't going to give him the major role and would put him in with a good New York actor, Tony LoBionca."

Meredith proved a success and it led to three more shows and then the NBC contract.

With his drawl, his light brown hair worn full, his 6-foot-3, 200-pound frame, Meredith looks like a big, friendly sophisticated country boy who enjoys matching wits with city slickers.

His good looks are hampered only by a nose that appears to have been rudely introduced to a linebacker's elbow on several occasions.

Meredith, who lives with his second wife in a Pennsylvania town with the improbable name of Elephant, set passing records at Southern Methodist University and was the Cowboys' top draft choice in 1960.

While in pro football, he produced and starred in his own sports show. He left the team in 1963. A year later, Roone Arledge, president of ABC Sports, hired him over lunch to share the Monday Night Football booth with Howard Cosell and Frank Gifford.

It turned out to be an arrangement sometimes more concerned with showmanship than the joust down on the playing field.

Meredith, 36, was always "Dandy Don" to Cosell, and the Texan's quick humor and inability to regard the game with awe led to accusations he was a clown and a cutup.

"I was just having a good time," drawled Meredith. "I didn't take it as seriously as some other people, including some coaches."

Meredith's contract calls for one of his movies to be a pilot for a series.

Terry Keegan, director of program development for NBC, said no specific series concept has been drawn up yet for Meredith.

"At this point, we're thinking of him in a drama with humor or a high adventure," Keegan said. "What makes him work is that he's a strong, likeable and good personality."

"I don't know if I want to do a series or not, but if things work out well it would be nice," Meredith said.

National Geographic to miss '74-'75 season

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Barring last-minute changes by CBS, the 1974-75 season will be the first in 10 years that the National Geographic Society hasn't had one or more of its specials on network television.

The reason: A June Federal Court decision which ordered the Federal Communications Commission to delay until September 1975 revisions the FCC had made in its prime time access rule.

The revisions in effect would have increased by 1½ hours a week the time each network could have on local stations during the prime evening hours, the FCC says.

But because of the court order, CBS, which had planned to air six half-hour National Geographic specials on Saturday, said it was forced to drop the programs from its 1974-75 schedule.

It was the second setback of the year for the Society. Earlier it had been told ABC — which aired National Geographic specials last season — wasn't renewing its contract with them for the new season.

After ABC's decision, "we in essence were looking for a network when CBS told us it had this opening from 7:30 to 8 on Saturday nights," said Dennis B. Kane, head of the Society's TV division.

He said the six shows, produced in association with documentarian David L. Wolper, originally were planned as 60-minute programs, the usual length of National Geographic specials.

They were cut to 30 minutes each for CBS.

"It seemed at the time the CBS offer was the only thing available to us and it was up to us to make the decision on whether we wanted that or not," Kane said.

"We finally said, 'Rather than leave television, because we feel that it is important, we'll stay in it in the half-hour format and see what happens the following year.'"

The six programs, the subjects of which range from gorillas to the wild horsemen of Afghanistan, cost more than $180,000 each to produce, he said.

They'll appear during the new TV season in Canada, he added, but there's little chance they'll appear then on CBS, which aired National Geographic specials for eight seasons until 1973-74.

Kane, who said the programs can be restored to 60-minute length if necessary.

PAT HINGLE stars as a tough-talking doctor with a gentle heart in the "The Last Angry Man," a drama of life during the depression on ABC-TV's "Wednesday Movie of the Week" from 8:30 to 10 p.m.

ABC's Close-Up proves its worth via tough shows

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR
(C) 1974 NEW YORK TIMES NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK—Emerging from under the inevitable rhetoric of promises, ABC news Close-Up has worked. The series of monthly news specials will complete its first year in September with a look at television and the question of how and why certain programs ever make it to the small screens throughout the land.

It all began last October with "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Coal," a Stephen Fleischman documentary on the economic and power politics of the coal industry in West Virginia. Certain coal companies were discovered to be operating "often with a cavalier disregard for the law." The offending companies, their executives and their defenders in Washington were clearly identified. An impressive dent was delivered to the lofty vagueness that is used as a shell for too many TV documentaries.

At the time, ABC and Av Westin were insisting that the new series would be thoroughly investigative while remaining carefully within the parameters of fairness and balance. Westin is actually the executive producer of the series but does not receive on-screen credit because his company title of "news vice president and director of television documentaries" supposedly puts him above such mundane considerations.

In a conversation before the series started, Westin insisted that the network was giving him unusual freedom. Although ABC had been producing prime time documentaries, some of them quite good, the scheduling was sporadic and the format lacked the eye-catching cohesiveness of a CBS Reports or a NBC White Paper. Westin had brought the nightly edition of the ABC news into national prominence and intra-network competition with Harry Reasoner and Howard K. Smith. He was the obvious choice for a major effort to put ABC documentaries on the prestige map.

He has. The close-up series has been startlingly solid in investigative reporting. A study of fire hazards, produced by Pamela Hill, was specific enough to have a manufacturer of cribs go to the trouble of getting a temporary injunction against the program being shown in Indiana. James Benjamin's "Food — Green Grow the Profits" questioned some practices of the giant "agribusiness" to provocative and devastating effect.

Among the other and better programs: "The Right to Die," produced by Marlene Sanders, exploring the questions of when should death come? And, who should decide? "Oil—The Policy Crisis," produced by Stephen Fleischman, an examination of oil-policy history and practices, explicit enough to incur the widely publicized but unavailing wrath of major oil companies; and Martin Carr's "Culture Thieves" investigation of the "Plundered Past," a detailed examination of the international illicit trade in antiquities.

The series has hardly

Who did what to whom is show's big question

By P.M. CLEPPER
RIDDER NEWS SERVICE

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Marlo Thomas is a no-talent actress...In the view of Valerie Harper.

Valerie is doing publicity work for her new series "Rhoda," but when asked, she'll give her views on Marlo.

The feud started last winter. Valerie was working in a Broadway-bound play written by Herb Gardner, long-time boy friend of Marlo.

The plan was that when the play was firmly established on Broadway, Valerie was to step out and fly back to Hollywood to begin work on "Rhoda."

However, the script ran into critical flak in its Boston tryout. Now comes a conflict in stories. Who will you believe? The official version from Gardner and Company is that Valerie ran out on the show. Valerie maintains that she didn't quit...She was fired.

And who stepped in to the stage in to the starring role?—Marlo, who went into Broadway in the comedy.

Valerie's catty appraisal: It would have been better for Marlo to have followed Valerie in the part: Then she could have had the advantage of seeing it done by an actress.

About "Rhoda": In the first show, Mary Tyler Moore will be shown seeing Rhoda off from Minnesota's Twin Cities. She'll work for a publishing company in Manhattan.

But it will not long be the adventures of an unmarried loser...As Rhoda was on Mary's show. In the third month on the air, she'll get married. Her husband

(not yet cast) definitely will be non-Jewish, and probably Catholic. (Shades of "Bridgit loves Bernie")

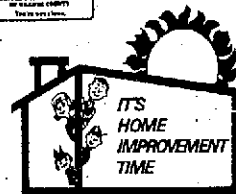

Miss Moore will guest a couple of times. The wedding script will be in two parts. It will start on Saturday night on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and then be completed on Monday on "Rhoda."

Big brass stood firm amidst controversies

been without flaws. Nothing is. The otherwise first-rate "Paper Prison" was marred by the inclusion of a scene showing ABC cameras gaining access to supposedly confidential material. But the implication could have been merely that the custodian of the material placed too much trust in ABC news-men. The result was presented as a coup, which, perhaps, it was; but not necessarily so.

"Women in Prison" tackled the prickly subject of prison reforms, but gave the impression that it was less interested in investigating than in propounding the particular views of the producer. Opponents of that view were merely tolerated.

Westin feels that the best installments were those that gave the audience a sense that there was something to be done about a specific problem, something like writing their congressmen or avoiding a particular product. The least effective were what he calls the "music, up and under" variety, the ones attempting to prove preconceived notions like "Women in Prison." Westin stresses, "I don't believe in advocacy journalism."

Westin doesn't hesitate in pinpointing his biggest pleasure:

"The corporate side has stood with us."

Investigative journalism generates controversy. That is no secret. The test of a company is in how far it is willing to withstand the pressures of that controversy.

DEATH IS THE MISSION as Hartma (Ken Tobey), Officer Brennan (Claude Akins), Eric Benoit (Robert Foster), Capt. Vern Acker (George Murdock), Allen Duke (Mark Goddard), from left, star in "Death Squad." It will be on ABC-TV's "Suspense Movie" from 8:30 to 10 p.m. Saturday.

The BIBLE Says

Question: "What is the Book of Life?"

A reader asks about the Book of Life. The Bible reveals that the NAMES of the saved are written in Heaven (Luke 10:20; Heb. 12:23). The Bible also teaches that the NAMES of the saved are in the Book of Life (Phil. 4:3). The "Book of Life" is simply the sum of the NAMES of those who are saved.

Some have supposed that the Book of Life was the personal history of everyone's sins. This is incorrect. First, when God forgives a sin, He "remembers it no more" (Heb. 8:12). Second, if the Book of Life is the history of our sins, then EVERYONE is in that Book, because everyone has sinned (Rom. 3:23). However, the Bible teaches that some are not in the Book of Life. Third, if the Book of Life is the history of our sins, then we should desire to keep OUT of that Book, but Jesus told His disciples to "rejoice, because your names are written in heaven" (Luke 10:20). The Book of Life contains the NAMES of the saved, not the SINS of the world. It is the register of those who are heirs of eternal life — thus it is "The Book of Life."

The Bible says one can be BLOTTED OUT of the Book of Life. God told Moses, "Whosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book" (Ex. 32:33).

Many preachers teach that no one can apostatize and be lost — but the Bible teaches the possibility of a name being blotted out of the Book of Life. Is there a Baptist preacher who can logically explain how a former enrollee can go to Heaven when his name has been blotted out of the BOOK OF LIFE???

O.J. learning from pros in new sideline

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Can the National Football League's Most Valuable Player become one on the movie screen?

O. J. Simpson believes so, and he is training for an acting career with the zeal and strategy he has applied to his performances for the University of Southern California — Heisman Trophy winner — and the Buffalo Bills — 2,003 yards rushing last season.

"I've been offered leading roles for a lot more money than I've been getting," says the handsome running back, 26. "But I think it's much better for me to sit back and work with actors like Lee Marvin and Richard Burton, Paul Newman and Steve McQueen."

He recently completed a featured role in "The Klansman" with Marvin and Burton and will squeeze in the all-star "The Towering Inferno" before reporting for football practice when the player strike ends.

He had misgivings about "The Klansman" after reading the script, a ripe blend of lust, rape, murder and racial conflict in an Alabama backwater.

"The script was filled with lines like 'Kill, baby, kill!' and 'Burn, baby, burn!'," he remarked. "I couldn't see myself saying things like that, but I was assured that I could use my own verbiage, and it worked out all right."

Simpson's role in the film has been described as a black militant. Not true, says he.

"He's simply a guy who reacts when he is provoked — you know, sort of like Clint Eastwood when the heavies push him too far and he goes 'pow!' This guy I play is like that. I'll tell you this: When I kill somebody in the picture, there's going to be applause in the theaters. That's because those guys are so bad."

O. J. remarked that he had learned much from Lee Marvin, whose instructions about acting were simplicity itself: Hit the mark, convey the meaning of the words and give your fellow actor the right cue. Simpson's experience with Richard Burton was less instructive.

It is no secret that Burton was on the booze during the filming in Oroville, and O. J. admitted that he had a minor run-in with the Welsh star.

"He got onto a thing about 'brains vs. brawn,'" the athlete-actor said. "He kept going on, and didn't care much for it. He's a brainy man, I guess, but I'm not all that brawny." He added that he found Burton's now ex-wife, Elizabeth Taylor, to be very pleasant and friendly.

There were sexy scenes in "The Klansman," but not for O. J. "That's one thing my wife won't allow," he said with a grin. "She doesn't want me doing any picture where I jump in bed naked."

In "The Towering Inferno," Simpson plays a security officer of a fire-swept skyscraper, appearing in a cast that includes Newman, McQueen, William Holden, Fred Astaire and Richard Chamberlain.

"Most of my scenes are with Paul Newman, not McQueen," Simpson remarked. "That's good, because they tell me Newman is a better actor and I can learn more."

Bureaucracy proves the same in era of PBS 'Conan Doyle' tale

By FRANK S. SWERTLOW

NEW YORK (UPD) — Fact may be stranger than fiction. But it isn't always as neat.

Tonight at 9 PBS will present "Conan Doyle," a dramatized episode from the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of the Sherlock Holmes mysteries.

This 60-minute special, the last segment in Masterpiece Theater's: "The Edwardians," deals with the case of George Edalji, an Anglo-Indian law student who was falsely accused of mutilating animals near his home.

Although Edalji was sentenced to seven years in prison, the young attorney was suddenly released after three years. He then sought out Conan Doyle for aid in clearing himself of the crime, perhaps underseering the public's association with Holmes.

Doyle, who became interested in the case, ran into a mountain of red tape, bureaucratic bigotry and ineptitude on his way to showing Edalji was innocent.

Unfortunately the bureaucrats in the British home office fail to completely exonerate the half-caste youth, thus destroying Doyle's investigation.

HERE LIES the failure of the drama. The ending falls flat on its face after making Doyle and Holmes resemble the same person for nearly 55 minutes.

Thus we see Doyle, played by British actor Nigel Davenport, puffing REMINDED YOU OF ANYONE? No, he is not Sherlock Holmes but Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who created the famous detective character, as portrayed by Nigel Davenport on PBS tonight from 8 to 9. "Conan Doyle," the Mobil-funded Masterpiece Theatre presentation, dramatizes an incident in which the late British author, acting as Holmes might, solves a difficult case.

on his pipe in a true Holmesian tradition. Then, there are two real-life Dr. Watson's — Doyle's manservant and his mistress. And finally we have the precise, Holmesian investigation.

But at least there is no shout of "Elementary, my dear Watson."

What "Conan Doyle" evolves into, is a study of the individual versus the bureaucrats, a never-ending theme for each age, whether Edwardian, Victorian or Nixonian. On this level we see Doyle battling bigotry, crassness and bureaucratic face saving. But the battle ultimately is a failure and another loose thread for the drama.

Alistair Cooke also cuts another loose thread by building our interest in Doyle as a Renaissance Man. He was a doctor, a best-selling writer and a philanthropist and above all a man of honor.

Aliens' health airing today viable product through careful editing.

Kirshner's success is keyed to a simple quality: He listens.

He listens to what people are saying. He watches the five TV monitor screens in the video truck and wants to know if the audience is having a good time.

He wants to know if they have refreshments because the air conditioning still isn't working and it's a humid night. He is genuinely concerned with the sea of anonymous faces that make up the audience and are panned from time to time on the TV screen.

His secret is the masses. "It's the masses that own the economy. And it's the masses that just don't have the bucks to spend on entertainment. Entertainment is a way to get away and we need that these days."

"My show is presenting chocolate and vanilla ice cream ... but that's not saying I won't add strawberry," he said being slightly elusive about his future plans.

"It's a long way from playing pro basketball," Kirshner quips as he makes reference to his athletic scholarships to City College of New York and Upsala College, N.J., "but for a nice Jewish boy from the Bronx, I guess you can say I've done OK."

TV MOVIE TIPS

The ultimate tan

Gary Wilkes is a mild-mannered pleasant young man who attends Golden West College and plans to be a computer programmer. You would never guess that behind those steel-rimmed glasses blinks the mind of a visionary.

He came to see me the other day because he has this vision for Orange County that he wants to make a reality, and he thought a little publicity might help.

Gary wants a nude beach for Orange County. You gotta admit that's quite a vision.

"Hasn't Orange County got enough troubles already?" I asked him, "with its supervisor lost at sea, the grand jury charging that nobody bothers to observe the campaign financing laws and developers and the Coastal Commission growling at each other?"

"That's it," Gary said. "They need something constructive to work on. You have no idea how relaxing a nude beach can be and how it helps you get along with other human beings."

That's right. I have no idea and I'm not likely to have. I was against the adoption of the topless bathing suit for men. Not because of prudery. Because of sunburn.

"Do you think this is an idea whose time has come in Orange County?" I pressed Gary. "After all, a number of our citizens have yet to be persuaded that the sundial should be abandoned in favor of the clock."

Actually, Gary said, a good deal of sub rosa skinny-dipping goes on in Orange County.

"I was born in Orange County and grew up here," he said patriotically. "In the old days before the beach there was so accessible, people would sunbathe nude at Scotsman's Cove between Newport and Laguna. I understand they still do at Camp Pendleton. At night at one time or another during the summer you can find people swimming nude even on the city beaches."

I hadn't known that. I began to feel I had not researched this subject nearly enough.

But skinny-dipping at night was not his cup of tea, Gary admitted. He liked the sense of freedom going nude on the beach gave you, but he also liked to get tan all over.

"Is there anything more ugly than the contrast of a good tan with all those white untanned areas like you see in Playboy?" he asked. "You don't have to go to the magazines to see them either. You see them on the beach every time someone gets a new bathing suit."

Gary said he had visited nude beaches at Venice, Malibu, Santa Cruz and San Diego in search of the ultimate tan. Once people accept nudity, those beaches are really no different from any others, he said.

"Except you get a lot of old guys in ties and business suits prowling around. You know they're not there to sun or swim. They're there to peep."

Those beaches were all relatively secluded, I pointed out, whereas most of the Orange Coast beaches were right off Pacific Coast Highway.

Some of the new areas opened to the public south of San Clemente are secluded and would be ideal, he said. Even Scotsman's Cove is hidden from the highway by bluffs and has no homes overlooking it.

"San Diego is just as conservative as Orange County," he said. "If they can have a nude beach why can't we?"

The nude beach near La Jolla has aroused a lot of opposition, I told him. Local residents are not so concerned about the nudists as about the voyeurs they have drawn. "Perverts watching perverts watching perverts," is the way one resident described it.

I raised a point that had been bothering me since he began the conversation.

"You say it's nice to get tanned all over, but how about someone who doesn't tan very well? It's not so nice to get sunburned all over, is it?"

It's impossible, he assured me, to get really sunburned all over. For some reason the genitals don't sunburn.

"But you can get a pretty bad sunburn?"

You can, he admitted. Bottoms are a problem. They burn and they get very pink and very, very sore.

"How about it?" he asked. "Will you help us get a nude beach in Orange County?"

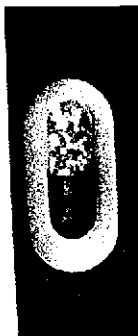

Well, I don't know. I will have to think about it. But if you are successful, Gary, will you put in a word for me to get the sunburn lotion concession? I'm thinking about putting in a few rental binoculars as a sideline.

David Birney
... an Irish Protestant

Marlene Dietrich
... not Eva's mother

Peter Falk
... bad script troubles

Cher
... a change in plans

Garry Moore
... income down

Q: Now that the two stars of Bridget Loves Bernie are Mr. and Mrs., will she do what Elizabeth Taylor once did, convert to her husband's faith — Jewish? — Mrs. P. Mindling, St. Louis.

A: She couldn't if she wanted to. Her husband isn't Jewish. Meredith Baxter will remain a Presbyterian. And David Birney will remain an Irish Protestant.

Q: What was Marlene Dietrich's original name? And is Eva Marie Saint her daughter? — E. Answel, Staten Island, N.Y.

A: No. Marlene's daughter is former actress Maria Riva, who made her mother a proud grandmother four times. Miss Dietrich was born Maria Magdalena Dietrich, Dec. 27, 1904, in Berlin.

Q: Anything to a rumor that Columbo, my favorite TV detective series, will be canceled? And if so, what will Peter Falk do with that old, worn-out raincoat? I'd like to buy it for my television room. — Gerald McK., South Bend, Ind.

A: Sorry, but Falk's saving it for a rainy day! His $32 coat is a prized memento to hang up in his closet when he hangs up the Columbo role, after one more season. Peter's pulling a switch and cancelling the network — not vice versa. "Sure I'm happy the series was a success," he admits. "But the more popular it got, the more I found myself battling some crummy scripts."

Q: Is director John Huston still doing films? — M. W., Phoenix, Ariz.

A: Yes. But from the other side of the cameras. He's now acting — in Roman Polanski's Chinatown and Orson Welles's The Other Side of the Wind.

Q: Under the hair dryer I picked up an old copy of Girl Talk where Cher said she is "hoping to have another baby next year. Now that we're financially secure (she and Sonny), we want two or three more kids." What have you to say about such a remark? — Mrs. Sol Miller, Far Rockaway, N.Y.

A: Nothing, except to file it in our Eat Those Words Dept.

Q: What is Garry Moore's real name? Where and when was he born? And does he like moderating To Tell the Truth more than doing his own series of shows? — Mrs. Patty Purdue, Richmond, Va.

A: He likes both activities, naturally. But where his income once ran as high as a reported $43,000 a week (in 1963), he now earns less on the popular panel show than his agent used to earn in commissions in the old days. Garry was born in Baltimore on Jan. 31, 1915, and christened Thomas Garrison Morfit.

SOUTHLAND SUNDAY, JULY 28, 1974

in them thar malocclusions

Orthodontics is sweet work. It is lucrative ($70 to $80 an hour), clean (little blood), regular (no emergencies), happy (nobody dies or experiences great pain), satisfying. The finished product smiles a lot.

A typically affable orthodontist in Greenwich, Conn., admits that he entered the field

Marcia Cohen, a freelance writer in New York and the mother of two formerly maloccluded children, once wore braces herself.

after several years as a general dentist because he liked making movies on the side and was sick of standing over the bowl "with water spraying in my face all day."

In Binghamton, N.Y., the names and relaxed faces of orthodontists show up in the society pages skin diving in the Caribbean, on the sports pages with their own race horses, on the financial pages as owners of movie theaters. "It's an orthodontist's market today," one practitioner sheepishly observes.

A glance at any seventh grade class in a middle-to-upper-income area will tell you what he means. Orthodontics is as much a part of coming of age today as squeaky knickers were when grandma was a kid.

In those days, it was the rare child who had orthodontic work done. Only if you had the misfortune to be born into one of those "dentally educated" families would you be cursed with braces. A pariah in the seventh grade, you glued your lips together and either remained practically mute or mumbled for the duration.

Malocclusions

Back in the 40s and 50s, braces sometimes consisted simply of two or four bands on the back teeth attached to a wire extending across the front. Thus it was possible for one memorably vain teen-ager to sequester herself in the ladies' room prior to the school dance and tug until the despised affliction came loose and could be safely removed to the coat pocket.

Today, far from being an affliction, appliances are practically a badge of honor — a symbol of beauty, endurance and wealth. Denise, a vibrant 11-year-old from White Plains, N.Y., flashes a big metallic grin and announces that she used to think her braces made her ugly, but now, "I think I look fine." And, like many other proud achievers, she bravely denies experiencing any pain.

As Denise speaks, her friend Colette fidgets. Colette has been told by the school system's dentist that she needs braces too, but she isn't sure she'll be getting them. Her father took a second job, dishwashing, to pay the $900 needed for her older sister's orthodontics and her mother isn't sure he'll be able to do that for Colette.

Denise's family is more fortunate. Her father owns a small grocery store and her mother works for the telephone company. They have paid the $50 monthly installments on Denise's $1,250 orthodontia as a matter of course. "It's just another bill," her mother says. "If we weren't paying that, it would probably be something else." She is amazed, she adds in deprecation, that people will put their money into luxuries — instead of their teeth.

At Denise's school, in a working-to-middle-class district, only a few children in her class have braces. On the other side of town, in a school surrounded by gracious Tudor homes with well-kept lawns, the kids estimate that about half the members of their classes have braces.

Treatment periods range from a few months to upwards of five or six years, with the average at two and a half. An afternoon session in the orthodontist's chair is never the favorite two hours of anyone's lifetime. As one teen-ager put it, "It's like urban renewal. They tear everything out and then come in there with all that steel and cement." Fees charged by the "image practitioners," that is, the orthodontists who wire up the great and the near great — the Kennedy or Radziwill kids, for example — are, they admit, $1,000 a year. (Prices around Long Beach vary, but $1,400 for a course of treatment is a good average.)

'It's like urban renewal'

Orthodontic practices themselves have begun to take on the look of social-action groups or clubs. If you have seen someone often on peace marches or at the country club, the chances are good that your daughter will be seeing her son in the orthodontist's waiting room. It may be the elegant Park Avenue practitioner with the Brooks Brothers tie knotted neatly under his tailor-made office coat; the suburban swinger with his specially designed, turtle-neck work jacket, or the serious, academic type, reassuringly seedy; his practice will be surprisingly homogeneous. This is because, and most orthodontists will concur proudly, so many patients show up in the orthodontist's office today, not on referral from the general dentist but because they have seen the man's work on a friend and like the way it looks.

So the question really is: What are we all flocking to the orthodontists for? Cosmetics (used interchangeably in this field with "aesthetics") or health? Are the ubiquitous "railroad tracks" simply a reflection of the current mania for a dazzling TV smile?

In attempting to find an answer, the tightly woven fabric of American orthodontics begins to show a few loose threads. Any orthodontist will report that most of his patients come to him originally for aesthetic reasons (although few so bizarre as the 68-year-old Port Chester woman who wanted her teeth to be straight when she was "laid out"). But they will also contend that aesthetics is inseparably linked to dental health, achieved by the correction of "malocclusion."

However, some of the more reflective members of the profession, Sidney Horowitz, director of oro-facial development at Colum-

Sister Aimee's mysterious disappearance

BY DAVID LINDSEY

What with Patty Hearst snatched from her Berkeley apartment, editor Reg Murphy from his Atlanta home and J. Paul Getty III from his Rome quarters, kidnaping has seized the national spotlight. Whether the work of a revolutionary radical outfit, a disgruntled misfit or a money-hungry gang, these recent capers have some distance to go to match the bizarre disappearance of celebrated evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson a half century ago.

It all began on a soft May afternoon when rumor of a lost bather brought a covey of searchers and curiosity-seekers to gather along the Pacific shoreline at Ocean Park Beach just below Santa Monica. In clusters of two or three, at first, they stood staring at the sea, shielding their eyes against the sun's slanting rays. The mood was somber, voices muted, faces creased with anxiety. Some, with binoculars and telescopes, scanned the water close to nearby Lick Pier. There, a few hours earlier, the report had it, a lone bather had been glimpsed swimming just beyond the surf.

That swimmer was Aimee Semple McPherson, famed leader of the prosperous Angelus Temple and founder of the fundamentalist Church of the Four Square Gospel. Hours earlier Sister Aimee had come to the beach with her companion-secretary Emma Schaffler. As was her daily habit in good weather, she changed at the nearby Ocean View Hotel, slipped into her green bathing suit and plunged into the water. When later she failed to reappear, Emma made a quick search, then rushed to a phone back at the hotel and broke the news to Aimee's shocked mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy.

Word spread swiftly. By late afternoon the beach was swarming with people. Some came out in curiosity just to gawk and whisper. But serious searchers combed the beach. Divers plumbed the waters close by, checked Lick Pier's pilings. All the rest of that day (May 18, 1926), all that night, all the rest of the week, round-the-clock, searching went on. Lifeguards, police, sheriff's men, trained ocean divers and amateurs fine-combed the sand, the pier's structure and adjacent waters as far as two miles out to sea.

Aviators flew their planes low over the waves staring down from the open cockpits. One day a continuous human chain stretching 10 miles from Santa Monica to Redondo searched the waterfront literally inch by inch. Not a trace. Not even a clue. Police dispatched an all-points missing person bulletin in a desperate stab to get some information on the vanished evangelist. The puzzling disappearance would soon grow into California's strangest mystery. From her obscure origins on a Canadian farm, Aimee Semple McPherson had come a long way in a few years. Her first husband, a missionary, had died in China. Her second marriage to Harold McPherson ended in divorce. Leaving her two small children with her mother, Aimee plunged into a whirlwind career as a traveling evangelist. Across the eastern United States, she ran revival meetings in a patched tent, winning converts by the score. Wherever she preached, she mesmerized listeners with her fiery eloquence, her stunning presence, her dramatic flair. Storming into Los Angeles in 1918, she found a fertile field. In a few years she was a sensation.

By 1926, Aimee at 35 stood at the pinnacle of her career. In Echo Park her driving energy built massive Angelus Temple of the Church of the Four Square Gospel. There, twice every Sunday, radiant Sister Aimee packed in 5,000 enthused, awestruck converts. Week nights the crowds were only slightly smaller.

A vibrant speaker with warm, rich tones, Sister Aimee reveled in showmanship. Operating on the edge of Hollywood she succeeded in out-Hollywooding the movie capital itself in producing spectacles. In dramatizing Biblical episodes, she staged colorful extravaganzas with scores of robed participants breathing life into Moses, Joseph, Jacob, Ruth, Mary Magdalene and the disciples. A 500-voice, white-gowned choir provided a full musical background.

Sister Aimee herself dominated the center of the stage, multi-colored lights caressing her striking costumes. Glowing smile, buoyant voice, exciting words made every hearer tingle that Aimee's message of repentance and redemption was beamed directly at him. Her bubbling effervescence and high-spirited exuberance vibrated through the hall's electrified atmosphere, surrounding her with a seeming halo, casting a magical spell that transported her listeners out of their humdrum, workaday lives.

Mother Kennedy ran the church's financial affairs with a vice-like grip

Followers literally worshipped her as a saint. Her magnetism and charm even flowed across the air waves to countless thousands who listened to regular broadcasts over KFSC, the temple's radio station established in 1924 as Los Angeles' third broadcasting station.

Adjacent to the temple stood the parsonage where Aimee and her children lived with her mother, a firm, level-headed woman who ran the church's financial affairs with a vice-like grip. Mother Kennedy kept such a tight rein that even at 35 Aimee still asked her mother for money when she needed it. Although requests were never refused, the arrangement says much about the women's relationship.

Word of Aimee's disappearance at sea left Mother Kennedy stunned in disbelief. She knew Aimee was a strong swimmer able to negotiate long distances in heavy surf. Even with the story straight from Aimee's companion at the beach, Mother Kennedy could not accept that her daughter had drowned. What had happened? A sudden rip tide? Some strange sea monster? Foul play? She posted a $25,000 reward for Aimee's safe return.

Newsman and police were also puzzled. Nosing around for clues, they asked endless questions. Some fanciful tales circulated. Aimee had been wafted to heaven in a divine chariot that "swung low" over the sea; Jonah fashion she had been swallowed by a whale and would resurface later.

More mundane reports appeared in the press. Aimee had been sighted, they said, many places, ranging from Northern California to Canada to Mexico. Detectives dismissed the rumors as the work of cranks, publicity hounds, overactive imaginations. So did Mother Kennedy, who standing by her daughter's chair at the temple services a week later told the congregation, "Sister Aimee is dead. Whatever you read in the newspapers, unless it is about the finding of the body, do not be alarmed."

"Sister is with Jesus," the congregation responded in unison. "Pray for her." Bible School students, 300 strong, chanted, "O Sea, give up thy dead! O thou mighty waves of the ocean, send us a message from the beloved dead! . . . O God, be with Sister McPherson!"

Sleuthing reporters dug up the name of Kenneth G. Ormiston, who had earlier been chief engineer of the temple's radio station. He was a pleasant man, lively, entertaining, witty. Aimee found him fun to be with, a welcome relief from stuffy temple duties. In the radio room, they often laughed and joked together. Even during temple services Aimee talked with Ormiston over the pulpit intercom, giggling girlishly at his comments. Temple acoustics were such that these exchanges could be heard in the balcony. When Mother Kennedy's warnings failed to stop the chatter, she sought to get Ormiston to leave. After all he had a wife. And gossip and rumors had to be squelched before they started. At length, in January 1926, Aimee set off on a three-month tour of the Holy Land. At the same time Ormiston quit his radio job and left town.

Suddenly in late May, nine days after Aimee vanished, Ormiston reappeared in Los Angeles. He offered his help to Mother Kennedy, who declined it, and to the police. The latter, after lengthy interrogation, concluded that Ormiston had no information that would help illuminate the disappearance. Once more he dropped out of sight.

On June 20, a month after Aimee vanished, the temple held an elaborate memorial service for the departed leader. Mother Kennedy choking back tears, spoke somberly to the faithful: "We do not believe that Sister's body will ever be recovered. Her young body was too precious to Jesus." Temple collection plates that day yielded $40,000, according to newspaper stories. Mother Kennedy counted it at $34,910.

Two days later Mrs. Kennedy received a letter signed "Avengers," responding to her earlier reward offer. The letter, written in curious, rambling style, said Aimee was still alive, would not be harmed if a $500,000 ransom were forthcoming. If not, she would be sold into prostitution in Mexico. To reinforce its point, the note enclosed a lock of dirty auburn hair resembling Aimee's.

That same morning (June 22) Los Angeles Detective Herman Cline arrived at the temple parsonage and gave Mother Kennedy the startling news that Aimee had been found alive in Douglas, Ariz. Within minutes the telephone rang. As Mrs. Kennedy raised the receiver, across the wire came Aimee's clear voice gushing a torrent of excited words. "Don't talk," her mother broke in, cautioning that others were listening and adding she would come to Douglas immediately.

So Mother Kennedy packed up the children, Roberta and Rolf, and caught the next train to Arizona, a pack of newsmen and investigators tagging along. At Calumet Hospital in Douglas mother and daughter had a tearful but happy reunion with much hugging, exclaiming, chatting. For her mother Aimee repeated the account of her disappearance that she had already related to local police and reporters.

It ran this way: On May 18 after emerging from her swim on Ocean Park Beach she had been called by a large, dark-haired woman to come to pray for a sick child in a car waiting nearby. At the car there was no child, but Aimee was shoved into the back seat and chloroformed. A blanket, thrown over her, concealed her from outsiders' eyes. After hours of driving in the car, when she came to, she found herself in a two-story house that she believed was in Mexicali. But since she was tied and kept inside the shade-drawn house she could not be sure of the location.

One of her abductors, called Steve, told her she was being held for $500,000 ransom. Although threatened with being sold into prostitution, she suffered no injury except when Steve held a lighted cigar to her finger in an attempt to extract information. Otherwise she was well fed and not abused. After several weeks the kidnapers blindfolded and gagged her for a long distance drive which ended at a shack in the Mexican desert. Here Aimee was closely guarded round the clock, cooped up in a tiny room, given rough food and an army cot to sleep on. One morning when her guard Rose inexplicably left the house, Aimee, though bound hand and foot, managed to roll off the cot and across the floor where she succeeded in cutting her wrist bonds on the sharp edge of an open can.

She climbed through a window and dropped to the ground. "I could hardly stand when I got to my feet," she reported. "I prayed for help, and it came ... and I started running. I imagine from the position of the sun, this was about 11 o'clock in the morning. It was hot. I stumbled, as I ran, many times. I ran on for four hours. Finally I came to a fence. My hope went up when I finally came to a road."

For a long time she followed the road, sighting no person or dwelling. "Night descended. I was afraid to sleep, but many times I dropped from sheer exhaustion. Big blisters came on my feet and the pain was terrific. I went on and on until I saw a glow in the sky and thought it must be a village or town. It looked like Heaven in the distance. I saw lights flashing. Finally I saw a shadow. Habitation at last! A man came out attracted by the barking of his dogs. He was dressed in BVDs. I begged him to help me."

Shortly she was in the border town of Agua Prieta where Senor Ramon Gonzales, after giving her water, got her across the border into the hospital in neighboring Douglas, Ariz.

There she was taken in tow by nurse Meriba Shinn, who gave her lemonade and got her into bed. Local police officers Bowden and Murchison arrived and questioned her. To him Aimee seemed tired and nervous but spoke clearly and energetically. They noted welts on her wrists which she said were made by the ropes that bound her. They also noted that the clothes she had worn showed not a sign of rips, tears, dirt or perspiration. This they found puzzling for a person having walked 10 hours under the scorching desert sun in temperatures topping 110 degrees. They also noted no particular sunburn on her face. Her shoes, while somewhat worn on the soles, showed practically no scuffs on their sides. The officers, who knew that the terrain through which she walked was rough, rocky, covered with cactus, mesquite and a nasty shrub called catclaw, found this strange. How the clothes could not be torn nor the shoes scuffed mystified the local officers, as it would mystify later investigators.

The next day Aimee was fit enough to leave the hospital. She joined a search party that headed south across the Mexican border to look for the shack where she had been held prisoner. Already a joint American-Mexican posse had combed the area stretching 15 miles east and 10 miles south from Agua Prieta. No such shack as Aimee described could be found. This simply confirmed what old-time ranch hands had already reported about the barren, parched region. There was no such shack. A flicker of doubt crossed the minds of officials.

What the searchers did find was twofold: tire tread marks on a sandy stretch of the dirt road a mile and a half east of Agua Prieta where a car recently had turned around, and farther out a trail of a woman's shoe prints (size 5) leading eastward for a mile, then crossing the road and heading west for a distance toward Agua Prieta. The shoes Aimee had worn fitted the print marks exactly. The shadow of suspicion about Aimee's story darkened.

For three days the search continued. Nothing else turned up. Not a trace of any kidnapers. No other marks. No sign of a shack. Aimee, who had helped for half of the first day's search, was actually of little help.

On June 26 Sister Aimee returned to Los Angeles and a triumphant welcome amid red roses and hallelujahs at Union Station and Angelus Temple where throngs of faithful followers joyfully greeted her as though she was raised from the dead. Three days later a public statement issued by Aimee and her mother assailed skeptics who publicly expressed doubt over her kidnap story. A day later the two women secretly went to Douglas and made their own private search for the desert shack — to no avail.

Within another week Los Angeles Dist. Atty. Asa Keyes called Aimee and Mrs. Kennedy to testify before the grand jury investigating the kidnaping. During the hearings Arizona auto dealer C. A. Pape positively identified Aimee as the woman he had seen in Agua Prieta five days before her reappearance there on June 23. The grand jury failed to indict any kidnapers, whoever they may have been.

Keyes assigned Los Angeles detectives Joseph Ryan and Capt. Herman Cline to the case. Eagerly they latched on to any clues that surfaced. One clue sent them scurrying north to Carmel by the Sea. There they learned that a man calling himself George McIntire had in mid-May rented a seaside cottage putting down a $100 deposit. He drove a new blue Chrysler coupe, resembling one owned by Kenneth Ormiston, former temple radio man. Both the bungalow owner, Henry Benedict, and local real estate woman Daisy Bostick immediately identified McIntire as Ormiston when Ryan showed them the latter's photograph. The occupant of the cottage next to Benedict's reported that on May 19 at 4 a.m. (when she got up to feed her two-week-old baby), she saw a man and woman standing in the next door kitchen and was impressed by the woman's "very beautiful hair piled on top of her head," a style Aimee often used.

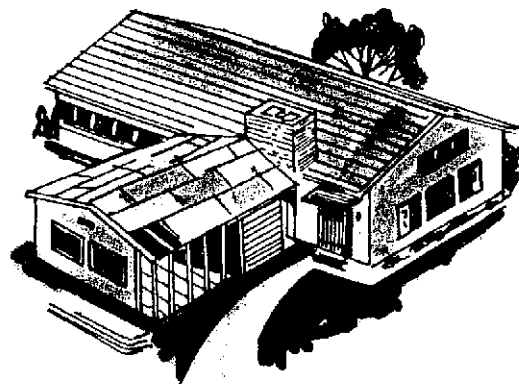

Owner Benedict had stopped by the morning of May 19 and noticed a woman's green bathing suit hanging on the line. In the backyard "McIntire" paid Benedict the balance of the rent and, as a woman came out of the house, introduced her as his wife. Benedict reported he could not see the woman's face well since she wore dark glasses and a bucket-shaped hat "pulled well down over the back of her neck and eyes." She said only "How do you do" and went back in the house. On May 29 Benedict received a letter postmarked Salinas, typewritten and signed "McIntire," saying the tenants had suddenly been called east to New York and asking for a refund to be mailed care of the Pennsylvania Hotel.

At his cottage Benedict found the tenants had left behind numerous articles including a portable radio, some groceries, some Los Angeles and San Francisco newspapers, hairpins, a new Bible, a handwritten grocery slip, five books, each marked with a small cross inside the cover. Benedict, however, said he could not identify the woman as Mrs. McPherson. But two local tradesmen who had delivered wood and groceries identified Aimee as the woman in the cottage who received the deliveries.

Checking out other reports and piecing them together, Ryan and Cline put together this skein of developments: Aimee disappeared from the Ocean Park Beach May 18 about 4 p.m. At Benedict cottage at 4 a.m. May 19, a man and woman arrived (Ocean Park to Carmel is about a 12-hour drive). Newspaper and radio reports on May 26 announced that Ormiston was being sought for questioning (the Carmel cottage had a radio).

On May 27 Ormiston appeared in Los Angeles and talked with detectives (it's an overnight train ride from Northern California to Los Angeles). On May 28-30 the St. Mark Hotel (Oakland) register showed a "K. Gladstone" was registered there. On May 28 Ormiston had reclaimed his blue Chrysler at Highway Garage in Salinas. On May 28 an attendant in Salinas reported putting gas in the blue Chrysler occupied by a man (thought to be Ormiston) and a woman, not identified. A hotel clerk in San Luis Obispo (south from Salinas) revealed that shortly after dawn on May 29 a "Frank Gibson" registered with a woman companion and checked out that evening. About 11 p.m. on May 29 an enterprising local reporter, Wallace Moore, had stopped the blue Chrysler on the northern outskirts of Santa Barbara. He positively identified Ormiston as the driver and was certain that the woman with him, whom he could not see well, was Aimee. (Later he would be not so sure, saying the light was bad and the woman kept her face turned away.)

Did the evidence go down the toilet?

Ryan and Cline returned to Los Angeles convinced they had a strong case. At Angelus Temple Sister Aimee, who in dramatizing her persecutions as a Christian martyr being tormented by devilish officials, had won the full backing of her congregation, now refused to be fingerprinted (for comparison with prints on articles from the cottage) or to give handwriting samples (for comparison with the grocery slip writing).

From this point on, despite numerous promising leads that cropped up, the case disintegrated into a comic opera shambles. A mystery witness, Lorraine Wiseman, appeared to inform Dist. Atty. Keyes that her sister from Chicago was the woman who had stayed with Ormiston in the Carmel cottage. Later she would repudiate her own account saying she had been paid by Aimee and Mrs. Kennedy to fabricate the story. (Still later she was arrested on a bad check charge.)

During subsequent grand jury hearings Detective Ryan was suddenly dismissed from the case when the grocery slip evidence, thought to be in Aimee's handwriting, mysteriously disappeared. A juror was suspected of having taken it to a courthouse bathroom with her and flushed it down the toilet. Several weeks later Detective Cline, after arrest for drunken driving, was suspended from duty. The Carmel witnesses proved less certain on the stand in identifying Aimee as Ormiston's companion at the cottage, as did Santa Barbara reporter Moore. Ironically Benedict, the cottage owner, died of a heart attack in Carmel a short time later.

Toward the end of the hearings sensational new evidence appeared in the form of a blue steamer trunk containing a woman's clothes. Earlier the trunk had been shipped from Los Angeles to Florida and then to New York for a "Ralph Stringer" at the Cumberland Hotel. After he had checked out, "Stringer" was firmly identified as Ormiston, and the hotel forwarded the trunk to D. A. Keyes. Its contents, revealed melodramatically in court, turned out to be gowns, dresses, negligees, custommade shoes from a Los Angeles shop frequently patronized by Aimee — all in Aimee's sizes and two dresses bearing the mark of a Glendale Boulevard dry cleaning shop near the temple. Aimee scoffed that such articles must have belonged to "a circus performer." But the court was impressed.

On Nov. 3 the judge ruled that four persons — Aimee McPherson, Mrs. Kennedy, Ormiston and Mrs. Wiseman — should be held for trial. Upon hearing these words, an ill Aimee, who had been carried into court in a chair, leaped to her feet indignantly protesting her innocence. Shortly she would demand a speedy trial to provide her "absolute vindication."

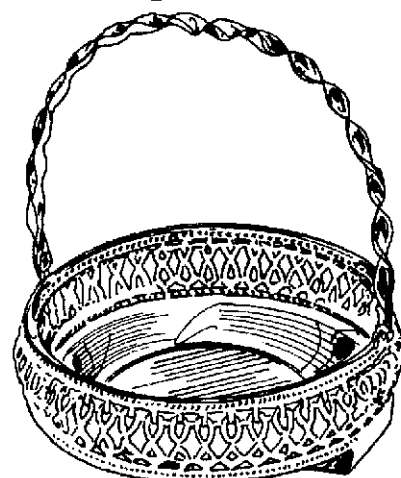

In early December Ormiston's blue Chrysler was discovered parked in an Oakland garage. A week later Ormiston himself was arrested in Chicago and escorted to Los Angeles, where he was formally charged and held for trial. After release on bond, Ormiston ridiculed all attempts to associate him with Aimee in the Carmel cottage. He freely admitted to having been there, denied Aimee's presence and said that out of gallantry for his lady companion's reputation he could not name her.

All through December pressures mounted on D. A. Keyes from all sides. The city's federation of churches called for a speedy trial to determine whether a "terrible" crime against Mrs. McPherson had been committed or whether the whole episode was "a fraud and hoax." Others in the community thought Aimee had suffered enough public humiliation, demanded that the case be dropped.

On Jan. 10, 1927, the last designated by the judge to begin the trial, a haggard, harassed Keyes appeared in court. He stated forthrightly that the evidence had become so garbled and snarled in contradictions, deceptions and rebuttals from many witnesses that the case could no longer be prosecuted "with honor and with any reasonable hope of success." He requested that the court quash the charges, though he held no brief for Aimee, adding that, "The fact that this defendant fabricated a kidnaping story, or that she spent time at Carmel, are not in themselves offenses of which this court can entertain jurisdiction. Reputable witnesses have testified sufficiently concerning both the Carmel incident and the return of Mrs. McPherson from her so-called kidnaping adventure to be judged by the only court of her jurisdiction — the court of public opinion." The judge granted the request. The case was dropped and defendants discharged.

In its aftermath the case slipped quickly from the banner headlines of the newspapers, whose circulation dropped back to normal levels. The troubled district attorney resumed prosecuting more prosaic cases. Ormiston, divorced from his wife, disappeared from public view. Sister Aimee, after a triumphant preaching "tour of vindication" through the east, returned to the temple where she drew even larger audiences. Today, almost a half century later, the mystery of her disappearance from the sea to the desert remains still unsolved. □

Surfing

By JOANNE NORRIS

It's a world of the individual. No one depends on anyone but himself.

"It's just you and the waves, you and your board," says a man who has been part of the surfing scene for more than 40 years.

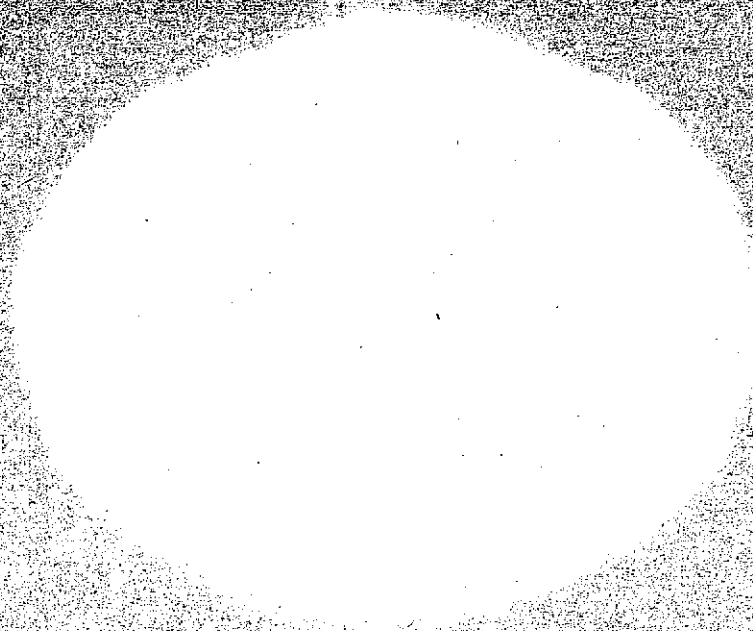

A rage in 1960, it's no longer so trendy today. Tennis is the fad sport now. But the number of people who still think surfing is greater than girls, more soaring than cycling, more appetizing than a salad of bean sprouts and alfalfa is large enough to jam the beaches and fill the water with bobbling wet suits on any nice day, and many that would have to be rated lousy.

As you leave Long Beach and head toward Huntington Beach, the area's surfing mecca, the highway is lined with cars, many of them the vans surfers prefer for carrying their boards, themselves and their friends. Even before school was out last June there was a gang. And the closer to Huntington the heavier the snake of autos becomes.

Out in the water, still blurred by fog and chilly from the night's shadows, are dark blobs, the suited surfers looking like seagoing creatures — seals and sea lions at play. The black figures are heavily clustered on either side of the Huntington Pier whose very pilings have helped make the stretch a surfer's dream. The large pilings cause a flow of sand up and around, and this flow has molded the sandbars against which the good waves — the really choice ones — form.

The thick pilings also helped create the beach, explains George Farquhar, a surfer since 1927 and managing editor and co-publisher of Huntington Beach's weekly News.

When Farquhar arrived in Huntington Beach, surfing spots were selected by how many good-looking chicks hung out there, a criterion not ignored today. Huntington in the 20s wasn't the "in" spot particularly. In fact, Newport Harbor was better. "It was a helluva surfing spot," Farquhar recalls. The old mouth of the Santa Ana River was shifted later by development.

Cynthia Buzzard is one of a small group of serious women surfers.

George Farquhar, 60, has been surfing on and off since 1927.

In the late 20s and early 30s, surfers made their own boards. Farquhar made his first one when he was a high school sophomore, and the end product, laminated balsam and redwood, was heavier than he was. He weighed 75 pounds and the board 80. "I couldn't even lift it," he says. But he dragged it dutifully into the ocean and learned to surf by watching the other guys. There were no rudders or skegs on the boards of that era, and they were not only cumbersome but hard to direct.

Not long after that, Farquhar just gave up on boards altogether. He's a slight man still, so he took to belly boards and body surfing. It wasn't until 10 years ago, when he was 50, that he got one of the new light boards and stood up again.

Now, with a job he can leave from time to time, he surfs three to seven times a week. If you drop in at the News office on Main Street, you are apt to find him with wet hair hanging down his forehead.

Like almost everybody else, he surfs year around, but when he first moved into Huntington with his father, who bought the newspaper, and two brothers, there wasn't much surfing done in winter.

The wet suit, water gear that comes in a variety of styles, is what made surfing possible during any weather. The suits, from just jacket sleeves and vests to Long Johns (overalls without sleeves), Short Johns and short spring suits, are not cheap, ranging from about $16 for the vests to about $50 and up for the full suits. But they have made the sport more popular, as has the light foam board with its resin covering. (The new short boards sell for around $90 and the longer ones up to $185 or so.) Unlike the old laminated boards, the foam ones don't soak up water when "dinged," surfer's parlance for knicked.

Before World War II surfing was primitive. There were swim fins in the late 30s, but they weren't anything special. During the war, with the development of underwater demolition teams, came better fins, the wet suit and the use of foam. Some of that foam was converted into boards, and surfing climbed out of the Stone Age and started building up to a craze.

About 1960 everybody from 15 to 30 surfed, or pretended he did, and the surf bunny, who sat on the beach and looked beautiful while she got a tan and combed her long (usually blonde) hair, was the groupie of the day.

A new language developed. Some of it like surf's up and hang 10 has been incorporated into conversation and commerce (The Hang 10 sports clothes line) to such an extent no one remembers it was once esoteric.

Taking gas, another term for wiping out; stoked, turned on; pearling, when the nose of the board goes under; kuk, a novice; gremmie, a very young novice; hodad or highway surfer, a phony; fanny dippers, people who swim instead of surf; really bitchin', great; are still around. But the wooden station wagons, the woodys, are a thing of the past.

In the 60s just having a surf board atop your car was in itself a status thing, says surfer Cynthia Buzzard of Long Beach. Her older sister, who was into surfing then, drove her to school with a board on the car. "It was a big deal."

Farquhar thinks surfers were more inclined to be beach bums in those days, batting around doing nothing but riding the waves. Today's surfers, except the ones still in school, usually work in the surf shops where the boards are made or sold or where the clothes and other accouterments are available. Others staff the health food bars or restaurants, still the favorite gustatory haunts of the surfing crowd.

Although youth is still breaking away from the establishment, Farquhar says young people are facing reality more in the 70s. They are producing, not just bumming, and are taking a more practical look at life.

"I live and sit in a goldfish bowl," he continues. "And I see them all." (Indeed, as he has a late lunch on Main Street, a number of young surfers and surf bunnies give a greeting as they go by.) "You still have your characters who like to get out there and scream and yell — but they are maybe one per cent."

Surfing is done more by the real aficionados now, he adds. Even the competition is down played by some of them.

"There are surfers who compete and surfers who just like to surf," says Jeff Bernarbe, 23, who recently dropped out of Long Beach State University and is working in one of the Huntington Beach surf shops. He leaves little doubt which of the two he prefers.

Jeff, like Cynthia Buzzard, grew up in Long Beach and took to the waves when he was a kid. "During high school I surfed more than I was in school," he says.

Surfing is still very important to him although he sometimes goes two to three months without doing it. It's a strong feeling—a life focus—that's hard for him to put in words.

Cynthia Buzzard, also 23, is truly a member of a minority in surfing circles. Although dozens of young women are caught up in the surfing scene, not many are serious surfers themselves.

Says Farquhar, "Women don't surf because they frighten easily, they don't want to get their hair wet and they don't like cold water. They say, 'I think I'll go to shore where I'll be treated like a woman' because they aren't treated that way by the waves," he adds with a feminist-be-damned attitude.

Miss Buzzard doesn't fit this description. But she knows the attitude. In fact, she and some of her friends occasionally have fun with groups of male surfers, who almost inevitably fail to take them seriously. After receiving a lot of advice, Cynthia takes off. "And are they surprised," says a friend and former roommate.

Cynthia admits surfing takes strength and courage. "It can be dangerous." The waves are rough and flying boards a hazard.

Because there are so few of them, girl surfers develop a lot of camaraderie, she explains. They often surf together although she says surfing is a great way "to meet men." And the men they meet are attractive.

"Men who surf have the best-looking physiques because they take good care of them—selves," she says, "Of course, there are a lot of dopers too."

Miss Buzzard also has seen surfing change a lot in the 10 years that she's been into it. "You used to buy boards according to your height like skis. But like skis they are getting shorter." The shorter boards are less stable but faster, she says.

One advantage for her is that surfers don't knee paddle with the shorter boards and she's gotten rid of the calcium deposits, surf knots, she used to have on her knees.

Among her favorite surfing spots is the present Santa Ana River mouth, redirected from its original spot, and the mouth of the jetty in Seal Beach. She also likes Huntington, Newport Pier and Laguna. San Diego is good and Baja even better. Another good spot is from Point Conception south for about 10 miles. The McAllister Ranch area north of Santa Barbara between Gaviota and Jalama, is the best place she's ever surfed.

Surfing is done as far north as Santa Cruz. As a matter of fact, the whole Southern California coast has been wild with surfers since the Gidget movies when Frankie Avalon and Annette Funicello set everybody off in search of the perfect wave.

And nearly every surfer complains about the same thing: the cancer of civilization crowding in on them. They feel pushed and they don't like it. That's why Baja has so much appeal, although it's getting popular too. Restrictions, regulations, the concessions to development, all make the surfer's hackles rise.

George Farquhar and a committee of Huntington Beach surfing buffs petitioned the City of Huntington Beach a couple of years ago to abandon the surfing restrictions imposed between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. Now, under a rule modification, the lifeguard on duty decides when people may surf. If surfers outnumber swimmers, the surfers prevail. Restrictions elsewhere vary from place to place.

Parking fees and parking tickets are other irritants surfers find hard to accept. They are just not part of the freedom that is surfing.

The surfing community around Huntington Beach is close knit. Its members see each other a lot at night, Bernarbe says. They have frequent parties, but not often big ones with outsiders.

In fact, outsiders are just that — out. Bernarbe wrote a sociology paper on the surfing culture, who is admitted and how. A must for entree is the ability to surf well, he says. If people can do that and are unobtrusive, they will usually be accepted.

If on the other hand, they come on too strong in their Hawaiian shirts and mirror sunglasses, they'll be shunned.

The regular crowd chafes under the annual influx of vagabond surfers. Bernarbe refers to them as "people from San Bernardino," although they may come from any place. Kuks are treated to the hard sell. "We get even by selling them stuff," he says.

There are plenty of stores around for this purpose. Up and down PCH and Main Street especially. Egg Heaven, Capri Cocktails and El Don Liquor store are the only nonsurfing places in the block of PCH between Fifth and Main. Infinity Surfboards, the Greek Surf Shop, Jack's Surfboards, Petrillo Handcrafted Surfboards all are there.

Along Main are Wild Oats, the Good Earth and Gospel Swamp for food; the Great Music Revival is there as is Viva la Difference custom bikinis. Back a block, next door to the Greyhound Station, is the Ambrosiac health food restaurant which features, among other things, Possum Pie for $2.25. It's a medley of baked broccoli, tomatoes, raisins, cheese and butternut squash over brown rice. Serenity dessert (75 cents) is composed of almonds, figs, dates, apples, rice, cream cheese, sour cream, yogurt, honey and black cherry kefir.

The Surf Theater on Fifth Street, naturally, shows surfing movies, often featured with a nonsurfing film of some kind. Pacific Vibrations shared the bill with Concert for Bangladesh. Surfers do like surfing movies even the Funicello-Avalon beach party flicks. They like the sport so well, they tolerate these films, although they prefer the serious ones, of course.

The surfing community has spawned a religious house in its midst. Philadelphia House, named for the Church of Philadelphia in the Book of Revelations, sits among the surfing shops on PCH.

Although the 20 residents (most from 19 to 25) mingle with the surfers, they usually are too busy for much time in the water, says Elder Sam Steele, a graduate of Long Beach State University and a former psychiatric social worker.

Operated under the auspices of Santa Ana's Calvary Chapel, Philadelphia House has about half men and half women who have either been referred there by Calvary Chapel or by friends and some who have dropped in off the street.

Steele emphasizes it's not a flop house, but a serious ministry with a highly structured daily program of work, study and prayer. The men work outside and turn over their pay checks to the house. Women have a choice:

They may either take a job or do the house-keeping chores within the two-story home. Late afternoons are spent studying religious tapes. A lot of time is spent in prayer, says the evangelistic Steele.

Steele looks like a surfer with the same golden tan and healthy good looks so many have. The surfing life obviously is good physically as well as spiritually.

"The ocean has been very good to me," says Farquhar, who has a 133/80 blood pressure. "Physically and mentally, it has kept me healthy and sharp. As a body conditioner, it's No. 1 because it exercises all parts of the body gently."

"Another thing I do (besides surf) is to take an occasional swallow of ocean water. It has natural iodine, you know."

He also is a health food fan. He begins each day with two glasses of freshly squeezed orange juice and a breakfast of rolled oats, wheat germ, honey and half of an avocado.

The mental relaxation surfing provides is an additional help in the blood pressure department.

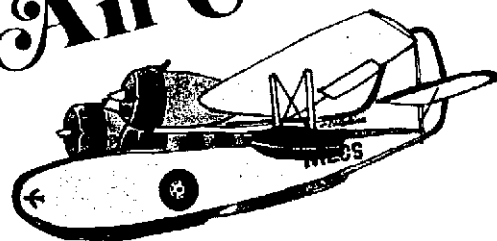

"When you're sitting out there waiting for a wave," he says, "you're not worrying about business or taxes."

That perfect wave surfers wait for is one that curves over the back so they're in a tube but can always see an open door, a way out. There must be a challenge to it, a touch-and-go situation.

"A good wave," says Cynthia Buzzard, "can make your whole day. If you surf in the morning, the rest of your day is just fantastic. It feels good."

Joanne Norris is associate editor of Southland Sunday.

Good news for good drivers:

Millions more now qualify for GEICO's low insurance rates.

Are you one of them?

All auto insurance rates are not the same. For years, GEICO has been offering low-cost auto insurance to government employees and other special groups—and now these same low rates are available to all good drivers.

Are you a good driver? Then you too may be entitled to GEICO's famous low-cost auto insurance. You don't have to be "accident-free" to be a good driver! On the contrary our statistics show that 42 out of every 100 GEICO policyholders filed a claim last year.

GEICO is the company that was originally created to sell auto insurance at lower rates to government employees. But now GEICO has opened its rolls to all drivers.

If you don't "shop" for auto insurance, it could cost you hundreds of dollars over the years

Many GEICO policyholders, depending on where they live, save each year on the rates charged by many other companies for the coverage provided by the Family Automobile Policy. GEICO keeps its rates down by insuring "good risk" drivers, and reducing sales expenses.

Savings plus outstanding claim service

GEICO not only saves you money, but in addition its 3,500 professional claim representatives located throughout the U.S. and Canada are ready to serve you twenty-four hours a day, wherever you may need help. The fact that they settle claims fairly and promptly is confirmed by GEICO's most enthusiastic salesmen—its more than 2,000,000 satisfied policyholders. They continually recommend GEICO to their friends, neighbors and business associates.

Best's Insurance Reports, the noted insurance authority, assigned GEICO a general policyholder rating of "A (Excellent)" and the highest possible financial rating: "AAAAA."

Because GEICO is licensed everywhere in the U.S. you are protected wherever you drive in the U.S. and Canada. Even if you should be involved in an out-of-state accident where one of the new "no-fault" laws applies, GEICO will automatically provide you with any additional coverages required by the law of that state. Also, your GEICO policy provides coverage if you are the driver of a car pool.

What's more, GEICO offers you a wide variety of convenient payment plans to suit your budget.

Let us tell you how much we may save you

GEICO has been providing low rates and high quality service for over 35 years. And now, if you have a good driving record, you may qualify too!

Call or visit one of our convenient local offices or mail the coupon below, and we'll tell you how much we may save you for the same coverage you have now. There's no obligation and no salesman will call on you.

It was never sensible to spend more than you have to on auto insurance. But it's especially true today, with your budget being squeezed on all sides. Take advantage of one of the rewards of being a good driver and mail in the coupon below now!

Note: Even if you do not meet GEICO's underwriting requirements due to your driving record or other rating factors, you may still obtain high-quality protection and the same reliable country-wide claim service from our affiliate, Criterion Insurance Company, at somewhat higher rates ...and with a wide variety of payment plans to suit your budget. Criterion is licensed in the District of Columbia and every state except Massachusetts.

Benny Goodman takes five at 65

BY KAY HOLMES

Benny Goodman doesn't like to talk about himself. In fact he is about as gossipy as a clam.

It's not that he's shy exactly. Anyone who has had a film made of his life, cooperated on several television specials and endured endless interviews is not a raving recluse.

It's just that he doesn't see anything — well — fascinating in it all.

Let others pour on the superlatives like Living Legend, King of Swing, International Ambassador with a Clarinet. He just laughs and shrugs and goes on doing what he's always done, namely playing the clarinet and digging it quietly.

Benny Goodman is a man of no pretension. He enjoys his success to be sure and the penthouse in New York and the antique-filled, country home in Connecticut it brought him. But somehow you feel that if it were all blown away tomorrow, Benny Goodman's self-image would not be altered.

He is, he says, a man who has done his thing to the best of his ability and there he rests his case. He admires people, like good carpenters, who have done the same.

We met in the pouring rain at his white frame, 200-year-old home outside Stamford, Conn. He produced an umbrella and led the way quickly through the beautiful garden his wife nurtures, past the swimming pool, to his sound-wired studio.

He spends a lot of time in that studio, which was once a schoolhouse and still has its original beams and floor.

It's a comfortable place with lots of warm wood about, nary a strident chord or color. There's a grand piano in the corner, a semi-circular sofa in another, a leather chair, a rocking chair and two antique chests, one of which houses his stereo. And of course his clarinet, polished even in repose, and a music stand.

Anyone looking for The Great Benny Goodman would be amused by this place. There are few books, records or memorabilia about. He has drawers full of awards and tributes and that's exactly where he keeps them. The only thing which he pointed out as a treasure, apart from his seven-year-old clarinet, was a bound book of instruction, which belonged to his first and only music teacher, Franz Schoepp.

Inside the book was an inscription, which Goodman showed, saying, "I'm an old sentimental slob."

The inscription read:

This book belonged to my first teacher Franz Schoepp. In the year 1919 when I studied with him he was 70-years-old and I was 10. These studies went on intermittently for about two years and that was the extent of my formal music education. At this time despite my extreme youth I was already making personal appearances playing jazz which was my first love, although this was obviously frowned on by Mr. Schoepp.

About 1950 one of Mr. Schoepp's grandsons presented this book to me saying his grandfather wanted me to have it. To this day this method by Carl Baermann remains one of the definitive instruction books for all clarinetists. Looking back over the years I honestly believe that had it not been for these lessons I would have never been attracted to classical literature many years later.

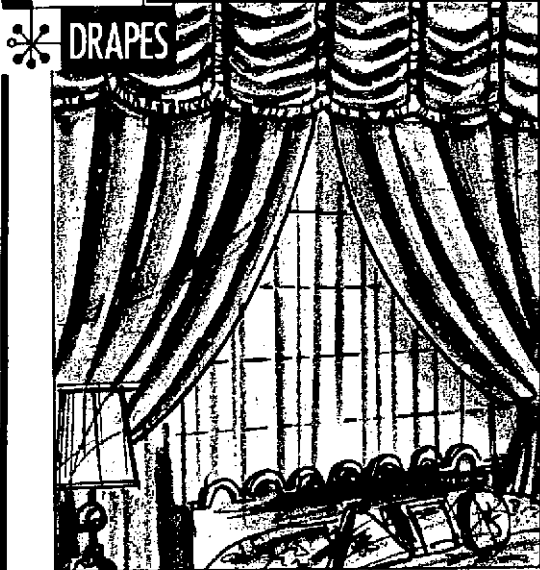

Benny Goodman 1966

As he put the book fondly back in place, I asked him what he had done with his old clarinet. "I gave it to some school or other," he said.

No, he is not a saver. "I don't go in for treasures," he said. "The only reason I like antiques is because of the craftsmanship." Not, he implied, because they were old and valuable.

Craftsmanship is a quality which he very much admires. In everything including music. And that determination to get it right — every time — made him a legendary figure in both jazz and classical music.

It also earned him a reputation as a notorious disciplinarian. From the time the first Benny Goodman Band was formed in 1934, musicians remember well the endless hours of rehearsal and the ominous glare of B.G. when a clinker spoiled a passage. That glare is known in legend as the Goodman Ray.

"If you're interested in music, you can't slop around," says Benny Goodman.

But he's never thought of himself as a disciplinarian. "If somebody gets a reputation as being a disciplinarian in the music business I think it's rather slanted. What is the norm? To be undisciplined? I don't think so.

"I think you have to pay attention to details in any endeavor. If you want to get something done properly, then it's time consuming.

"There were no rules in the band. Certain things were just understood. If I called a rehearsal at 10 in the morning I expected everyone to be there. I didn't expect them to arrive at 10:30 or 11."

Other musicians have said that Benny Goodman practiced 15 times more than the whole band combined. And even today, at 65, he admits he's pretty strict with himself.

He gets up at 6:30 each morning and after a healthy breakfast, he goes to his studio to practice.

"I don't practice as much as I used to," he said. "But I like to practice each morning unless I'm going into New York for business. Classical music keeps me in shape mentally and physically. Jazz comes to me like second nature.

"You hear about jazz musicians who want to go out and jam all the time. That's practice really. You can do that yourself if you discipline yourself. If you practice, practice as if you're on the stage. Give as much as you can right here, right during practice. I like to play when I play."

After he has practiced, Benny Goodman goes for a swim, at home during the warm weather, at the YMCA or any other place he can find a warm pool in the winter. He likes to go for walks in the country. But mostly, he said, he "just keeps busy doing nothing."

Which is rather hard to believe. Particularly as a little bit later he said the band was "always on tour."

Next week he would be going to Boston to play with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, he had two benefit concerts coming up ("Yeah, I'm a do-gooder") and he will be giving several concerts this summer including one at Detroit's Meadowbrook.

"We've played more in the last year or two than we have in many, many years."

Benny Goodman has not been surprised by the revival of swing and that sweet, subtle, chamber music jazz which is his hallmark.

But he was kind of delighted to see the teen-age sons and daughters of his old fans liking the sound just as much as their parents, when he played at New York's prestigious Rainbow Grill.

He bridged the generation gap again this summer with a concert in Central Park.

Unfortunately, Benny Goodman is not one for long, droll reminiscences. He tends to think that what you've done today is more important than what you did yesterday or years earlier.

And if he's prodded he says, "As you can see, I'm not very forthright. I'm not outgoing when it comes to speaking about myself. What are you going to do? Brag about yourself? Tell all the nice things you've done or all the hasty things you've done?"

"I like to be objective and it's hard to be objective about yourself. I was supposed to be an autobiography for someone. I finally had to give the whole damn thing up. Some people love to talk about themselves but I'm not one of them."

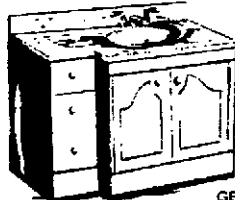

He is a very private person. Getting him to talk about himself is like persuading an oyster to part with its pearl. With a bit of coaxing he didn't tell all — but he did throw out a few choice morsels.

Born Benjamin David Goodman, the eighth of 11 children to an immigrant family in Chicago, he never decided to play the clarinet. It just happened.

If he'd been 20 pounds heavier and two inches taller at the age of nine, the world might have known him as a tuba or trumpet player. For he was loaned his first clarinet from a synagogue in Chicago and preference was given in order of size and age.

Benny and two older brothers went to the synagogue to get their instruments. Harry, the oldest and biggest, got a tuba; Freddie got a trumpet; Benny, youngest and smallest, got third choice, a clarinet.

"I seemed to have accepted the clarinet as part of my life from the moment it was put into my hands and I popped it into my mouth," he said.

"As soon as my father thought I showed some promise, he sent me to an old German teacher named Franz Schoepp, who was a rigid classical disciplinarian.

"When I was 10 years old I played a Haydn transcription in a small concert with a little girl accompanying me on the piano. About the same time, I made my first appearance at the Central Park Theater doing a take-off on Ted Lewis playing When My Baby Smiles At Me.

Thus began his schizophrenic career — one in which he excelled in both jazz and classical music.

His first job as a clarinetist was aboard a Lake Michigan excursion ship. It was there that trumpeter Bix Beiderbecke, mistaking the lad wearing spectacles and knee pants for a meddlesome brat fooling with the band's instruments, threatened to pull his ears if he didn't go back to his mama.

At 16 he was famous and Ben Pollack sent for him to join his band in Los Angeles. While he was with Ben Pollack another young, aspiring musician, Glenn Miller, joined the orchestra and the two became buddies.

"We spent a lot of time together as youngsters," Benny Goodman recalled. "We went on dates together, we went to ballgames together, we played touch football together. And we lived together when we first came to New York."

That was when Goodman was 20. "We both did freelance work, as sidemen for radio and records. Glenn and I did some recording together."

Goodman also lived with Jimmy Dorsey at one time in New York. "We made a pact — first one to the phone gets the job."

He speaks of the legendary figures with a good deal of fondness. He said Louie Armstrong was the greatest instrumentalist, Duke Ellington was more of a composer, Miller was known for his arrangements and Dorsey was a good instrumentalist.

He was closer to Miller than any of the others. "I gave him the money to get married," he said with a chuckle. "I'd forgotten about it until many years later when Glenn became famous and he said, 'Here's the money I owe you.' I didn't know what money he was talking about. I'd forgotten about it completely."

Benny Goodman's own fortunes were made one night in 1935 when his band played at the Palomar Ballroom in Los Angeles. They were at the end of a disastrous cross-country tour and their spirits couldn't have been lower. The management would have cancelled the performance if it had been able to.

Instead of bombing as expected, Benny Goodman's Band gave birth to the Swing Era that night. The crowds stopped dancing and flocked to the bandstand, listening to the B.G. sound and they cheered.

The same year Goodman introduced a new dimension to swing in the form of subtle chamber jazz played by the first Benny Goodman Trio: Goodman on clarinet, Teddy Wilson on piano and Gene Krupa on drums. The trio became a quartet in 1936 with the addition of Lionel Hampton on vibraphone.

With his trio and then his quartet, Benny Goodman quietly, naturally integrated jazz. Before then black and white musicians had never appeared in engagements together, although they had recorded together.

"It seemed so natural that we didn't have any problem. We even played in Dallas. I guess there was a reaction, some managers were watchful in the beginning, but there wasn't much because we weren't uncomfortable. We were so busy doing what we were doing — playing.

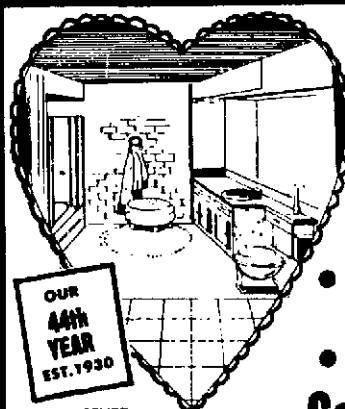

"Frankly we didn't go down to have a confrontation. We told the managers what we were bringing and if that wasn't all right we wouldn't go. We didn't miss any places. Of course in those days they had different rules. Blacks had to stay in different hotels. The most important thing to us was playing."

In his book Really The Blues, Mezz Mezzrow said that the whites who excelled in jazz were members of minority groups themselves. But Benny Goodman doesn't agree.

"Bix Beiderbecke was one of the great players and he was a WASP," he said. "I don't think there's too much in that theory myself. I suppose if someone comes from a minority and works hard to get some place

Goodman

He assumed a new role in the 1960s—international ambassador with clarinet you can say that's the reason, but I don't think so.

"As a rule I don't think great artists come from the establishment, but if they do I don't think it has any bearing on how successful they are."

Whatever the reason for his success, Benny Goodman speaks fondly of Detroit in those years of swing. "It was a great mecca in those days. I remember driving all night once to hear Bix Biederbecke at the Graystone Ballroom. Some of the great jazz musicians have come from Detroit; Ordell Gray was one."

"There was a great spirit in those days — and there were all the lakes around Detroit with ballrooms. Come to think of it there used to be a great clarinet repairman in Detroit."

An unprecedented jazz concert in Carnegie Hall in 1938 marked the zenith of his early career. The concert has been immortalized in records that have grossed more than a million dollars in sales.

In 1940 he demonstrated his right to play in Carnegie Hall as a concert artist when he commissioned a Bartok work entitled Contrasts and recorded it for Columbia.

He commissioned clarinet concertos by Aaron Copeland and Paul Hindemith and performed them and works by Mozart, Debussy, Brahms and other masters with leading symphony orchestras and chamber groups.

He spent two years in Hollywood in the early 40s and starred in films such as The Powers Girl, Stage Door Canteen, and The Gang's All Here. All of which he'd rather forget.

"I hated it," he said. "I did it with the expectation that it might be fun but it wasn't. But you got paid pretty well." And he had been married in 1942 to Alice Hammond Duckworth. A year later their daughter Rachel was born; Benjie was born in 1946.

"It just wasn't the media for music. We added something to the box office but I don't think they were particularly interested in the music. I rather disliked living in California. I prefer the East, it's as simple as that."

Nor did he have any kind words for The Benny Goodman Story made in 1955. "It stinks. The story was rather nebulous, I don't think it meant anything and the actors weren't any good."

"I didn't have anything to do with it really. I played the music but that was it. What did I know about making movies? I left it to the experts. Some things just don't work out like you'd like them to."

But a lot of things have worked out for Benny Goodman. In the 60s he assumed a new role — that of International Ambassador with a Clarinet — and he excelled at it.

He talked about his tour of the Soviet Union in 1962 with a lot of enthusiasm.

"It was fascinating for me. My parents came from Russia so there was a familiarity about it or at least you imagined a familiarity. There was an excellent reaction to our music. Although they weren't allowed to listen to jazz, they had smuggled it in."

"At first people were suspicious of us. They thought we were spies. Probably every place we stayed was bugged. But when they found out there wasn't anything we wanted, they warmed up. I used to take my guides with me for a walk."

Benny Goodman met and liked Nikita Krushchev. "He was a straightforward person. I thought he was a nice guy but you couldn't say that at the time. OK, so he didn't like the boom-boom of jazz. Eisenhower didn't like jazz either. He liked Home, Home on the Range."

"When Krushchev said he didn't like jazz, I said that's your privilege. But you've got to let people play it. Artists have to be allowed to work at their art, otherwise you wouldn't have a Pushkin Museum."

On another tour Benny Goodman jammed with the King of Thailand, King Phumiphol Aduldej.

"He'd gone to school in the States so it wasn't as if he was brought up in a cocoon. He played the alto saxophone and for a King, he was pretty good."

Benny Goodman laughed heartily when he remembered calling a rehearsal in Thailand and someone protested "But we're supposed to be playing with the King."

"Screw the King," I said, "We're going to have a rehearsal!"

When the King came to the U.S. a few years later, Benny Goodman threw a party for him at his penthouse in New York. "He played and we all had a good time. There was a certain amount of protocol but it wasn't all that formal. I think during the evening, while he was playing, someone even said, 'Hey, King, what's next?'"

Once he got started, Benny Goodman didn't seem to mind all that talking. And he said with a triumphant twinkle in his eye, "See, I'm giving out like a sieve."

He consistently fenced abstract questions; for instance, what delights you? "Being able to get up in the morning." What would you like to change? "It's too late now." What is your philosophy? "I don't know how things add up, I'm still counting."

But he said it all good-humoredly with a smile or a chuckle and playful, impish eye.

He has, he says, a very close family, "judging from the telephone bills." Rachel lives in Sacramento, is married and is working on a Ph.D. in English literature. His younger daughter, Benjie, is an artist and lives in Paris.

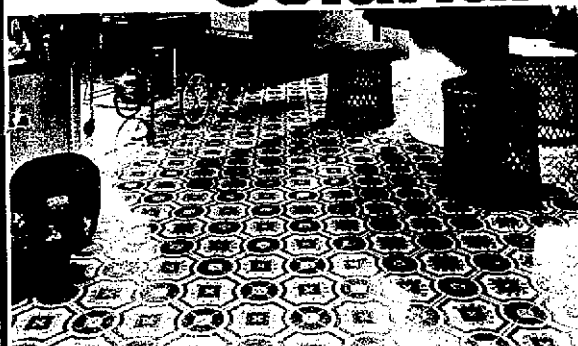

He said the picture behind me was one of Benjie's. When I said it was good, he said, "Hmmm" noncommittally.

Benny Goodman has never been a night owl. Even when he played in ballrooms across the country, if he finished at 1 a.m. he was in bed by 2.

Now he doesn't have the slightest desire to seek entertainment outside his home. Not even an evening of jazz.

"I don't listen to the big bands much," he said. "You have to stay up too late and I don't like to stay up that late."

Consequently he didn't have any comments on big bands playing today such as Thad Jones-Mel Lewis, Woody Hermann, Buddy Rich or Don Ellis.

"I sound as if I hate music. I like to listen to it. But you can't be comfortable listening to music these days. People are playing in huge goddamn places with too many people around. Oh well, that's me squawking again. If you really wanted to hear music you'd go anywhere."

Although he hasn't been to a movie in years, he did venture out to see The Sting. He pronounced it very good and even liked the music. "Who is this guy Redford?" he asked. "All of a sudden he's the hottest thing since 7-Up."

Most of the time he leads a quiet, "normal life." He spends a lot of time at home with his wife Alice and sometimes a few friends. He likes books and paintings and classical music which floods his studio when he turns on his stereo. (Of all his works he's proudest of the Mozart Concerto he recorded with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.)

"I do a lot of fishing," he volunteered suddenly. "Salmon fishing. I travel a long way — to Newfoundland and New Brunswick — to go fishing."

And that, he indicated, was the whole story.

Benny Goodman is a rare person really — totally at peace with himself. He's satisfied without being self-satisfied, content but not complacent, quiet but not dull. He is, quite simply, happy to be Benny Goodman.

Others may puzzle and ponder and figure out a pattern — to the man and his music. Let them.

Benjamin David Goodman doesn't much care about their conclusions. He is secure in his own. □

bial University School of Dental and Oral Surgery among them, are in some doubt about the value-laden term "malocclusion" (defined by the American Dental Association as "irregularities of tooth position and the fitting together of the teeth on closing the jaws"). It implies, Dr. Horowitz contends, that anyone who does not have an "ideal" occlusion needs to have his teeth realigned. This can lead to a lot of unnecessary work, he feels — for example, to what is described by one suburban dentist as "the Beverly Hills, mouth," the six front teeth perfectly even and everybody wired up as long as they've got the money.

When the orthodontist is correcting malocclusion for the sake of dental health, the assumption is that in the long run, the correction will prevent cavities, periodontal (gum) disease and the loss of teeth. "Actually, since many periodontal problems are the result of poor bite, it is logical to presume that orthodontics will help prevent any developing gum disorders," claims the typed pamphlet offered by one New York orthodontist.

Unquestionably, periodontal disease is something to be avoided. More than half of all tooth loss is a direct result of gum problems. Treatment is expensive and sometimes painful. Prosthetic (restorative) dentistry required by the loosening of teeth, replacement of teeth, etc., aside from the inconvenience, can run as high as $10,000.

But—and here's one of those loose threads—there is no statistical evidence demonstrating that orthodontically corrected teeth are less susceptible to gum problems and cavities than uncorrected teeth. Many dentists and periodontists believe that there is absolutely no causal relationship.

There is some reason to believe that severe crowding, where one or more teeth are actually pushed out of the dental arch, may lead to periodontal disease. This is because gum disease is characterized by pocket formations which fill with impacted food and crowding obviously makes cleaning more difficult. But these are, as noted, rather severe cases. The ordinary, everyday squeeze can frequently be corrected by simply filing, and thus narrowing, the teeth. Occlusal trauma — which occurs when one or more out-of-place teeth take the beating for the whole mouth — or the absence of a tooth and the subsequent drifting of the others, can certainly cause damage. These afflictions do not constitute the major portion of many orthodontists' case-loads. For the most part they are treating the more common bugaboos of faulty "back-bite" or "poor meshing."

"Any periodontist," says Robert Gottsegen, professor of periodontics at Columbia's School of Dental and Oral Surgery, "sees as many patients with advanced periodontal conditions who have 'good' occlusions, by orthodontic standards, as have malocclusions."

In fact, orthodontic treatment may actually cause gum disease, the simplest situation being the irritation of the gum surface (gingiva) by the metal appliances. A more seriously adverse result can be bone or root resorption, generally considered to be caused by use of excessive force. Although most orthodontists claim they are protected against this by the pain threshold of the patients ("The kid will holler"), some general dentists insist that it appears too often ("Somebody didn't holler").

Mrs. Claudia Sledge of 3026 Daisy Ave., L.B., is a perfect example of another happy kitchen customer of Mr. Kitchens. Mr. & Mrs. Sledge have a lovely home and wanted a kitchen that would lend itself to their other fine furnishings. She says, "My kitchen is very important to me and I wanted specific features built into it. Mr. Kitchens relieved all anxiety and uncertainties with thorough planning, and detailing and handling the job from start to finish. Their consultant, Ed Harris, checked the job frequently to assure proper work flow and the job was completed on time as promised. No one in my estimation can compare with Mr. Kitchens in getting the job done right and yet keeping the price in line." Call them today for a free estimate at 597-5561 or visit the showroom today at 1819 Redondo Ave., Long Beach.

ANDY GASSAWAY, JR.
Now A Master.

The news out of Andy's Cafeteria these days is not that they squeeze orange juice from fresh oranges, nor that they serve thick tender ham slices and spicy link sausage for breakfast. The news that Andy and his charming wife Camilla are talking about is that after two years of hard studying and long hours at the popular eatery, Andy has earned his master's degree in business administration from USC.

Andy Gassaway Jr. intends to continue to operate the cafeteria at Anaheim and Pacific, applying his post graduate education to purchase the best quality foods available and operate the cafeteria on sound business practices to assure patrons of top quality food and service.

Andy's is open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The Gassaways offer a special breakfast of an egg, two strips of bacon, two of Andy's fluffy hot-cakes and coffee for just $1.25.

For the big breakfast eaters there is the two-egg special (served any style) with your choice of lean bacon, thickly sliced ham or those spicy sausages with sliced home fried potatoes for just $1.60. The beef hash breakfast is $1.45 and the hamburger patty, $1.50.

Andy's offers baked-at-home style muffins and sweet rolls.

The daily luncheon specials include Spanish rice or baked beans, both 89 cents and macaroni and cheese or roast beef hash, both only $1.19. All four entrees come with salad, vegetable, roll or muffin.

Other dinner entrees include meat loaf, $2.35, Swiss steak, $2.60, roast turkey, $2.65, and baked ham, $2.55. There is also a selection of roast pork, $2.55, corned beef, $2.60, and round of roast beef, $2.85.

All of the large variety of cakes and pies are baked on the premises, served hot or cold as you wish.

GUIDE

With the gasoline shortage easing a mite, George Gantes of Dimitri's Restaurant in Anaheim is making it a bit easier on vacationers. He is featuring six nightly specials, sensibly priced within every vacationer's budget yet served with the pride and quality of food that has made Dimitri's one of Orange County's favored restaurants.

Priced at just $3.95 are Italian spaghetti with meat sauce, barbecued beef ribs with French fries, breaded veal cutlet with country gravy, whipped potatoes and a vegetable, or chicken fried steak with whipped potatoes and vegetable.

The tempura battered fish and chips, $3.75, or the Yankee pot roast, $4.25, are the other two nightly specials. All selections are served with chilled relish tray, soup or salad, and Dimitri's meal-in-itself hot sour dough bread.

George calls the nightly specials the Tourister. However, you do not need to have a passport nor be on vacation to enjoy a Tourister dinner.

We dined there recently and enjoyed the veal scallopine with marsala which was served with a choice of baked potato or pilaf. My wife elected the tossed green salad which was a mingling of three different kinds of crispy lettuce, bathed in tangy bleu cheese and sprinkled with crunchy croutons. I went for the split pea soup served hot, thick and with great flavor.

While waiting for the main course, we nibbled on goodies from the silver relish tray containing green onions, green and yellow peppers, ripe olives and carrot sticks. The chunks of ice on top reflected and refracted the overhead lighting.

Dimitri's has high-backed chairs, soft upholstered booths and red-jacketed busboys.

Dimitri's has banquet rooms available for showers, wedding receptions and other occasions.

Cocktails are served either at the table or at the bar.

Dimitri's opens at 4 p.m. seven days a week and is located on Beach Boulevard at Ball Road, between Knott's Berry Farm and Disneyland.

Medicine & You

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Relaxation techniques which require no medications can ease the tension brought on by the pressures of everyday living, a researcher says.

Dr. Nicholas G. Alexiou, medical director of the employee health service of the New York State Department of Civil Service, described the techniques at a conference sponsored by the Center for the Study of Aging, Albany, N. Y.

The techniques, he says, are particularly beneficial to older individuals who are especially prone to troubles stemming from inactivity.

Simple techniques that can help individuals to lead healthier lives include walking, changes in environment, the Jacobson method and Shavasan, a Yoga breathing exercise.

In the Jacobson method, used by employees of the New York State Education Department, participants lie supine on the gymnasium floor after a half-hour of physical exercise. A program coordinator shows participants how to recognize muscle tension in various parts and muscle groups of the body.

The instructor then urges them to relax and become conscious of this sensation. Everyone is urged to practice the relaxation technique in the office or at home.

In the technique of Shavasan, the subject also lies supine and is asked to slow down his respirations, voluntarily by slowly breathing in and out.

He is then asked to hold his breath slightly at the end of inspiration and to hold it slightly longer at the end of expiration.

Dr. Alexiou says researchers have found that use of this technique markedly reduces the respiratory rate and significantly eases tension.

One researcher found that a brisk 15-minute walk reduced tension more effectively than meprobamate (a tranquilizer) in 400 milligram dosages. The subjects in this experiment were 10 middle-aged and older individuals characterized as tense.

Details of Dr. Alexiou's report appear in Family Practice News, a newspaper for physicians.

Development of a pigmented streak on the nail of the big toe or thumb may be a sign of malignant melanoma, a type of cancer with a marked tendency to spread.

Dr. Alfred W. Kopf, professor of dermatology at New York University, says that a tan, brown or black discoloration of tissue in those areas is known as Hutchinson's sign.

He says such discoloration has significance only for white persons. Such discoloration is much more common among blacks and Orientals and is not an indication of melanoma among these persons.

The report is in Dermatology in Practice, a newspaper for physicians.

Suicides do not follow seasonal or climatic patterns, North Carolina researchers report.

Drs. William W. K. Zung and Robert L. Green, studying 3,672 suicides, found that the number of persons taking their own lives increased significantly only on Mondays.

Otherwise there were no differences in suicide rates according to type of weather, season, month, special holidays or weekdays versus weekends.

Still the best method of preventing suicide is early recognition of depression and its treatment, say the doctors who are affiliated with the Durham, N. C., Veterans Administration Hospital.

A report on their research appears in Modern Medicine.

The mysterious crib death has occurred in identical twin boys five months old the same night, according to researchers at Adelaide Children's Hospital in Australia.

The phenomenon is technically known as sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS), and the cause is unknown.

Briefly, the syndrome is this: An apparently healthy baby dies unexpectedly and suddenly in his crib, silently and without warning.

Dr. Susan Beal of North Adelaide, Australia, says the twins appeared to have died several hours apart. Her report appears in Medical Journal of Australia.

An official of the National Institute of Mental Health thinks that researchers should explore the possibility that a virus may cause schizophrenia, a severe mental disorder.

Dr. E. Fuller Torrey points out that schizophrenia has its onset in late adolescence or early adulthood, indicating that slow-virus may be at work.

Also, a disproportionate number of schizophrenics are born during the first three months of the year. This phenomenon also fits into an infectious disease pattern, he says.

The report appears in Clinical Psychiatry News, a newspaper for psychiatrists.

Anti-epilepsy medications may interfere with the action of oral contraceptives, to cause failure of The Pill, two German doctors report.

Drs. D. Janz and D. Schmidt of Berlin tell of three patients on anti-epileptic medication who became pregnant despite regular intake of oral contraceptives.

They say physicians should advise women on The Pill and anti-epilepsy drugs to use "other contraceptive methods in addition to oral contraceptives."

The report is in the journal Lancet.

Q. I read that President Nixon presented President Sadat of Egypt with a $2 million helicopter. I would like to know who authorizes such lavish gifts.—Paul E. Eberly, Mechanicsburg, Pa.

A. It is common practice for heads of state to exchange gifts on state visits. The 'copter, which, with spare parts and the cost of training Egyptian pilots, will come to an estimated $4 million, will be included in the $250 million in economic aid to Egypt Nixon has asked Congress to approve for the 1975 fiscal year.

Q. Vice President Gerald Ford—who goes around the country week after week making speeches—doesn't he have anything to do in Washington, D.C.? Or is he running for President?—John Finch, Bethesda, Md.

A. Ford is obviously running for the Presidency.

GRACE KELLY AND BING CROSBY IN A SCENE FROM 'COUNTRY GIRL'

Q. In how many movies did Princess Grace of Monaco appear? Did she win an Academy Award?—F.J.M., Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

A. The former Grace Kelly appeared in 11 movies, won an Academy Award in 1954 for Country Girl, in which she starred with Bing Crosby and William Holden.

Q. Has any Congressman in American history gone directly from the House of Representatives to the Presidency?—B.R., Dayton, Ohio.

A. One—James A. Garfield of Ohio, in 1880. Besides Garfield, only Henry Clay of Kentucky ever ran for the Presidency directly from the House. However, 16 of the 36 men who became U.S. Presidents served in the House at some time prior to their election.

NORMA LEVY

DEWI SUKARNO

Q. Did that famous English call girl, Norma Levy, really have sexual relations with the late President Sukarno of Indonesia? She says she did in her book, I Norma Levy.—J. Daly, Cambridge, Mass.

A. President Sukarno never met Mrs. Levy. Last month, Dewi Sukarno, the 33-year-old Japanese-born widow of President Sukarno, won a court settlement in London whereby the publishers of I Norma Levy agreed to destroy all unsold copies of the controversial book and amend all future ones.

Dewi Sukarno first heard of the allegation when newspapers headlined it in Holland and Japan last November. She then decided to seek court action. "I simply felt it was my duty as his widow and as a mother," she said.

Q. What foreign languages does Secretary of State Henry Kissinger speak?—George D. Roullard, Coronado, Calif.

A. German and French.

Q. All these stories about how we're treating our Vietnam war vets make me wonder—exactly how many veterans are there altogether in the U.S., and how do they break down by wars?—P. Daley, Chicago.

A. The grand total is 29,233,000. Of these, 3,102,000 served in peacetime between the Korean and Vietnam wars. The breakdown by wars: Vietnam, 7,002,000; Korean, 5,949,000; World War II, 13,792,000; World War I, 1,128,000; Spanish-American War, 1624. The figures don't tally exactly because some vets served in more than one war.

Q. Is James St. Clair, who represents President Nixon, the same attorney who was an assistant to Joseph Nye Welch who represented the Army in the Army-McCarthy hearings of 1954?—Louis M. Kent, Jr. Anderson, S.C.

A. Yes.

Q. How many U.S. ambassadors are women?—Pat Greene, Boston, Mass.

A. Five—Eileen Donovan, Barbados; Ruth Farkas, Luxembourg; Nancy Rowls, Togo; Jean Wilkowsky, Zambia. Also, Barbara White, alternate U.S. representative for Political Affairs at the United Nations, has ambassadorial status.

Q. Watergate plumber Egil Krogh was recently released from the Federal Prison Camp at Allenwood, Pa., tanned, robust, and humble. What kind of a prison is Allenwood? Is it a prison for rich people?—S.D.W., Alexandria, Va.

A. Allenwood is a minimum security prison, whose recent inmates have included such prominent people as James Hoffa; Daniel and Philip Berrigan, and ex-Rep. Cornelius Gallagher (D., N.J.). Ex-White House aide Jeb Magruder is there now.

EGIL KROGH AND FAMILY

Q. Whatever happened to sex-book author Henry Miller?—J. Harlowe, Cambridge, Mass.

A. The author of the once-censored Tropic of Cancer is now 82, and, according to his soon-to-be-published book, Insomnia, spends his days agonizing over his young—hopelessly unfaithful—Japanese mistress.

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES.

HOW INFLATION HARMS THE POOR

Inflation may bring hardship to middle-class families but to America's poor it can mean actual hunger.

A report released last month by a 26-member panel to the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs stresses the plight of America's 40 million poor.

"Until recently, the poor and near poor...were at least able to purchase foods at prices that were on the whole rising more slowly or no faster than the prices they were paying for other necessities," says the Poverty, Inflation and Hunger report, directed by Ronald F. Pollack of the Food, Research and Action Center.

No longer is this so.

While the cost of food jumped 42 percent from December, 1970, to March, 1974, food stamp benefits increased only 34 percent and welfare checks only 14.7 percent.

Compare two four-person families -- one with an annual income of $2000, the other with $10,000.

"In 1960, the low-income family would have spent $780 dollars for food, the other family $2000. If the prices of all items in their budgets were to rise by the same percentage rate, no additional problems would develop," explains the panel. "However, a calculation of the percentage price rises in foods shows that food prices rose by approximately 70 percent from 1960 to August, 1973. At the same time, incomes rose by 50 percent."

For the higher-income family, the panel continues, the food price as of August, 1973, would have increased 22.7 percent; for the low-income family, which consumes different items of food, 44.2 percent.

Whenever food prices increase sharply, consumers shift to lower-cost, lower-quality foods to maintain food budgets. But for the poor, who are already eating the cheapest foods, there is nowhere to go.

As prices rise, many of the poor buy food not designed for human consumption. For the first nine months of 1973, for example, the sale of pet food rose 12 percent.

"Experts at the Center for Science in the Public Interest estimated that as much as one-third of the pet foods sold in ghetto areas," discloses the panel, "were being used for human consumption; for areas with high proportions of elderly poor, the estimates were even higher."

"It is only by altering the basic facts of income maldistribution that we can hope to reduce the size of our welfare, Medicaid, and food assistance programs."

Until adequate income is available, the panel recommends:

- An expanded food stamp program based on a more adequate diet plan at lower cost to recipients.
- A national commitment to ensure a full range of nutrition services (from counseling and advice through medical care and food) for all pregnant women and young infants.
- Availability of food service in all schools (especially school breakfast, day care and summer feeding).
- Nutritional protection for the elderly, whatever their social circumstances.

EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENTS

Milton Eisenhower, brother of the late president, thinks the President of the U.S. needs a pair of Executive Vice Presidents to help him with the routine functions of his office.

The jobs would be established by a constitutional amendment, with one spot for foreign affairs and one for domestic responsibilities. Eisenhower says, "They could...relieve him (the President) of less important matters, prepare coordinated plans for his consideration, sign appointment papers, proclamations and other documents--thus greatly reducing the need of the President to sign his name forty thousand times a year!"

More important than cabinet members, Executive Vice Presidents would be appointed by a President and serve at his pleasure. The appointments would be subject to confirmation by the Senate.

These suggestions are contained in a book called The President Is Calling, by Milton Eisenhower, 74, scheduled for publication in October by Doubleday.

MOVIES—A MAN'S WORLD: PAUL NEWMAN (L) AND ROBERT REDFORD IN 'THE STING.'

WOMAN AND FILM

Hollywood is currently producing a plethora of films about unending car chases, murders, Watergate-type detective stories and relationships between men, as in the Oscar-winning The Sting, for instance. What's happened to the simple, good old male-female pictures? Are they passe?

Part of the answer lies in numbers. Of the 3068 members in the Producers Guild of America, only eight are women. The Directors Guild represents 2343 men and 23 women; and the Writers Guild has 2828 male and 148 female members.

YOUR LAND IS MY LAND

Americans who own land in Canada, or are thinking of buying it there, are disturbed over an increasing trend to expropriation of U.S.-owned private property. Mrs. Dorothy Wood Kosling of Milan, Ohio, has gone to the courts in an effort to prevent the Nova Scotia government from grabbing a 5462-acre waterfront estate, which she values at "several millions," and offering her only $66,000 compensation.

Lands and Forests Minister Maurice De Lory, who ordered the land seizure, denies he's "anti-American" but says he's trying to "acquire beaches, lakes, recreation land so we'll have enough in the future for Nova Scotians and American visitors." He also insists that owners of "small plots of land" have nothing to worry about.

Nevertheless, John Z. Miller, a former U.S. Army major from Newark, Del., recently had an eight-acre beach property near Yarmouth, N.S., expropriated. Says Miller: "I was discriminated against because I was an American. The government took my land, but didn't touch property owned by Canadians on either side of it."

Some U.S. property owners are fearful that Nova Scotia's expropriation policies may set an example for Canada's nine other provinces, which are alarmed by growing numbers of Americans buying bucolic hideaways and vacation tracts.

A Canadian Justice Department spokesman in Ottawa says how many Americans own land "is an elusive figure we don't have now," but that a joint commission on land use has been set up by the federal and provincial governments to find out.

The commission's report is due this fall, and tighter nationwide controls on land sales to Americans and other foreigners could result.

'ONE SPECIAL SUMMER'

In 1951 Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy Onassis and her sister Lee Bouvier Radziwill, then ages 22 and 18 respectively, took a trip to Europe aboard the Queen Elizabeth.

The two sisters toured London, Paris, Venice, Rome, Florence and Madrid.

Lee kept a journal to which Jackie contributed some illustrations and poetry. They gave the journal to their mother, Mrs. Hugh Auchincloss, who found it early this year while rummaging around in her attic, searching for materials that might help Lee Radziwill in the memoirs she is writing.

The travel journal of the Bouvier sisters will be published this October under the title of One Special Summer, and if you are particularly interested in what Jackie and Lee did in Europe in 1951, it will cost you $7.95 to find out.

RIO'S CLOUD

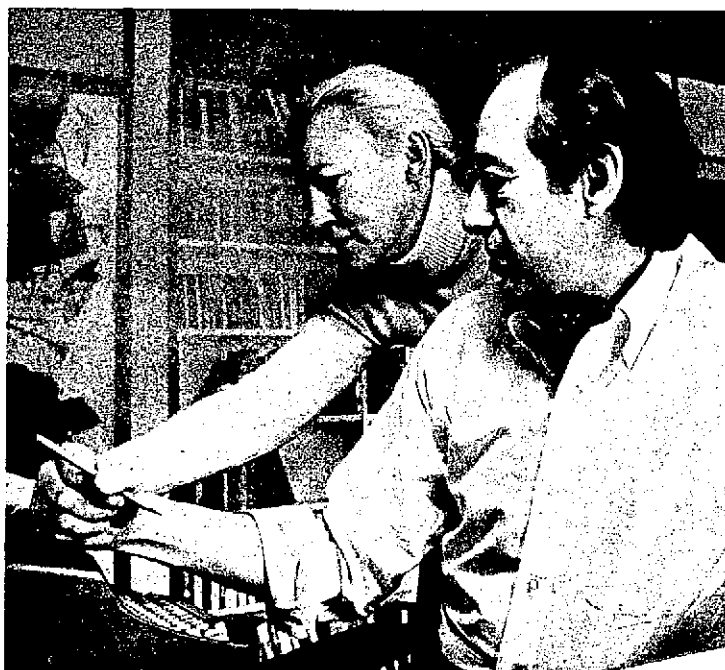

Rio de Janeiro is the latest city to achieve the dubious honor of a high pollution rate.

Chemists Sergio Duarte and Henrique Andrade of Rio's Catholic University reveal that on a scale of 100 Rio's pollution count is 99 compared to 75 for the average U.S. urban area.

Their report merely verifies what most Brazilians have known for a long time -- Rio de Janeiro lives under a cloud of smog.

WRITER ALVIN TOFFLER AND WIFE HEIDI

REVISE OUR CONSTITUTION?

Alvin Toffler, author of the phenomenally best-selling Future Shock, would like to see every state in the Union prepare an alternative Constitution of the United States for the nation's Bicentennial.

"We may have to reinvent democracy," says the 45-year-old writer-lecturer who is presently working on a book about politics. "To me a scandal like Watergate reflects the need for a serious, probing reexamination of our political system -- even our Constitution itself."

It's been four years since Toffler published his book about "the future and the shock that its arrival brings." Forecasting a world of vast underwater cities, man-made weather, test-tube babies and human-like robots, Future Shock argued that we must begin to prepare people -- educationally, psychologically and emotionally -- for the pressures of an incredibly fast-moving, rapidly changing environment.

"I think mass future shock -- a kind of giant nervous breakdown -- is certainly a possibility," he says. "But I'm not pessimistic, I think we have tremendous bounce, brains and intelligence. Unfortunately, we sometimes have to be pushed right to the brink of disaster before we act."

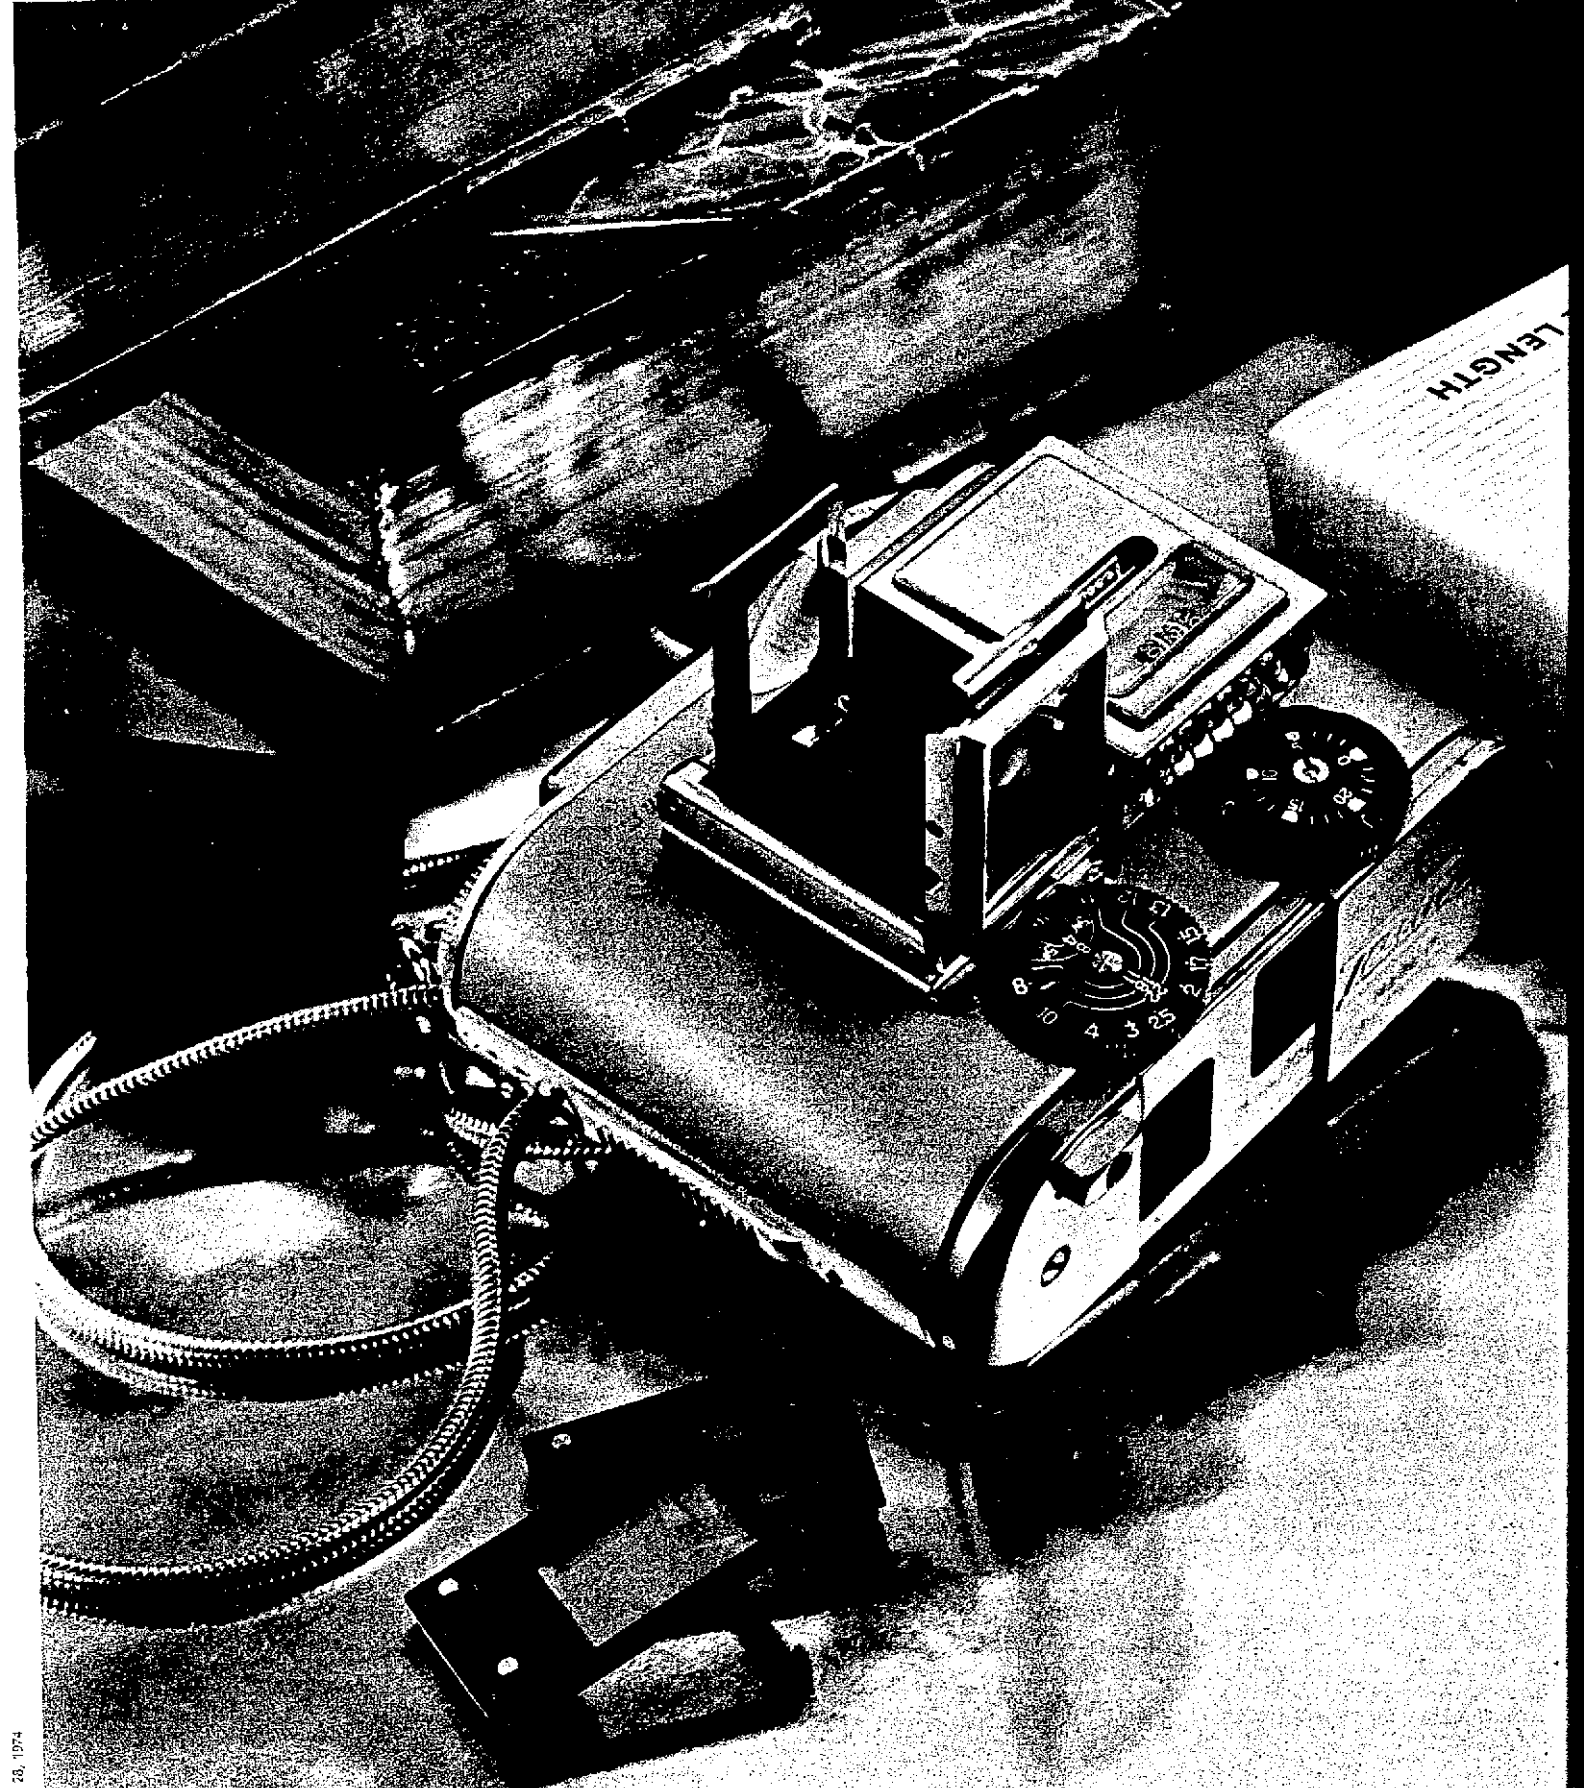

JUSTIFYING BIGOTRY?

Does the popular television series All in the Family encourage bigotry? Or is it just innocent entertainment?

After interviewing a cross-section of American adolescents and Canadian adults, Prof. Neil Vidmar of Western Ontario University and Milton Rokeach of Washington State University concluded that frequent viewers of All in the Family were prone to admire and condone Archie Bunker's behavior.

Writing in the Journal of Communication, the professors say All in the Family encourages bigotry by permitting the viewer to defend and legitimize his own prejudices.

As a full-time fashion consultant, Emily Cho (l.) shops for women who lack either the confidence or time to do it themselves. Here she advises Loeskin Small, sales manager of a New York travel agency.

Fashion Consultant Emily Cho— She Gives Women a New Image

by Jonathan Braun

"I don't pin it up on a bulletin board," says executive Marion Preston. "But if friends complain to me about their appearance—then I tell them about Emily."

NEW YORK, N.Y.

Met Emily Cho, an attractive sophisticated who knows her way around some of the best closets in town. As a full-time fashion consultant, she specializes in shopping for women who lack either the time or confidence to do it themselves.

"I call my service New Image," she says, "because that's just what I try to give women—a totally new image."

It all begins with a home visit ($35 for the city, $45 for the suburbs) in which she interviews her new client... and inspects her closet. "This can be threatening to some women," she explains, "but I have to look through a client's wardrobe to learn where she's at in terms of style and taste."

Making copious notes, Miss Cho "pulls" those items that will never do. "You can't be devastating," she says. "You can't just tell a woman to throw out all her clothes and start over again from scratch. Even if they wanted to, most women couldn't possibly afford to do that. So you try your best to build on what they presently have. You make a note of what skirt needs a top, for instance. . . . Above all, you have to be sensitive and understanding. You have to gain a client's trust."

What are some typical wardrobe problems? "Color and fit are the big ones—also quality. Many women sacrifice quality for quantity. They try to achieve a certain look by buying many inexpensive items, and it never works. I'm always pushing fewer but better."

After the first consultation, she hits the stores—from the biggest department stores to the tiniest boutiques—picking out and reserving what she feels is appropriate for her client's figure, personality, budget and life style. She calls this phase of her operation "research" and charges a token $25 fee.

A shopping expedition

The next step is the most important one. At $25 per hour, Miss Cho accompanies her clients on a shopping expedition. "We go from one pile of clothes to the next," she says, "and we pull everything together in front of the mirror—while I advise her on what is worth altering, what will go nicely with things already in her closet, or, especially, what looks great on her even though she has never worn anything like it before."

"It's fantastic!" says Loeskin Small, sales manager for a large travel agency, and one of Miss Cho's most loyal clients. "When Emily takes you to a store you feel like the most important person in New York. She has even reserved the best dressing room."

Everything fits

The shopping tour usually takes three or four hours. "And by the time it's over," says Miss Cho, "I've helped my client with either spring-summer or fall-winter and they're done for the season."

"When you shop with Emily you have the satisfaction of knowing that everything will fit and look just right," says Miss Small, who spends from $700 to $1000 on clothing each season. "In the old days I would shop for five hours and end up with one dress. In five hours with Emily I get everything I need for several months."

"The system is based on the lump-sum concept," Miss Cho explains. "Everything fits and works because we buy it all in one shot—something most women aren't used to doing. They don't realize that this kind of shopping is less expensive in the long run."

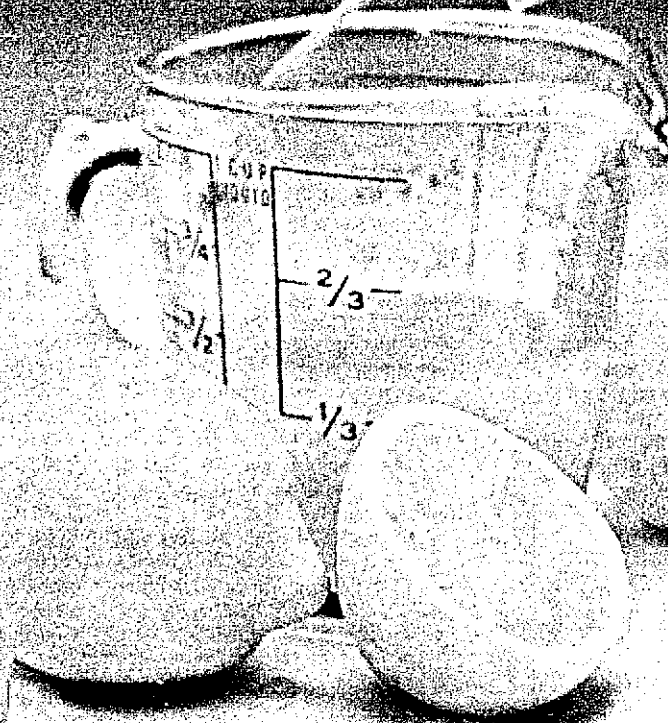

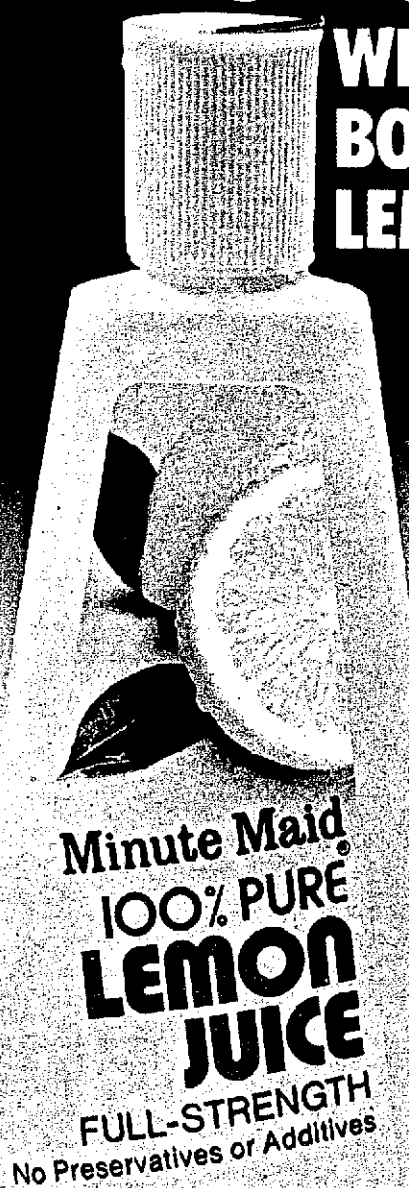

Finally, Miss Cho sends each client a handy clothing list of which garments go well together. "A lot of women like to tack it onto their closet doors," she says. "They say it makes getting dressed in the morning a lot easier."

executive, Emily Cho was born in Manila 32 years ago, came here when she was 4 and was graduated in 1963 from Cornell University, where she majored in psychology.

"I was always interested in people," she says. "And I suppose that's one reason I got into this kind of work. When I do research for a client I really try to become that person. Suddenly, I have her figure, her personality—even her hangups. If she thinks her arms are too fleshy or her hips too hippy I have to take it all into consideration and deal with it."

College was followed by a stint on the executive training squad of Bloomingdale's department store, a "booking" job with the Eileen Ford modeling agency, then photography editor for Vogue patterns. "There," she says, "I was given the garment and had to choose the most appropriate body to go with it. Nowadays, I'm given the body and I have to choose the garment."

Marriage was 'sheer craziness'

Somewhere along the way she found time to marry Michael R. Abramson, a graphics designer. "In the beginning our marriage was sheer craziness," she recalled over a cup of morning coffee in her elegant modern apartment overlooking the Hudson River. "Michael kept picturing me in these sporty, horsey-set-type costumes—and I kept shocking him with what he thought were outrageous Gypsy outfits."

"It took a while, but Emily gradually convinced me that she knew what she was doing," says her husband. "That's why I had complete confidence in her when she quit her magazine job to start this consulting business."

"I always loved to shop," says Miss Cho, "and since I seemed to have this talent for buying the right thing at the right time, I figured there might be a way to share it with others."

Miss Cho boasts 150 clients, including Mrs. Marylou Harrison of Chappaqua, N.Y., who also appears on today's cover.

Three years later, she boasts 150 regular clients, a Fifth Avenue office, several looseleaf binders of notes on satisfied customers and a virtually ironclad rule not to travel more than an hour's drive from New York City—"the fashion capital of the United States"—for any client.

"On the other hand," she adds, "about a half-dozen women once flew me down to Washington, D.C., for a week's consultation. . . . And a few women from as far away as Texas have used my service. I encourage out-of-town clients—but I need plenty of advance notice and at least three days with them to accomplish anything."

Size 4 to 14

What kind of woman hires an image consultant?

"My clients," says Miss Cho, "are wives of rising young executives who are under constant pressure to look their best, successful businesswomen who are in the public eye, divorced women who need a psychological lift and housewives with grown children ready to splurge for the first time in their lives."

They range in age from 20 to 60, Size 4 to 14 and over the years have included Mrs. Rudman Rockefeller, the former New York Governor's daughter-in-law; Georgette Klinger, the noted skin specialist, and a well known ex-model trying to get back into the business.

"Some women are very private about this and take it extremely seriously," says Miss Cho. "It's almost as if my service is a secret family recipe they don't want to divulge."

Says one client, the wife of a prominent New York textile dealer: "How could I possibly admit to my husband that after 27 years of marriage I don't know how to dress myself?"

But some women take the opposite view. "I don't pin it up on the bulletin board," says Marion Preston, a senior vice president of the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency, "but if friends ask me why I look so chic and complain about their problems in picking clothes, then I let them know about Emily."

Recognizing that in an age of women's liberation some women may accuse her of overemphasizing surface qualities, Miss Cho insists that the purpose of her service "is not merely to turn women into peacocks who hang on men's arms. It makes them more confident. Once they put on the clothes they don't have to worry about them any more—will it stay up, does it look right. Suddenly, there's a freedom to think and talk about other things."

"But if you want to know why it's so important to look good I'll tell you. That's the way our society works. We go by the visual impression. When someone enters a room we instantly form an impression. We don't wait until she utters a brilliant thought. . . . We humans just don't work that way."

FASHION TIPS

■ Do you look better in bright colors or muted shades? Do you need to update your look or are you trying too hard to fit in with the denim generation? Image consultant Emily Cho couldn't say without meeting you, but she can offer these general fashion tips and words of advice:

"Length depends on the proportions of your body. For instance, women with long legs can wear the midi-length best. While they'll be showing a variety of lengths this fall, one thing is fairly certain: above the knee will feel much too short."

"Some women are right for geometric prints, others for floral prints. It has a lot to do with personality. The more feminine type looks better in floral, the more classical type in geometric. And one must always be careful about the size of a print. If it's too large that's the easiest way a dress can wear you."

"Don't ever come out looking like a cover girl. That's where everything is too perfect, too well matched."

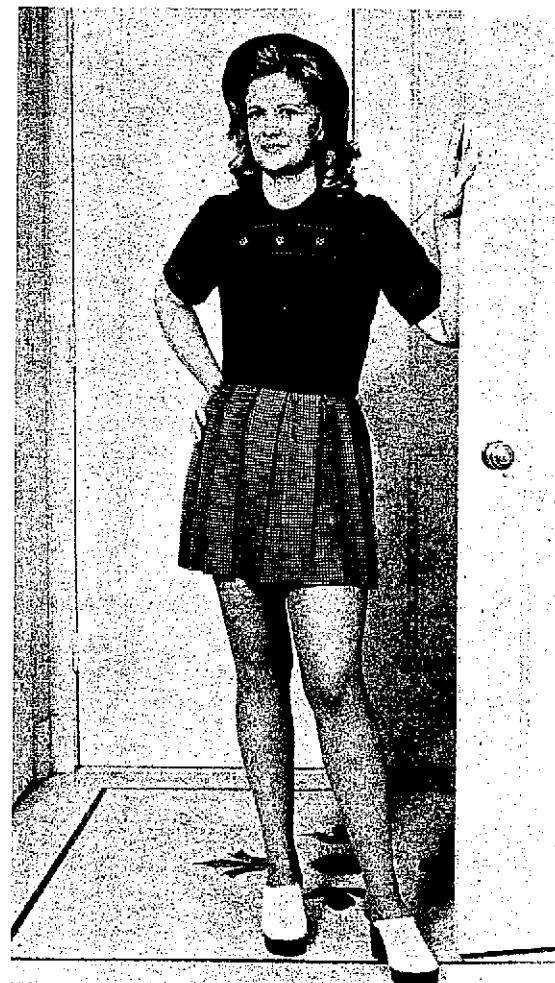

"Some women have a constant frustration because they can't look like a certain movie star or magazine ad, even though it's obvious why they can't. Know yourself—that's the point."

What's the secret to living with another artist? "We really respect each other's ideas," says her husband, graphics designer Michael R. Abramson.

When I look at myself here, weighing 220 pounds, I wonder why my husband Cecil even wanted to put his arm around me.

Now that I am down to 138 pounds, Cecil is always taking pictures of me. And do I love modeling my new figure — and new clothes.

Now that I've lost 82 pounds, my husband needs an electric blanket.

By Janie Goff — as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

When I weighed 220 pounds, I was my husband's warmth in winter and his shade in summer. But now that I'm down to 138 pounds, Cecil says there'll be a lot of cold days ahead, even in our home town of Hattiesburg, Mississippi, if we don't get ourselves an electric blanket.

Fact is, Cecil is just not used to having me so slim. You see, I weighed nearly 170 pounds when we married 11 years ago. He used to say then I was pleasingly plump. But as I ate myself out of shape, he began saying I was unpleasantly fat. Only he'd say it different ways.

Like once he joked about putting chalk marks around my middle to show where his embrace stopped. Another time, he volunteered to go to the Army Surplus store to buy me shoes big enough to fit. And I'll never forget the time I threw a pail of water out the back door. I was so top heavy, I went with it right into a tree. Cecil and his brother had to pull me upright and they never let me forget it.

It was incidents like these that would put me to dieting drastically. Sometimes I'd eat only boiled eggs. Or I'd go on a low carbohydrate diet and deprive myself of all the things I loved — until I couldn't stand it any longer. Then Cecil and I would go off fishing and I'd take one cooler for the fish and three for the food. And that would be the end of that diet.

Wondering what finally jolted me into losing weight? My brother showed a home movie and I couldn't believe what I looked like, because mirrors don't tell you like a motion picture does. Right then, I decided to go on the Ayds plan as soon as I could get to a drug store.

Quite frankly, I had bought Ayds® Reducing Plan Candy before, but I didn't follow directions. This time, though, it was different. That movie made me determined to get the weight off. And since Ayds contain vitamins and minerals, but no drugs, I didn't need to worry about getting jittery or nervous.

One other thing. I didn't think about losing all 80 pounds, either. I just concentrated on taking off 10 pounds at a time. That way it didn't seem so hopeless. And you know what? It worked. I took one or two vanilla caramel Ayds before meals like the directions say and they helped curb my appetite so at the end of three weeks on the Ayds plan I'd lost 10 pounds. After that, I started losing about six pounds a month. I probably could have lost even more, but I made it a rule to go on an eating spree once a month. I shouldn't have, I know, but eating is a hard habit to break. And my spree kept me losing the rest of the month.

Cecil didn't think that I would stick to the Ayds plan at first. He was sure that I'd do what I always did — go off it and get bigger than before. But he was wrong. I got slimmer.

When I'd taken off 30 pounds on the Ayds plan, I found that I could wear a girdle on a hot day, go out, eat, and not get indigestion. And when I'd finally lost 82 pounds, I threw the girdle away and haven't worn one since.

There's one last thing I want to say for anybody who's struggling to lose weight. You can't get in a hurry to get it off. If you do, you just wind up looking like you need to go to a convalescent home. But on the Ayds plan you lose weight gradually, so your skin kind of takes care of itself. And you get healthier looking. Believe me, that Ayds plan has made me into a different person. And I wouldn't be back like I was before, for anything. Even though it means buying an electric blanket for Cecil.

What's Under Your Airplane Seat?

Dangerous Cargo Stirs Controversy

by Christine and John Lyons

Each time you board an airliner, there's a pretty good chance that you may be, quite literally, sitting on top of a powder keg. Unknown to the passengers, and sometimes the pilots, too, scheduled commercial flights in the United States are routinely carrying in their cargo compartment beneath the seats such hazardous loads as explosives, flammable acids, poisons, nerve gas, live viruses including polio, and radioactive substances.

Says Capt. Jim McIntyre of the AirLine Pilots' Association (ALPA): "When we say hazardous, we're not talking about something that's kind of nice to play around with but don't get too close. We're talking about something that's going to kill you."

Various illustrations on these pages are of dangerous items that have been shipped as airline cargo.

In June, after the Senate Commerce Committee held hearings on the transportation of hazardous materials, Sen. Vance Hartke (D., Ind.) said: "It's quite obvious and very conclusive that the shipment of hazardous materials in the United States is a potential bombshell, waiting to go off any place, any time."

Some of the airlines themselves have become uneasy about the perils posed by certain cargoes. Delta Air Lines has twice requested a waiver from the Civil Aeronautics Board which would permit it not to carry radioactive material on passenger planes. Twice the request has been refused. Delta is now setting up a system of monitoring all radioactive packages with Geiger counters—the first airline to do so.

Delta's concern stems from two incidents, one in 1972, the other last April, when passengers were exposed to radiation leaks. In the latter instance, an improperly shielded package of radioactive material was shipped in two flights which carried a total of 157 passengers. The Atomic Energy Commission says tests have shown that none of those aboard suffered biological damage, but a $40 million suit has been filed in Federal Court in Washington on behalf of passengers who claim they may not be certain for years whether they underwent ill effects or not.

Most of the radioactive material shipped by air is for medical purposes, but some loads contain fissionable material like that used in nuclear reactors or atomic bombs. It is not explosive, but it is one of the most potent poisons.

Radiation isn't the only hazard. Last May, smoke was detected coming from the baggage compartment of an Aeromexico DC-10 about to take off in Mexico City for a flight to Los Angeles. Crew members who checked found a leaking jar of nitric acid, with the lethal fluid already eating through the floor. Investigators said that if the leak hadn't been discovered, the plane could have exploded in mid-air.

Leaking nitric acid has also been blamed in the Nov. 3, 1973, crash of a Pan American cargo jet at Logan Airport in Boston in which three crewmen died. The plane carried a 16,000-pound load of acids and chemicals. "If there hadn't been so much, it could very easily have gone on a passenger plane," says Capt. Jim Eckols, co-chairman of ALPA's Hazardous Materials Committee.

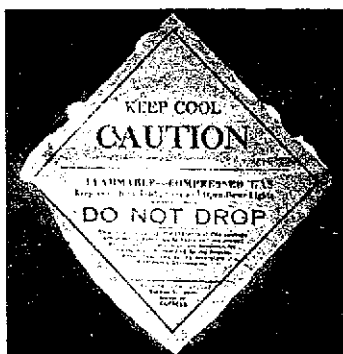

Will luck run out?

There are hundreds of incidents on record of radiation spills, acid leaks, and other cargo problems. Robert Fowler, an official of the International Association of Machinists in San Francisco, says he's amazed that there have been no major accidents because of hazardous material on passenger planes. Says Rep. Jack Brooks (D., Tex.), chairman of the Government Activities Subcommittee of the House Government Operations Committee: "We're lucky; we're fortunate; but we're running this risk."

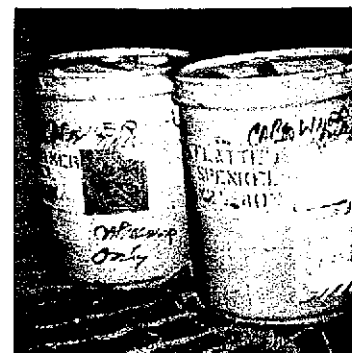

Although it's perfectly legal to carry dangerous cargo, specific regulations have been drawn up to give maximum protection to passengers. Representative Brooks, however, contends that these regulations are consistently ignored or evaded.

"We've learned that an overwhelming majority of hazardous materials shipped by air are in violation of federal regulations," Brooks says. "These shipments are often packaged, labeled and loaded onto aircraft without regard to existing federal regulatory requirements and with virtually no surveillance by the Federal Aviation Administration. Our system of shipping hazardous materials by air is totally out of control."

Added airline Capt. Don Dunn: "The name of the game is to get it

Acid marked as gas

Flammable paint primer shipped, not necessarily to insure safety."

Captains Dunn and Eckols have been investigating cargo hazards for four years. They went from loading dock to loading dock day after day, checking over 1000 shipments. They say 90 percent of the passenger flights they checked carried hazardous cargo, and 90 percent of these hazardous shipments were packed, labeled or carried in violation of federal rules.

On the other hand, one FAA study insists that only 3 percent of the commercial flights each day carry hazardous materials. Eckols replies that this FAA report is based on the airlines' load manifest forms which normally aren't used to indicate hazardous shipments. "We think that their estimate is grossly in error," he says.

Who's responsible for the perilous cargo problem? The FAA and the airlines say the blame for improper labeling and packaging of hazardous material should fall on the shippers. But many others, including most airline pilots, believe the bulk of the blame should go to the FAA itself, for not enforcing the regulations and riding herd on the shippers.

Radioactive material

Although the FAA in the past has insisted that only a small percentage of flights carry dangerous cargo, and that its enforcement efforts have been adequate, it now apparently is shifting gears.

Oscar Bakke, the FAA's retiring associate administrator for aviation safety, acknowledges that the agency has "noticed an increase in the amount of hazardous materials that have been carried." He blames "the inertia of the bureaucracy" for the agency's difficulties in keeping abreast of the problem.

Next October, Bakke says, the FAA plans to invite shippers to a meeting to warn them that if they don't start regulating themselves, the government may be forced to start licensing them. However, Capt. Tom Ashwood, the ALPA safety chairman at TWA, comments tartly: "That's like having a fire in your house and writing to the fire department to invite them over to discuss what methods will be used to put out the fire."

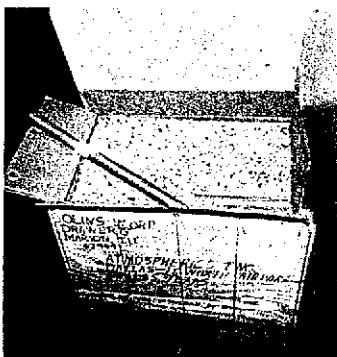

At least one air center isn't waiting for the FAA to act. The Airport Commission at Minneapolis-St. Paul recently passed an ordinance making it mandatory to check all radioactive packages shipped through the airport. Says Mayor Lawrence Cohen of St. Paul: "We're only trying to enforce the federal standards for exposure. Maybe we'll be responsible for the Feds getting off their seats and doing something about this rather significant problem."

So far Minneapolis-St. Paul is the only airport to have taken such action. But in Washington, D.C., the Aviation Consumer Action Project has handed out pamphlets at several airports warning passengers of hazardous cargo. Reuben Robertson, the director of ACAP, urges citizens to write to their Congressman about the problem and says: "It's essential to build a ground wave of support for reform in this area."

Pilots in charge

The pilots themselves are spearheading the drive for improved safety. In recent weeks TWA pilots have gotten the airline to agree to a sweeping reform that could become the standard for the industry if other airlines go along. Under the agreement, industrial radioactive material will no longer be carried on passenger planes. Producers of medical isotopes will be required to shield their packages so that they give off almost no radiation. A committee of pilots and management will decide what other hazardous material is unfit for transport on passenger planes. A tentative schedule has been set up to ban explosives, acids and flammables from TWA passenger craft.

Some authorities believe that the best guarantee of the success of any such program, and of safety in the air, is an alert and aroused traveling public. Sums up consumer advocate Ralph Nader: "Passengers, before they embark on a plane, should ask the ticket agent whether there's any hazardous cargo on board. Most pilots will willingly tell the passengers whether there is or not, but I think it should be a matter of federal law. That is, I think a passenger has a right to find out whether radioactive or other hazardous materials are on board the plane they're going to take."

New Voices in Business

Ladies of the Board Room

by Pam Proctor

Patricia R. Harris, former U.S. Ambassador to Luxembourg, attends a meeting of the board of directors of the Chase Manhattan Bank in New York. While women directors are still few, business is now seeking them out, and their number is growing.

A few months ago, during a meeting of the board of directors of a large corporation, Washington, D.C., attorney Patricia R. Harris got a preview of the company's new television ad. Turning to her fellow directors she said casually, "My, that's a sexist ad." Then she forgot about the incident.

But the company's officers didn't forget about it. Several weeks later she ran into one of them who said, "I hope you've seen how we've changed our ad."

"Yes, I did," replied Mrs. Harris. "The change was just right."

Why did they do it? Mrs. Harris was surprised to learn that she was responsible. "You made your comment at the board meeting, and we were just appalled," he told her.

The response of these men gives a clue to the kind of impact women are having in the board rooms these days. In the handful of corporations with women directors, men are being taught by their female colleagues that they've been "sexist" in their business practices. And the male "students" are taking these lessons to heart because correcting discrimination has become an economic necessity. Multimillion-dollar settlements of discrimination suits brought by the government on behalf of female employees is the price corporations like A.T.&T. have had to pay for earning failing grades on their equal opportunity report cards.

Some corporations are trying to score high marks by pulling women in high visibility positions on the board of directors—that exclusive fraternity of experts from inside and outside the corporation whose job is to oversee management decisions. A few companies like Sears Roebuck and RCA have regularly had women on their boards, but the rush to recruit females is clearly gaining momentum in other major corporations too.

Norma Pace, 50, an economist with the American Paper Institute, spent 25 years as a corporate consultant but she didn't start getting offers to join boards of directors until about 1970. "I must have been put on 20 directors' lists," said the petite redhead, who recently went on the boards of Sears and Sperry Rand. "Companies would ask a management consultant to go out and find an appropriate woman because those who were reading future trends could see that this was a movement."

Recently Mrs. Helen K. Copley, publisher of The San Diego Union and San Diego Evening Tribune, was elected a director of Wells Fargo & Co., replacing Leonard K. Firestone, now U.S. Ambassador to Belgium. Other prominent women in the communications field who are serving on corporate boards include Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, chairman of the Houston Post Co., who is on the board of General Foods; Katharine Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, on the board of Allied Chemical, and Helene R. Foellinger, president of Fort Wayne Newspapers, Inc., on the board of General Telephone of Indiana.

Pay and opportunity

The interest in female directors was triggered by the entry of about 8 million women—most of them married—into the labor force between 1960 and 1970. "Women began to discover that they were grossly underpaid and that they were limited in the kinds of jobs they could do," explained Elizabeth F. Harris, a businesswoman who heads the Stockholders' Action Task Force of the National Organization for Women (NOW). "The Women's Movement came along and started stirring up a lot of conversation, and federal officials in Washington started focusing on the discrimination problem."

"I would have been on boards long ago if I had been a man," Patricia Harris stated unequivocally. Mrs. Harris, 50, who as ambassador to Luxembourg was the first black woman to hold that diplomatic rank, was tapped for board membership in 1971 by the Chase Manhattan Bank, IBM and Scott Paper Co.

Marina v. N. Whitman, a slim 39-year-old brunette, was appointed by President Nixon as the first female member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers. She found that the boards which solicited her membership after she left the government last year "made it clear that the fact that I was a woman was relevant. They weren't playing games," she said. She is now on the Ten women who are now serving on the boards of boards of Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., Westinghouse Electric Corp., and Marcor, Inc.

But do these new women directors really have anything to offer corporations? Aren't they just tokens?

Not just any woman

"No," says Mrs. Whitman, who is Distinguished Public Service Professor of Economics at the University of Pittsburgh. "Beyond their interest in me as a woman, they all stressed the fact that I had had experience in government with the price control system, which had given me a kind of inside view of the relationship between government and business."

Environmentalism Marian Sulzberger Heiskell, who joined the board of Consolidated Edison Co. of New York three years ago, said, "At first, I was a token." But after doing her "homework" and finding out more about the utility's operations, she said "now I feel I'm giving something." Mrs. Heiskell is also a director of Merck & Co. and of The New York Times Co.

"The female thing is almost accidental," insisted British-born Cecily C. Selby, who at 47 is the executive director of the Girl Scouts of the U.S.A. She joined the boards of RCA and Avon Products, Inc. two years ago.

More than a thank you

Mrs. Selby sees a direct correlation between her post at the Girl Scouts and the types of judgments she must make as a board member. "I'm a corporate manager," she said pointedly. "I have a staff of 720 in New York and six branch offices. I have 12 departments and a $12 million budget. We publish three magazines. I'm running a big business here. Avon and RCA are much bigger, but the problems are all the same."

Exxon Corporation's newest board member, Martha Peterson, 57, the president of Barnard College, thinks that it doesn't matter if women go on boards as tokens. What counts is what they do when they get there. "I don't think women should just be grateful they've been asked, and be determined not to rock the boat," she said.

In her experience on the boards of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and the Dry Duck Savings Bank, Miss Peterson has never hesitated to assert her opinions. At one of the first board meetings she ever attended, she made a cogent comment on an esoteric corporate issue and her male colleagues went overboard in their enthusiasm. "I hope the next time I measure up they won't be quite that pleased," she said laughing. "It isn't that big a deal. I've got a brain in my head!"

Martha Peterson and her female counterparts in other corporations are thus discovering that, whether tokens or non-tokens, they can turn the board room into a classroom for corporate chauvinists. By demonstrating that they can make good in a business setting, women directors are teaching men how to overcome the subtle social and psychological barriers which have held women back from top management slots.

Key to success

"It's hard for a man who's been conditioned by his mother, his sister, his wife and his secretary to treat women as peers, observed Cecily Selby, who is herself the mother of three sons. "But if you conduct yourself so that they respect you and enjoy your company, then they find they kind of like it."

Mrs. Selby has a surefire technique for breaking the ice. "I sometimes light up a cigar as a gag, and it relaxes everyone," she said with an impish smile.

An important step in gaining acceptance by men is to get them to regard women at least to some extent as "one of the guys."

"At the outset of a board meeting," explained Martha Peterson, "the chairman may say 'Miss Peterson and gentlemen.' This will go on for half an hour. But when we get to concentrating he'll say 'What do you fellows think about this?' At this point, I realize I must be holding my own because they're temporarily able to forget I'm a woman."

What's to come?

Do these women see their subtle attempts to reeducate their sexist colleagues as the first skirmish in a full-fledged war to change corporate policies toward women?

"I had no intention of walking in as Joan of Arc to change the board room," Pat Harris explained.

On the other hand, female directors often find themselves in a natural position to play an advocate role for women employees in the company. "I'm the one who asks the key questions [about women], whether it's reviewing salary ranges or promotions," said Cecily Selby.

When a list of management promotions was passed around to the directors at one of Pat Harris' board meetings, she looked over the list and said, "I don't see any women!"

The chairman couldn't conceal his annoyance and said crisply, "Pat, if you can find us some, we'll put them on here. We're looking, and we'll talk to you about it."

A board's powers

Policy discussions at the board level are only a first step toward the real source of power—the day-to-day management of the corporation where the policies are implemented. "Except for the ultimate power to change the management, the director's role is essentially advisory," Marina Whitman explains. "Ninety-five percent of the time we are rubber stamps." Women will get significant leverage in the economy when they accede to responsible positions—inside corporations, she said.

Mary Roebling's experience is a good example. The former president and chairman of the board of the Trenton Trust Co., used her post for the mutual benefit of her bank and the women in the community. As a step toward educating women about managing their own money, she set up a women's advisory board made up of the presidents of women's volunteer organizations in Central New Jersey. These women met regularly at the bank for a finance forum, where they learned such things as how to make a will and arrange bank credit.

"We've always been fair to women in extending credit," said Mrs. Roebling, who now serves as chairman of the board of the National State Bank of Elizabeth, N.J.

The female half

Since only a handful of top corporate posts and only a smattering of directorships are held by women, most businessmen are still in elementary school in knowing how to tap the management potential of the female half of the population. Activist groups like NOW are seeing to it that these men get compulsory education. At this year's annual meetings of Xerox Corp., the Gulf Oil Corp., and the Celanese Corp., for example, NOW backed a spate of shareholder resolutions aimed at getting a woman on each of these boards.

"The point of fighting to get women on boards," said NOW's Elizabeth Harris, "is to get male management to focus on women in their companies as employees and as consumers."

"By ignoring women, these businessmen have been ignoring half the brainpower in this country."

Most male board members who have been exposed to this brainpower know exactly what she's talking about.

PARADE OF PROGRESS

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

TURNS TIGHT, TRIMS CLOSE: A new riding mower cuts a 42" swath and, claims the maker, it can turn a complete circle within its own dimensions and mow close to shrubs, posts and ornaments, eliminating most hand trimming. It's also said to have an unusual mower deck mounting that minimizes lawn scalping and gouging. The machine is available in models with manual and electric start. For complete details: Dixon Industries, Dept. PP, Box 494, Colleyville, Kan. 67337. (above left)

A NEW GARDEN HOSE: This one is so light in weight that it floats and so flexible that it coils easily at extremes of temperature. Made of a plastic rubber and nylon-tire-cord reinforced, the hose will not burst, crack or break at temperatures from 40 degrees below zero to 275 above, claims the maker, and is unconditionally guaranteed. A 50' length: $18.95 suggested retail price. Colorite Plastics Co., Dept. PP, Ridgefield, N. J. 07657. (above center)

PREFERRED ANGLE PUTTER: If you can't decide what might be the best technique of putting for you, a new putter could be of interest. It has an adjustable shaft you can vary angularly with the putter blade. $14.95 postpaid. Waukegan Outdoor Products, Dept. PP, 4419 Grand Ave., Gurnee, Ill. 60031. (above right)

FOR YOUR CAR: A new portable emergency flasher signals a highly visible red cross to summon help without getting out of your car. It folds flat for storage in glove compartment, unfolds in seconds, and you can hang it on the side window, outside the car, without opening the door. It starts flashing as soon as you plug it into the cigarette lighter socket. $5.95 in stores. Tedruth Plastics Corp., Dept. PP, Box 607, Farmingdale, N. J. 07727. (above right)

A SCREEN FOR YOUR UMBRELLA: Designed to fit any patio umbrella from 5 to 9 feet in breadth and to extend it by two extra feet, a new nylon mesh screening system can provide pest-free comfort on warm summer evenings. The rot- and mildew-resistant screening is reinforced with vinyl borders, does not interfere with normal opening and closing of the umbrella, and is available in decorative colors. Complete with all hardware and extension rods: $54.95. Bryce-Branton Co., Dept. PP, 690 Southern Ave., Muskegon Mich. (above left)

franks & fixin's

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Hot dogs, a perennial at ball games, picnics and barbecues, can now become a favorite with your family in a new and zesty dish—frankfurter casserole. It is easy to prepare ahead of time—just combine franks with Boston-style beans, chopped onions, green pepper and barbecue sauce—then heat and serve.

Hot biscuits, cole slaw and relishes make delightful accompaniments—and what could be a better finishing touch than cool watermelon for dessert?

ALL-AMERICAN CASSEROLE

- | | |
|---|-----------------------------------|
| 1 lb. frankfurters, cut in 1-inch pieces | 1/2 cup finely chopped onions |
| 2 cans (28 oz. each) Boston-style baked beans | 1/2 cup finely diced green pepper |
| | 2/3 cup bottled barbecue sauce |

Combine all ingredients in bean pot or casserole that holds at least 2 1/2 quarts. Bake at 400 degrees for 35 minutes or until bubbling hot. Makes eight servings. If desired, ring top of casserole with hot baking powder biscuits.

Happiness Is a Stuffed Bobcat

by Veronica Dolan

DENVER, COLO.

A bobcat that once menaced small game in the Colorado Rockies has a new career soothing sick kids at Colorado General Hospital in Denver.

"Robert Bobcat" is just one of many specimens and artifacts the Denver Museum of Natural History transports to the hospital once a week to help children take their minds off their illnesses.

Every Tuesday, Karen Kloverstrom, assistant in the museum's education department, enters the lobby of the hospital to the stares of many adults. For if she doesn't have what appears to be a live bobcat under her arm, she might then be totting a mounted Great Horned Owl, a dinosaur knuckle bone, animal skulls, fossils, the skin of a mountain lion, rocks, small mounted birds, a latex iguana, or a gizzard stone for the children to touch, hold, pet, and learn about.

For one hour, she transforms a sunny, toy-filled playroom, which is available for kids from 3 to 10 years old, into a natural history classroom. The children crowd around, some standing, others in wheelchairs or beds that have been rolled into the room for the day's program.

"It's a good learning and emotional experience," says Miss Betty Frain, children activities coordinator at the hospital and the person who originated the idea for the program. "The kids forget about themselves, their pain, and their loneliness," she adds.

The children come to the playroom on foot or in wheelchairs when necessary. "Bob Bobcat" is their favorite exhibit.

The project has been operating since January, when Betty, impressed by the special museum tours allowing youngsters to handle specimens, asked Ms. Martha Hartmann, curator of education there, to provide portable artifacts.

The exhibits have proved enormously popular with the children, says Miss Frain, as well as with visiting parents, visiting brothers and sisters, nurses aides, and adolescent patients down the hall. One young patient, in fact, was so thrilled at being able to touch and hold the exhibits that he was reluctant to go home after being released from the hospital.

The kids' menagerie

The kids react most enthusiastically to "Robert Bobcat," Mrs. Kloverstrom says, because he looks so ferocious and "they can touch his teeth, his tongue, and his fur and nothing bad happens to them." The children also like to compare the size of their knuckle bones with that of the 80 million-year-old dinosaur and seem fascinated, too, with the mounted birds. Frequently, the youngsters follow up the museum program by researching mammals or birds in the hospital's collection of natural history publications.

The children especially welcome the sight of Mrs. Kloverstrom every Tuesday because they know she's not there to administer shots, tests, or treatments. "They think of her as a nice lady who doesn't have to come to visit them, but wants to come and share some 'neat' things," says Miss Frain.

With the success of the pilot program assured—and reaching many youngsters who have never been in a museum before—Ms. Hartmann looks forward to the time when funds and staff will permit extending the exhibit to other hospitals.

"Its value is obvious," says Betty. "When you are in a hospital you naturally think about being sick; the natural history program helps pull kids out of their depression and gives shy children a chance to get involved with other children."

What Do Many Doctors Use When They Suffer Pain And Itch Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues?

Exclusive formula gives prompt, temporary relief from such pain and itch in many cases. Helps shrink swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues due to inflammation.

News about a most effective medication comes from a recent survey of doctors. Asked what they, themselves, use to relieve such painful symptoms, many of the doctors reporting named one particular medication they either use themselves or in their office practice.

This medication gives prompt relief for hours in many cases from pain and itching of hemorrhoidal tissues. And it actually helps shrink swelling of such tissues caused by infection. Tests by doctors showed this to be true.

The medication used was Preparation H®—the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Just see if doctor tested Preparation H doesn't help you. There's no other formula like it. Ointment or suppositories.

Veterinarians Explain Why

Itching Dogs Need Special Medication

Each year thousands of veterinarians apply 'special' medications to fight dogs' skin infections. In 9 out of 10 cases tested, healing was rapid with a special formula, SULFODENE.

Veterinarians explain dogs' skin is thinner than humans' and germs that attack dogs' skin are different from human bacteria. This special medication, SULFODENE, helps destroy dog germs and effect prompt healing. Just put it on. Won't sting or stain.

Also use SULFODENE SHAMPOO. It's specially medicated to remove scales and help keep your dog's skin healthy. Both available wherever fine pet products are sold.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

POLITICIAN KATIE HANNA

Political Age

A new political star may be rising on the New England horizon in the attractive person of a 20-year-old Mount Holyoke College junior named Katherine M. (Katie) Hanna.

A speech by Katie is credited with swaying the New Hampshire Constitutional Convention last month to support lowering the age of candidates for governor and state legislators to 18. Katie, the youngest delegate at the state convention, which is held once every 10 years, argued that if 18 is old enough to vote, it's old enough to hold the state's highest office. The previous minimum age was 30, and some delegates wanted to reduce it only to 25. After listening to Katie they voted 180-134 to go all the way to 18.

One veteran legislator congratulated her and said: "That was the first time anybody ever changed my vote by speaking on the floor of this chamber."

Katie got to the Constitutional Convention in the first place by upsetting the Mayor of Keene, N.H., in the election of delegates. She campaigned during school vacations and over weekends by knocking on doors and writing letters. The total cost of her campaign, excluding the cost of gas to get her from South Hadley, Mass., where Mount Holyoke is, and Keene, N.H., where she lives, was $60.

Katie, an English major, is an old hand at politics. In 1972 she was a Muskie delegate at the Democratic National Convention, and she's spending the summer as a political interne with New Hampshire Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, a Democrat.

The new 18-year-old age qualification has to be ratified by the state's voters in November. But with Katie Hanna stumping for it, how can it lose?

Tax Advice

For those parents who've coaxed their sons and daughters into acquiring a summer job, here's some tax advice.

No matter how much money your child earns, you may still claim him as a dependent provided that you supply more than half his support, he's under 19 or a full-time student for at least five months of the year.

Furthermore, the child may take an exemption for himself on his tax returns. With the $1300 low-income allowance and the customary $750 deduction, a kid may earn as much as $2050 without owing Uncle Sam any money.

If your son or daughter paid no taxes last year and expects to owe none this year, he or she can escape withholding tax by filing Form W-4E at work.

College Tuition: Charge It

It is now possible for students at such major universities as Ohio State, North Carolina, Alabama, Eastern Michigan and Creighton to pay for college costs with their family's credit cards.

A Way With Animals

Animal training, a hazardous occupation usually associated with tough-looking Germanic ringmasters, is proving to be duck soup for Cheryl Shawver, a blonde Californian.

Cheryl, who's 25, has been working with animals since 17, starting at Jungle Land, a Hollywood outfit that trains animals for the movies. She began with seals, worked her way up through chimps, and finally, at 22, went to Kenya to train lions for the film "Living Free." Returning to America, she was put in charge of elephant training at San Francisco's Marine World.

Now she's been back in Kenya working on NBC's new "Born Free" television series. Among her assignments: to train a wild, year-old baby elephant who arrived in the compound trumpeting and trampling everything in sight. Within five weeks Cheryl had him walking a plank, climbing on wooden tubs, and balancing on two legs.

Her technique is a trade secret, but it included sleeping with him the first few nights after his arrival to gain his confidence. Baby elephants, she explains, need company.

CHERYL SHAWVER: SHE CHARMED A RAGING ELEPHANT.

VERY SPECIAL PEOPLE

The Tocci brothers were two boys down to the sixth rib, but only one below.

Many heads turned when Charles Tripp, "Armless Wonder," and his friend Ed Bowen, "Legless Wonder," rode their bicycle built for two.

Myrtle Corbin had four legs. She is pictured with her husband and one of her five children.

Laloo, from India, had a small twin attached to his breastbone. The twin was dressed as a girl.

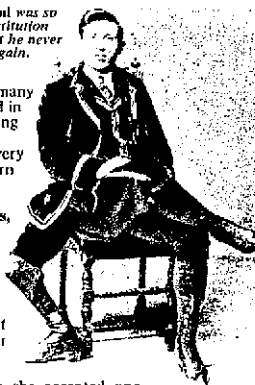

Daughter of a Ringling Brothers fat lady, Baby Ruth Pontico weighed 815 pounds.

The Struggles, Loves, and Triumphs of Human Oddities

As a youngster, Francesco Lentini was so shocked at what he saw in an institution for the severely handicapped that he never complained about his third leg again.

These are just a few of the many "mistakes of Nature" included in Frederick Drimmer's fascinating new book, VERY SPECIAL PEOPLE. What makes them very special is that they were all born "curiosities" and they all lived unusual lives. Like Chang and Eng, the original Siamese twins, who were joined at the chest for life. They married sisters, set up separate homes, and fathered 22 children between them!

Then there was Grace McDaniels, billed as the ugliest woman who ever lived (and her photo proves it). Believe it or not, Grace received several proposals of marriage before she accepted one from a handsome young man. They had a perfectly normal son, who grew up to be his mother's manager!

John Merrick, the grossly deformed "Elephant Man," was deserted by his heartless manager. Befriended by a kindly doctor, Merrick became quite famous and was frequently visited by Royalty.

The stories in this book are true, and we have over 65 rare photos to prove it. Never has one book been so complete. There are chapters on giants, dwarfs, fat people, armless and legless wonders, hermaphrodites (half man, half woman), bearded ladies, and numerous other human oddities.

This is not just a picture book of "freaks." The author treats these people with insight, compassion and the dignity one earns by being born different from everyone else.

VERY SPECIAL PEOPLE will also teach you one of the most important lessons that life has to offer: the incredible ability of man's mind, soul, and spirit to overcome any physical imperfection...no matter how hopeless it may appear. Read this book and you'll never indulge in self-pity again.

Only $5.95, hard covered, 412 pages, 67 photographs.

my favorite jokes

by david brenner

EDITOR'S NOTE: One of the components of David Brenner's comedy is his ready access to the memories of how his earliest images and understandings of things were formed. As an example, he told PARADE, my mother called me when I was in Las Vegas recently. She asked: "What's the weather like?" I said, "Ma, it's great, in the 80's." She said, "David, don't get overheated!" Now, when I was a child I never knew what that meant until one day—and this is such a vivid recollection for me—I was walking down the street and I passed Mr. Cobb. Steam was coming out of his car, and I said, "What happened to your car?" He said, "It got overheated." From then on I really thought if I ran too fast one day the top of my head would open and steam would come out!

Brenner likes to question the way language is used, as in such signs as: "Eyes Examined While You Wait." He even has that one hanging in his apartment. When he's not recollecting, or questioning, Brenner recreates characters from his childhood and family life in South Philadelphia. He's brought his original, impressionistic comedy to the top TV shows, Griffin, Douglas, Carson, and to the large clubs around the country as well as to the coffee houses and improvisational clubs. He is currently touring with Tom Jones.

Here are some of David Brenner's comic perceptions and stories:

People are always telling me, "Have a nice day." Why do they limit me to 24 hours of happiness?

This is a true story about my cousin Shirley. When Shirley was a kid she could never play in our school games, like Hide 'N Go Seek, cause she couldn't find a place big enough to hide in. Except once—she hid inside an empty warehouse. When we found her her legs were sticking out the windows.

When I was a kid I used to get colds a lot. I'd come into the house and try not to show I was sick, else my mother would worry. But every once in awhile I'd sneeze. She'd say accusingly, "All right, David, where did you catch the cold?" "Well, I was on my way to Barry's house, it jumped out of the bushes and caught me by the throat. . . ."

You know how older brothers can be mean. Well, my brother is 15 years older than me—I always thought he was my father—anyway he used to take me to the movies. I loved scary movies like Dracula, Frankenstein, Wolfman. He'd take me to see something like Wolfman and Dracula Meet Frankenstein. There'd be that great scene in the graveyard with chains clanging, dogs barking. All the little kids are shaking and their older brothers would say to them, "Don't be afraid, it's only a movie." My brother would say, "This is not a movie. They live about two doors away from us. They're coming over for dinner tonight."

I saw this sign outside of a hospital: "Hospital Zone, No Barking." It can mean one of two things—there are people in the town who bark, or the dogs there can read.

I like to study insects, it's an interest of mine. And the reason is that if you watch insects you can learn things that no one else in the world knows. For instance, it was through the study of insects that the art of Kung Fu originated. An Oriental warrior was lying on the grass during a lull in the battle. He watched two insects fighting, one was a beetle and the other was a praying mantis, and he noticed the way the praying mantis moved. From watching that movement he developed the art of self-defense called Kung Fu. Now, what I find interesting is, suppose he would have seen two other insects fighting, like a beetle and a cricket. Can you imagine trying to scare someone away—you jump out of an alley, scream and rub your legs together?

The way I made a decision to become a comedian was that I went down to a small island in the West Indies to think it over. Nine people live on this island, eight of them unemployed. The ninth one runs the unemployment office—they all stand outside waiting for him to die. It was there that I decided, I got to make people laugh.

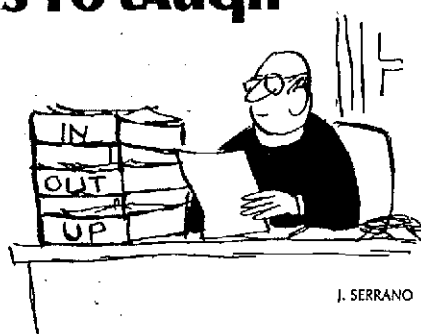

I am truly puzzled by certain expressions. I was walking down the street the other day wearing a brand-new jacket, and a man stopped me and said, "That's a nice jacket. I bet it cost you an arm and a leg." I said, "No, only a kneecap and three toes—I know the fella at the store."

Now my latest discovery about insects is this: Did you ever lie in bed in the summertime, you can't sleep, you toss and turn. Finally, you're just dozing off and you hear something that sounds like it's inside your head but it's really in the room—buzz, buzz, buzz, the mosquito. What I just learned is the mosquito that buzzes is the male mosquito, and the male mosquito does not bite people. The buzz is his mating call. The one that bites us is the female, but the female doesn't have any sound. So this summer if you're lying in bed and you hear a buzz, just roll over and go back to sleep. BUT IF YOU HEAR NOTHING—

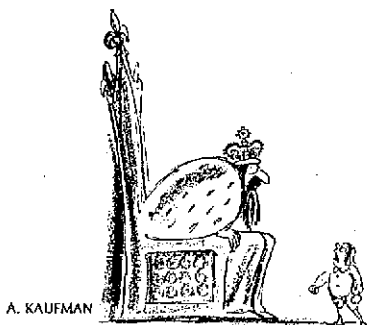

Recently I couldn't find something in my apartment, and I was frustrated. After about an hour I said to myself out loud, "I know when I find it it's going to be in the last place I looked." Of course! Who in the heck finds something and keeps looking for it?

I came home one day and I wanted sneakers, or as we call them in Philadelphia, sneaks. I said, "Ma, Tony's got sneakers." She said "All right, you want sneakers, you can have sneakers." I couldn't believe it. I said, you're really going to let me have sneakers?" She said, "Yeah, if you want to look like Quasimodo, go ahead." "What," I asked, "does the Hunchback of Notre Dame have to do with sneakers?" She said, "How do you think he got that way—I'll tell you. When Quasi was a little boy he wore sneakers. He didn't listen to his mother, and the pain in his feet made him bend all the time." One day I went to the movies with my friend. I was 8 years old, and Charles Laughton was starring in the Hunchback of Notre Dame. I sat there saying, "Wait till you see the part where he puts on the sneakers."

it's to laugh

YOU WON'T GET BORED WITH OUR BOARD.

GET THE FUN AND GAMES BOARD FROM KOOL-AID.

It's a game board. A drawing board. A memo board. All on one board from Kool-Aid® Brand Soft Drink Mix. You can play Dots and Tic-Tac-Toe. Or write messages. Or draw pictures. Over and over again. Because the special marking pen has special erasable ink. A piece of cloth or tissue wipes the ink right off the board. So if you lose at Tic-Tac-Toe, erase it. If you draw an elephant that looks like a rabbit with a big nose, erase it. And start all over again. As long as you use your imagination, you'll never get bored.

For each item ordered mail in: any 20 Kool-Aid® envelope tops, or the Net Weight statements from the bottom of the labels of any 2 new 10-quart canisters, or the price marks from any 4 Kool-Pops® packages.
